and out of nearly one hundred men, only two voted against it. These two were Ulster Nationalists, who felt bound in consistency to repeat the protest of last week's convention. Since the decision of the convention, many old opponents frankly expressed their gratification to Mr. Devlin at his victory, as being the best thing for Ireland. The other enemy front in London has gradually come to its senses under slashing attacks by Press Tory as well as Liberal, questioning the patriotism in trying to keep up the quarrel between England and Ireland in the greatest moment of the war, and to-day I feel more confident than ever that the settlement is safe from all enemies and will pass into law.

Strange Fables.

I thought there could be nothing new to me in Irish psychology, but I was mistaken. I found, when I paid a recent visit to that country. I was lucky enough to spend an evening with an excellent and broad-minded priest who has been with the rebels during some of the worst hours of the rebellion, and who had a very dramatic gift of narrative. There were all kinds of scenes, some tragic, some comic, after the Irish fashion of commingling these things. It was pathetic to realize the strange fables that appealed to the minds of some of the leaders in this rebellion. Some of them were quite certain that while they were locked up in the post office, all England was rising round them; and that tens of thousands of Irishmen had taken the field in almost every part of the country. There were equally wild stories received with the utmost confidence of what the Germans were doing. Young Plunket, who was shot, declared solemnly that as the rebels had held territory for three days they were entitled to be treated as belligerents, and even to take their places at the peace congress, which is to assemble after the war; and to demand recognition for the Irish republic. Of course, a large number of the rebels inside the post office were mere boys, and had no more idea when they started out for the march of Easter Monday, and when they asked their mothers to have a good dinner ready when they returned, that they were going into a rebellion. But they found themselves in it; and then acquitted themselves with bravery and devotion. There were at least a dozen ladies in the building, who did ambulance work, and who were as fearless as the men.

Another Feature.

Another curious feature in the psychology of this strong movement was the vein of intense religious fervour that ran through it. Pearse was a man who went to mass daily and to the sacrament at least once a week and was known to be fanatical by his friends and acquaintances for years. He used to say to himself that he thought it worth dying to give Ireland a soul. I am unable to understand what he quite meant, for Ireland never quite lost her soul, and has been regaining it more than ever if she ever did lose it; has been regaining it more than ever during the last quarter of a century when her tenantry have raised from rags, pauperism, rackrents, enforced emigration, wretched houses and daily servitude, to the good clothes, the comparative comfort, the excellent houses and the complete ownership of their lands which they enjoy to-day.

What, however, has turned the tide so much in favour of the Sinn Feiners is undoubtedly the executions. Even a dull military man ought to have known that any execution is a matter of policy as well as of strict legality. The execution of Miss Cavel was possibly quite lawful, according to the German military code; but nevertheless it was one of the worst blunders of the Germans during the war. They all died well; some of them indeed almost sought death, as for instance, the O'Rehilly, who was strongly against rebellion, and Major McBride, who was not a member of the Sinn Fein organization.

Wholesale Arrests.

To all these causes of exasperation, the military authorities with profound stupidity, harried the country, arrested men wholesale, in the middle of the night sometimes, and often the arrested men who were ardent supporters of Mr. Redmond and accordingly entirely opposed to Sinn Feinism. And thus came that curious state of psychology to which I have alluded. Sinn Fein leaders who have been executed were regarded first simply as crazy men who had struck a deadly blow at the hopes of Ireland; then they began to be regarded as patriots and martyrs, for they had died for their convictions and for what they thought were the interests of Ireland. But now among a certain portion of the population, some of them have passed into the ranks of the Saints, and strange, weird stories are being told of those who pleaded successfully for their intercession to obtain some favour from Heaven.

Thus it came to pass that events of the rebellion itself sank into insignificance before the consequence of the military measures by which it was put down. When the Sinn Feiner leaders had failed to do, during all their years of work, the military authorities succeeded in doing in the course of two weeks, and for every Sinn Fein recruit that the Sinn Fein leaders made, the military authorities made thousands.

Thus was created the atmosphere in which the settlement proposed by Lloyd George had to be discussed. It was a very unfavourable atmosphere and accounts for the difficulties by which Mr. Redmond and his colleagues were confronted and for many other recent events.

Executions Went On.

The tyranny—I may the travesty—of the situation was increased by the fact that dimly the civilian authorities in England and indeed in Ireland also were as conscious as any Irish Nationalists of all the mischief these proceedings were doing. It is an open secret that Lord Wimborne, who was then Lord Lieutenant, was against any further executions for the first group. Lady Wimborne is one of the most popular vicereines that ever was in Ireland, and deservedly so. Beautiful and sweet of face, beautiful in figure, with a heart of the greatest tenderness and sympathy instinctively loving the Irish people, she joined her woman's tears to her husband's appeals, but the executions went on. It is impossible to say whether there would not have been more if Mr. Asquith had not gone to Ireland and taken control. He came too late to prevent some of them. Other members of the government in London felt the same thing, but it is not easy from London to interrupt the actions of soldiers who are engaged putting down a rebellion; and so this great gulf was created between the English and the Irish people and the work of reconciliation between them was interrupted for a long time.

Is it not like the whole history of the two countries, that the impatience and wildness of the one nation should dash hope from Ireland's lips on the one side, and that English want of comprehending Irish feeling on the other, should drive the two peoples apart? Of course the moral to me is quite plain and except for their exasperation the Irish people would universally have recognized this too; which is, that the more oppressive, the more stupid, the regime of English militarism showed itself to be once more in Ireland, the greater was the argument in favour of accepting the liberations of five-sixths of Ireland from such things forever. But people don't reason when they are angry.

TO EXPLOIT HOLY LAND.

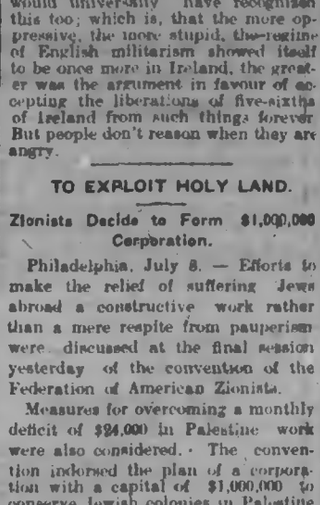
Philadelphia, July 8. — Efforts to make the relief of suffering Jews abroad a constructive work rather than a mere respite from pauperism were discussed at the final session yesterday of the convention of the Federation of American Zionists.

Measures for overcoming a monthly deficit of $24,000 in Palestine work were also considered. The convention indorsed the plan of a corporation with a capital of $1,000,000 to conserve Jewish colonies in Palestine and develop the Holy Land on a business basis. The expenditure of $25,000 annually for maintenance of a hospital unit in Palestine also was approved.



Coop and Lent's Circus Will Exhibit at Peterboro

Announcement was made to-day that Coop and Lent's new united monster shows, Three Ring Circus, Menagerie Museum and Hippodrome is coming to the city, July 20th.

It is claimed that Coop and Lent's new organization is one of the strongest contenders for public favor in the Circus world this season, and in size and dimensions fully compares with the biggest and best on the road.

There are three distinct circus company's filling three rings, two stages and the dome of the most capacious tent seum.

On the Hippodrome track which is a fourth of a mile in circumference, races and speed contests of almost every description will be presented, many of them unique in the annals of the great courses and arenas of modern times.

"WOMEN FOOTMEN" NOW.

Dr. Ingram Prophesies Passing of Male Drapery Clerks.

London, July 8.—"Does anyone suppose that after the war, linen drapers' assistants will return to the shops and be content to hand laces to ladies again?" The Bishop of London asked the question yesterday at the Church House, Westminster, and answered it with an emphatic "Of course not."

He hoped they had seen the last of men in the prime of life fingering lace in the shops of London, and of footmen in great houses. He had tried women during the war, and they were much better. He hoped, in other words, that we should see men who had learned to live men's lives in these glorious days refusing to live anything but a man's life after the war.

Every third garage in Canada is a Ford sales and service station

Service is only important to you when you need it—then it is very important.

Even the best of motor cars, sometimes require attention. If you are a Ford owner, a third of Canada's garages assure you this attention when you need it—without inconvenience and at a minimum of expense.

Every one of the five hundred and fifty Ford Dealers in Canada carries a complete stock of Ford spare parts and is competent to make repairs and adjustments when occasion demands.

No matter where you go, Ford Service is never out of reach if you drive a Ford.

Cobb Threatens to Quit Game; Fans Abuse Him

CHICAGO, July 7.—Goaded beyond what he considers endurance by jeers of the fans who used to cheer him, Ty Cobb is contemplating quitting baseball, according to people near him. What he has in mind this move is well known to his team-mates and, in addition, he has so expressed himself to at least one Chicago player.

In the early innings of Sunday's game, when the fans were "on him" and before the bat-throwing incident, Cobb said to a White Sox player:

"Well, I guess I'm done."

In St. Louis last week he gave out an interview saying he would no longer tolerate the hootings of the multitude. As he knows there is no way of stopping the fans saying what they please, it is believed he had retirement in mind.

"We would not be surprised any day to hear that Ty had gone back South," remarked one of the Detroit players the other day. "The fans all over the circuit have been riding him and he is growing morose. He never could stand criticism."

REVISING FUSE REPORT.

Ottawa, July 8.—Uncertainty prevails as to when the report of the Meredith-Duff Commission in the fuse investigation will make its appearance. It is very voluminous and is being printed as prepared. More or less revision, it is understood, is taking place. The belief is pretty general that in the main the report will reflect in detail the observations made briefly from time to time by the judges during the inquiry's progress.

Girl-Man Is Given a Long Term Sentence

New York, July 8.—Regardless of how very much like "real ladies" female impersonators of the stage may make themselves appear, more than a score of detectives and certain police magistrates in New York city are quite ready to affirm that the most astonishing success achieved in this direction in real life belongs to Charles Miller, 28 years old, known to the authorities since 1912 as Margie McHale, May Miller and Clara Smith.

He was sentenced to an indeterminate term with a maximum of two years in the work house on a charge of disorderly conduct by Magistrate Murphy in the Yorkville court. He has been arrested three times by detectives on the streets when in full female attire—invariably very fashionable and costly—in the full belief that he was a girl. Three magistrates before whom he has been arraigned proved none the wiser.

On his first sentence, which was as "Margie McHale," he served five days and emerged from the woman's side of the workhouse still "Margie McHale." Again he was passed into the Tombs woman's side, all unsuspected, and a matron of the Women's Night court was discharged because she did not discover his sex. Once more he got over to Blackwell's Island, and it was 48 hours before it was found that "Clara Smith" could if "she" would, grow a full, fine set of chin whiskers.

Miller had black hair, "all his own" that fell to his waist. He sobbed when it was ruthlessly snipped off in the men's part of Blackwell's Island prison some two years ago.

A mob of men and boys were ready to set upon Lieutenant Duffy violently at Second avenue and Nineteenth street on the night of May 19th, when he arrested Miller. The man was attired in silks and lingerie, high-heeled shoes, and a dashing, broad-brimmed straw hat. His arm was held by an elderly intoxicated man, who was showing the supposed young woman gallant attention.

Duffy, discovering the masquerader, was none too gentle in dragging him off in the direction of a patrol box, and the crowd yelled its protests until Duffy yanked off the prisoner's hat and wig and invited some of the crowd to pass their hands over the fair one's sand-papery chin. Then the mob dispersed with laughter.

In the Yorkville prison "May" Miller was rudely stripped of all finery, except silk stockings and high heeled shoes, and garbed in a rough woollen shirt and pair stained overalls. Then up by one of the keepers. But mysterious friends had meanwhile sent a suit case to the jail so that when the strange prisoner was arraigned he wore a blue Norfolk suit of costly material, a blue striped silk shirt, a green silk scarf and the very latest in soft silk collars.

Except for his robust beard it would be hard to regard Miller otherwise than as one of the opposite sex, even in trousers. He has large eyes and a small nose and mouth and his black hair has grown long and wavy again. His hands are very small and womanish and the No. 2 high-heeled shoes he wore did not cramp his feet. A diamond solitaire flashed on his left hand, a wedding ring was on the third finger of his right.

The man's speech indicates a degree of culture and on every occasion when he has been in the hands of the police he has finally refused to tell anything of his antecedents, except once, when he declared he was born on the Pacific coast.

He told Magistrate Murphy what he has told other judges—that he was the youngest of a family of six boys; that his mother had longed always to have a daughter, and from his birth had taken the obession that he was a girl, addressed him and treated him as one, made him dress as one, and in the end he asserted he found himself preferring to dress and act as one.

Every time after he had served a sentence, he said, he had made an effort to live in man's attire and in a man's way, but had found it impossible to obtain employment, whereas whenever he chose to don women's clothing he found no difficulty in getting positions in choruses and had, he said, taken with success, soubrette parts in musical comedies and in vaudeville.

On his record of incorrigibility in female masquerading Magistrate Murphy imposed a sentence of unusual severity in a disorderly conduct charge.

Constantine and Skouloudis Prepared to Resist the Allies.

LONDON, July 8.—The Morning Post's Athens correspondent, in a mailed despatch, referring to the threat uttered by M. Skouloudis, then Premier, when interviewed by an Italian correspondent, to resist the demand of the Allies, says:

"This resistance was actually prepared with the King's personal sanction, and on the day the ultimatum was handed in the same Government which at one p.m. returned this document to the Allied legations on the ground that the Cabinet had already resigned, and therefore was no longer competent to receive it at two p.m. ordered out a force of infantry and artillery to repel an Anglo-French landing at Phalerum and Piraeus.

It is difficult to imagine a more demented act with troops in the offing and ships ready to support their landing. Fortunately for King Constantine and his dynasty, M. Zaimis, on the one hand, and Prince Nicholas on the other, persuaded his Majesty in time to abandon this senseless plan of his 'responsible' advisers, and give his unconditional acceptance of the Allies' demands."

ATTEMPT AT JAIL BREAKING IS FRUSTRATED

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 8.—A daring attempt at wholesale jail delivery from the Tombs, New York's famous prison, was blocked by Warden Hanley to-day, after a "trusty" had given him information of the plot.

Two federal prisoners, charged with a $500,000 registered mail robbery in Jersey City, were placed in solitary confinement after they had admitted important details of the plot. The Warden discovered this morning that the bars in the cells occupied by the two federal prisoners had been sawed and many other elaborate preparations been made.

The jail delivery was to have been attempted Sunday night. Confederates waiting in an auto were arranged for.

Thomas Campbell, brother of the groom acted as best man. The bride and groom left later for Peterborough.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT CRAPP

The death occurred at Nicholl's Hospital yesterday morning of Mrs. Robert Crapp, a life long resident of the township of Harvey. The deceased lady was sixty-six years of age and is survived by a sorrowing husband, three daughters, Mrs. Elijah Windover of Hall's Bridge, Mrs. Edward Garbe, Toronto, and Mrs. A. B. Neil, Chemong.

Three sons, Messrs. James H. of Smith, Adolphus of Warsaw, and Mr. John D. at home. The late Mrs. Crapp was in religion an Anglican. The funeral will leave the residence of her sister, Mrs. Lenox Rosewood, 338 George street, on Monday July 10th and proceed to Rae's cemetery for interment. Rev. Mr. White, will conduct the ceremonies.

WILLIAM COX

The death occurred this morning at 4 o'clock of one of our Lakefield's oldest, best known and most highly respected residents, Mr William Cox. Deceased had been ill for some months and his end was not unexpected. The late Mr. Cox was born in Peace, seventy years ago, but removed to Lakefield quite a number of years ago, where he has resided ever since. He is survived by a wife and several children. The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at three o'clock to Rae's cemetery. Service at the house at 3.30.

MRS. JOSEPH WILSON.

The body of Mrs. Joe Wilson, daughter of the late Frederick Guerin, will arrive in Peterborough early Sunday morning at 1.30 o'clock and will be removed to the home of Mr. Jos. Bevey, Lansdowne street. The deceased who passed away in Pittsburg, Pa., on Thursday was well and favorably known in Peterborough, having resided in the south end. It was not known this afternoon whether the funeral would be held on Sunday or Monday.

BIRTHS.

TULLY—At Belleville General Hospital, June 15, to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tully, a daughter.

British Troops Are Improving Positions

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—(Bulletin 2 p.m.)—British troops engaged in the great Allied offensive spent the night improving their positions north of the Somme, rain having interferred with operations, General Haig reported this afternoon.

Minor Engagements on British Front

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—General Haig's report this afternoon announced minor engagements on the British front extending northward from the Ancre. At Gommecourt, the scene of heavy fighting at the opening of the Allied drive, the British guns and trench mortars bombarded the enemy trenches. Northeast of Hulluch, a British mine destroyed an enemy gallery. British aeroplanes gave valuable service yesterday, despite the unfavourable weather.

Blockade Will Be Tightened at Once

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 8.—The Government to-day issued on order-in-council announcing new principles which the blockade of Germany will be tightened at once.

Austrians Admit Another Retirement

Examiner Special:

VIENNA, via Berlin, July 8.—Austrian troops have retreated from their advanced lines in the bend of the Styr River in Volhynia before greatly superior Russian forces, said an official statement from the Austrian War Office to-day.

MORE GAINS FOR RUSSIAN TROOPS

PETROGRAD (Bulletin), July 8.—Russian troops have captured from the Germans the villages of Doljitia, Cruziatin and Manevitschi, in the region of Kolki, in hot bayonet fighting, the War Office announced to-day.

EGGS AT 29c MOVED SLOWLY THIS MORNING

Chickens sold at 65 cents a pair up to $1.25, according to their size, on the market this morning. Ducks were offered at 75 cents a pair. They appeared but little bigger than robins. Eggs, at 29 cents a dozen, indicated a considerable advance over last week's quotation. It was a jump of from five to seven cents a dozen over a week ago. Butter was down to 26 cents, with a considerable quantity offering. Also apparent was the fact that the surplus of eggs scarcely warranted a 29-cent price. At 11 o'clock they were not moving any too freely, and there were then quite a few baskets to be emptied. However, the wholesale buyers who loofed in the offing probably cleaned up at their own prices.

VICTIM OF A LINEN SHOWER

A surprise party was held on Thursday evening, July 6th, at the home of Miss Myrtle Napp, Stewart Street, in honour of Miss Tressa Rex, when she received many useful linen articles. The evening was spent in games, including a mock marriage, put on by the girls, which caused much amusement. Before leaving Mrs. Napp served a beautiful supper, which added greatly to the evening's fun.

FARM LABOUR IS SCARCE

With the advent of the haying season, farmers throughout the county are beginning to feel the scarcity of farm labour. Many farmers have managed to wiggle through so far with the aid of a small boy. The latter finds it difficult to fill a man's place in the hayfield, especially in cases where the farmer is devoid of hay loaders and other labour-saving devices.

PASTOR RUSSELL TAKEN OFF TRAIN

Turned Back From Canada Because of Anti-recruiting Utterances.

WINNIPEG, July 8.—Pastor Russell the Brooklyn divine, who was scheduled to speak last evening at a local theatre, was taken off the train at Gretna, Manitoba yesterday at the request of the immigration authorities at Ottawa, and was sent back across the border.

Pastor Russell was en route to Winnipeg from St. Paul, Minn. In eastern Canada he had been making speeches harmful to recruiting.

Funeral of Late Gunner Elliott

The body of the late Russel Elliott who was accidentally shot at Barriefield, arrived in the city this morning on the 8.20 Grand Trunk train, and was removed to the residence of his father, 195 Reid Street, thence to 11.27 C.P.R. train to Norwood, where interment took place this morning.

Lieut. Thompson, Sergt. Patterson, and a number of other members of the 74th Battery formed the escort. Lance-Corp. L. Elliott and Pte. Gordon Elliott, brothers of the deceased, accompanied the remains from Kingston.

ARE EVADING THE LAW.

Provincial Treasurer May Prosecute Owners of Theatres.

Officers of the Provincial Treasurer's Department have been informed that certain theatres are not complying with the war tax requirements, and that methods are being employed which result in the Treasury being defrauded. It is said that the theatres in question resell war tax tickets instead of chopping them up, and that thus they make a profit at the expense of the province. Investigations are being carried on, and prosecutions may follow.

VIGIL ON HELIGOLAND.

German Sailors Watching for British Fleet Lead Monotonous Life.

Life spent on the island of Heligoland watching and waiting for an attack by the British fleet, is not very full of excitement, according to the following sketch, which appeared in a recent issue of the Cologne Gazette:

"Here on this steep island, which one can walk around in an hour, our brave bluejackets have now been sitting for nearly two years in readiness for battle. The men who serve here do not have many experiences. High above them stretches the broad dome of heaven, and at their feet is the sea. Far behind one sees perhaps a patch of smoke which comes from passing steamers or warships. The land is far away.

"But in spite of all their loneliness the bluejackets are happy on Heligoland's soil. They know what a weight of responsibility rests upon every one of them, if the serious hour should ever come and Britain's flag should attempt to approach our coasts. Then the war watch of Heligoland will spring to the guns and the thunder will echo from the cliffs. The wind will carry the sound across the sea to the mainland as a greeting from the lonely men who out here on the little island fight for the great German home."

TAKE NO RISKS

GLASSES that you buy ready made, trying them on till you get a pair with which you can see fairly well, are a positive danger. Both lenses being equal strength, and very few people having eyes of equal power, one eye is going to be injured by using a lens of wrong focus. It doesn't pay to take such a serious chance. Dr. Fowler's "Pebio" glasses are guaranteed correct for both eyes.

Manvers Girls Played Baseball

Baseball was the main attraction at the garden party held at Janetville Fridy evening under the auspices of the Presbyterian church. A game between the girls' team of Janetville and a feminine nine from Bthany resulted in victory for the Bethany aggregation by the large score of 22 to 17.

The Lindsay Citizens' Band furnished the music for the garden party and the goodly sum of $175 was realised.

What the Doctor Asked

One of the questions the examining physician for life insurance is apt to ask the applicant whose heart is skipping beats or is fluttery is—

"Do you use tea or coffee?"

The reason tea and coffee are suspected is because the physician knows that the drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee disturbs the nervous system, races the heart, and is responsible besides for conditions which often becomes serious.

It's a good thing to stop when one reaches the danger zone. It is better still, to safeguard health and avoid trouble by quitting both tea and coffee and using the famous pure food-drink

POSTUM

This delightful beverage is made of finest wheat, roasted with a little wholesome molasses, and while it has a delightful snappy taste, it contains only the nourishing goodness of the grain—no drug—no harmful ingredient whatever.

There are two forms of Postum. The original Postum Cereal must be boiled. Instant Postum—a soluble powder—is made in the cup with hot water—instantly! Both forms are equal in flavor, and cost about the same per cup.

Thousands of people have found the way to renewed health by a change from tea or coffee to Postum. There are no tea or coffee "questions" in Postum.

Missing Germans Not Located Yet

BELIEVED THEY WERE SEEN IN OSWEGO — ONE OF ESCAPING TRIO CANNOT BE RETURNED.

KINGSTON, July 10.—As far as can be learned there is no trace of the three German prisoners who made their get-away from Fort Henry, although the authorities are still in touch with the American police in an attempt to locate them. A despatch from Watertown stated that the police there were exerting very special efforts to locate the fugitives.

SEEN AT OSWEGO.

From Oswego comes the information that on Manday a small naptha launch, thought to be from Chaumont, operated by a man named Cook, who had a strong German accent, landed three men near the E. L. and W. trestle work, and afterwards took a supply of naptha for the return trip to Chaumont. It is believed in Oswego that the three men were the men sought for by local military authorities. If they were the feeling at Oswego is that they would at once recive help to escape inland.

700 GRAVEYARDS IN GALICIA.

Thousands of Soldiers Buried on the Scenes of Great Battles.

Under the caption, "More Than 700 Graveyards," the Berliner Vorwaerts recently published an article referring to the battlefields of Galicia and to the efforts being made by the Austrian authorities to bring some sort of order into the chaotic conditions prevailing in the military burying grounds scattered over the province.

The writer, according to a summary of the article printed by the London Daily Chronicle, estimates that between the town of Gorlice and the heights of Tarnowo no fewer than 418 graveyards have been cleared of their unsightly surroundings, and says that wherever possible natural beauties in the landscape have been utilised to lend dignity to the enormous cemeteries.

All along the Dunajec graveyards are thickly strewn over the entire countryside. Russians, Austrians, Germans, Hungarians to the number of 40,000 are buried in the cared-for-graveyards, a number which does not include those buried in masses in one grave. In West Galicia alone about 600 graveyards exist, and in other parts more than 100. From the Dunajec eastward the multitudinous graves of the Russians are seen stretching away into the eastern plains, an awful record of the death grapple of last year.

Coop and Lent's Circus Will Exhibit at Peterboro

Arrangements have been consummated for the appearance of Coop and Leut's New United Monster Shows in Peterborough on July 20th.

This aggregation is entirely new, and on its inaugural tour this year. The projectors of the big show are descendants of the original "Coop and Lent" famous Circus owners of a generation ago.

The past year has been spent in assembling and perfecting the new organization and represents an enormous outlay of money in securing many features that are entirely new to the Circus field.

The arenic performances are given in three circus rings, two elevated stages and a large hippodrome track.

It is claimed that the Menagrie contains one of the largest and most diversified collections of wild animals ever presented with a travelling Zoo. Two trains of double length cars are used in transporting the big exhibition.

Excess of Deposits Over Withdrawals $625,000,000 and Capital Increase $312,500,000.

THE HAGUE, via London, July 10.—According to the Sparkasse, the organ of the German savings banks, new savings accounts during the second year of the war have increased in Germany as never before during times of peace. Statistics from the big cities and the industrial regions alone indicate an increase of 288,000 accounts and a total of 6,280,000 accounts. The excess of deposits over withdrawals is 2,500,000,000 marks ($625,000,000). The total increase in the capital of savings banks is 1,250,000,000 marks ($312,500,000).

To supply much needed fibrous materials 56,000 acres in Germany this year have been sowed to flax. The society for flax growing announces excellent promise for the crop.

To avoid the long queues of meat ticket holders that have blocked the streets outside the butcher shops butchers in German cities are issuing, beginning July 4, numbered tickets. Announcement will be made on the day before of the numbers which entitle their holders to make purchases. Circulars containing twelve elaborate paragraphs have been issued instructing customers how to proceed.

GUARDSMEN 'DOCKED' BY POST OFFICE FOR HASTENING TO COLOURS.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The record for poor payment for patriotic sacrifice goes to the United States Government, according to Police Chief Darbell, of Orange, N.J.

Chief Darbell is investigating the circumstances of families left behind by National Guardsmen. Yesterday he found that an employe of the Orange post office, a corporal who left a wife and child behind, was "docked" a quarter day's pay for leaving his job earlier than usual so he could start with the Fifth Regiment.

A boy was visiting another boy, and as they were going to bed the little host knelt to say his prayers.

"I never say my prayers when I am home," said the visitor.

"That's all right," said the other boy. "You better say them here. This is a folding bed."

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

For further particulars apply to W. B. Warne, druggist, city agent, or write to R. L. Fairbairn, general passenger agent, 69 King street east, Toronto, Ont. 6d-5

BULGARS WERE CAUGHT.

Oakville, July 7.Four out of one hundred Bulgarians now on highway work have escaped, but were caught again.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Busy Life of British Tars

"The men who will not fail us," is Mr. Hughes's apt description of the personnel of the Grand Fleet. And the country's opinion of the navy could not have been embodied in a happier phrase.

Like all others who have seen them "on their job," Mr. Hughes was impressed by the pink-of-condition, ready-for-anything appearance of Admiral Jellicoe's men. Well may their country be proud of them, for a long period of never-slackening training has made them into the most efficient ship's companies that ever manned a fleet. This is no bombast, only a simple, all-important truth.

Some may think the waiting game an easy one to play. But the Grand Fleet knows differently. They find no easy features in it. Aboard all ships the day's work begins early. "Hands" are roused at 5.30 a.m. by the ship's corporals, who go along the mess decks calling the men to "rise and shine." Out tumble the sailors who, after stowing away their hammocks, have cocoa served to them, and then "scrubbing down" begins.

There are people who believe that a bluejacket spends a lot of his time cleaning "brightwork". As a matter of fact, "spit and polish" no longer holds sway in the navy. Scrupulous cleanliness will always remain a tradition of the service, but his majesty's ships are now gray, grim, and business-like from truck to keelson. One finds in them no gleaming brass or polished gun muzzles to catch the light and thus help an enemy's "spotters."

DRILL AT SEVEN BELLS

Until breakfast time (8 a.m.) the sailors are kept busy cleaning up various parts of the ship, and, of course, there are officers looking after them. When the sentry on the half-deck strikes seven bells in the morning watch (7.30 a.m.) the midshipmen and other junior officers go to drill. This may be small-arm exercise under the instructional gunnery officer or gymnastic training under the direction of the physcial training instructor—otherwise "the india-rubber man." When 8 o'clock arrives the colours are hoisted with what would seem quite a pretty little ceremony to a landsman, although to naval men it is only a part of the day's routine. As the ensign is run up o the jackstaff the band plays the national anthem, while every officer and man turns aft and salutes the colours.

For breakfast, three-quarters of an hour is allowed. Mess-decks, flats, and the like are then cleared up and at 9 o'clock the ship's company goes to "divisions." Here they are inspected by the officers in charge of the various divisions. After these officers have made their reports to the captain the ship's company musters on the quarter-deck for prayers. "Off caps," says the commander when prayers are over, whereupon the men replace their caps and face forward. The band strikes up a lively tune and to the accompaniment of this, officers and men 'double' briskly around the decks, usually with the commander at their head. 'Double' is navy for 'run,' and, as a modern warship may be anything up to two hundred yards in length, the crew cover quite a respectable distance during their trot round her decks.

On the quarter-deck they come to a halt again and are then told off to various duties. Some go to gunnery instruction, others to torpedo drill and so on, while the boys go to school or, rather, half of them do; the other half are at naval training. In the afternoon there is a change round, so that the boys have both book learning and sea lore drilled into them in the course of the day.

EDUCATION IS ESSENTIAL.

The modern bluejacket must be a well-educated man, particularly if he wants to obtain promotion, and in the course of his service life he may have to acquire something more than a nodding acquaintance with certain sciences. In order that he may have educational opportunities, the admiralty has arranged for all first-class ships to be supplied with schoolmasters. Where no schoolmaster is borne a qualified chief petty officer acts in this capacity. In the navy the boy becomes a man at eighteen and is rated ordinary seaman. A few "special" boys reach official manhood at seventeen and a half.

Bluejackets have to "keep their hands in" at many things, and the day's routine must be varied so as to give practice in all these. Instead of gunnery and other armament drill the forenoon may be devoted to "exercising stations". Naval organization has become a fine art. Only those familiar with the complexity of warship life know how skilfully matters are arranged, and what a number of intricate little items of mechanism must be devised to make the machine work smoothly. Every possible contingency is provided against, and there are 'stations' for each one. By means of these each officer and man gets taught his place and his job whatever emergency may arise; and as soon as the necessity comes along he goes straight to his post. This explains why it is that our bluejackets show such admirable self-control and coolness when disaster overtakes their ship.

Aboard a warship there are "action stations," "fire stations," "collision stations," and "stations" for "abandoning ship" (which means taking to the boats when the ship is sinking). Practicing these comes in the day's work. Being innately conservative despite its progressiveness in matters that are essential, the navy adheres to the old customs where these do not militate against efficiency. Thus everyone in a ship salutes the quarter-deck as he steps on it—a custom which originated centuries ago in sailors crossing themselves before the crucifix that used to stand in this part of the ship.

DRILL IN GERMAN SCHOOLS.

Teachers Indorse It and Ask For Uniform Training System.

In connection with the plans being made in Germany for military training in the schools, the following resolutions were adopted by the annual conference of German teachers recently held in Eisenach:

"The military authorities should establish a uniform system of preliminary training to begin at the age of 17.

"The educational authorities should be required to establish a uniform system of physical training in the elementary and continuation schools.

"An afternoon for games once a week should be introduced in the elementary school, and the customary gymnastics should be supplemented by compulsory swimming, walking, skating and various games.

"The obligation to attend continuation schools should be made universal, and gymnastics and the various games and exercises recommended for elementary schools should be made compulsory in all continuation schools, one afternoon a week being set free for games."

HOLD TEN FOR DEATH OF GIRL FOUND IN AUTO

Boston, July 8.—With ten men and women already under arrest or detained at both Salem and Boston police stations, more arrests are expected to be made in connection with the death of Margaret Ward, as the result of illegal medical practice.

The police are looking for two women who they believe can throw light on the case and also three doctors, one of whom they suspect of performing the operation that cost the girl's life.

When the autopsy was performed, showing the exact cause of the death, the police declared that they secured information which places the time of the girl's death about 4 a.m. Tuesday. The six men arrested in the death car claim they were talking to the woman during the trip in the car from Roxbury to Salem which was between midnight and 4 a.m. Wednesday.

The arrest of the six men early on Wednesday morning, with the dead woman lying on the floor of the tonneau of the car, and the detention of several inmates of the Warren street house in Roxbury, from which it is claimed the woman was taken, has caused a sensation.

That Police Sergeant Duffee knew that his sister-in-law was in serious trouble became certain when it was learned that he had secured a leave of absence because of "trouble in his wife's family." It is believed that Sergeant Duffee then went home to await the arrival of the automobile, to bring in his sister-in-law "seriously ill."

About 4 o'clock on Wednesday morning the car arrived outside his home, and when he discovered her dead he drew his revolver and placed the occupants of the car under arrest.

At the station the prisoners gave their names as Charles R. O'Connell, 40, unmarried, Peabody, attorney and former representative; James O'Connell, 41, single, of Lynn, brother of Charles; George A. A. Bardwell, 25, sailor, attached to the U. S. S. Kearsarge, relative of the O'Connells; Daniel Dineen, 37, single, of Salem; Wm. Conlin, 28, single, Salem, believed to have been keeping company with Miss Ward; Thomas J. Sexton, 41, single, of Peabody, driver of the "death car".

BRITISH GOLF PARALYZED.

Government Has Requested Sacrifice of Famous Links.

Since the European war began the famous golf courses of England and Scotland have undergone many "ordeals by fire." Old men, women, girls, and cripples have been used as caddies for players who were either past or under the military age. Some farmers' children have been forced to close up their contracts entirely because of lack of funds for the upkeep of the courses and the links, while others have rented out the privilege of grazing on the greens which were formerly devoted to the travail of the hobnailed golfing shoe.

The latest exercise that the clubs have been called upon to make has been to let the grass grow to maturity so that it may be harvested for military purposes. This has been requested in a circular issued by the Army Forage Department, and it has met with a ready response. It is expected that the military authorities will not object to leaving [illegible] closely cropped turf to permit the royal and ancient game under restricted conditions, and on the other hand the players themselves will probably approve the [illegible] when they are forced to [illegible] every ounce that is a well-developed hay field.

It is not from the golfers that the Army Forage Department expects to meet any objection, for those connected officially with all the famous links have signified that "Barkis is willin'." But the Departmental Committee on Food Production has suggested that golf courses be used for grazing purposes as extensively as possible. Following this suggestion many clubs have given out contracts for the grazing, and on this account they are not available for hay production. A sacrilegious suggestion that the green be ploughed up and planted with potatoes was immediately howled down by every one that ever handled a mashie, and the Departmental Committee on Food Production gave it the finishing stroke by declaring it unnecessary and wasteful.

Every Shovelful Counts

THERE'S satisfaction in having a Sunshine Furnace. You know that the coal you put in the big wide door will be turned into heat for the house.

What makes the Sunshine a coal saver? Two things:

1 THE STUDY—the science you might call it—that has gone into its design.

The air passages are wide, the radiating surface is large. The heat from the flames is spent before the fumes get to the chimney. This means more heat through the hot air registers.

The fire-pot, which is the main source of heat, is always kept clear of ashes that would prevent rapid conduct of heat from the burning coal to the radiating surface of the fire-pot.

2 THE WORKMANSHIP that produces a permanent "heat-tight" job.

The doors and dampers fit closely. When you shut off the Sunshine Furnace, the heat is held without burning up coal; and tight construction at every point directs the heat to the warm air-flues and avoids the waste of coal.

Would it be wise to look for fuel-economy in any but a modern, dependable furnace like

DON'T MISUSE YOUR EYES.

When our eyes are strong and willing we impose upon them unthinkingly, and it is too apt to be when they begin to fail us that we realise our neglect. There is no feature that so determines and colors our first impressions of a person as the eye. And yet while nose and cheeks and lips have their due share of attention and worry, the eyes, most valuable of all, are sadly neglected, and even abused.

Here are some hints to help in their care: Don't rub your eyes when awaking in the morning. Don't use your eyes a minute after they begin to feel tired. Don't try to finish a page or an eyelet after the sunlight has faded. Don't face a strong light. Don't attempt to read fine print. Don't read lying down. Don't try to read with a book or paper in your lap. Don't read on the train, boat or rocking chair. Don't wear spotted veils.

Another on the Minister.—An army chaplain at the front came upon a sergeant and a small detachment who were trying hard to move a wagon which was hopelessly embedded in mud. "Can I be of any service to you?" the benevolent divine inquired. "Yes, sir," the sergeant replied. "You can best help us by making yourself scarce." "Making myself scarce," the clergyman repeated in surprise. "Yes, sir. You see, the men can't very well say to the horses what they'd understand when you're about."—B. M'T.

CHURCH HUMILIATION PRECEDES GLORY

God's Time and Seasons Absolutely Fixed.

Our Earth the Only Part of God's Universe in Rebellion—How the Rebellion Came About—Divine Permission of Evil for Six Thousand Years—Reign of Sin Soon to End—The Church's Present Experiences of Suffering Violence a Preparation for Future Glory—Apostate Systems, Claiming Present Right to Rule, Not the True Church — Distinction Soon to Be Clearly Seen—Church in Glory to Be Known and Honored of All.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Sioux City, Iowa, July 9.—Pastor Russell is in our city, in attendance upon the I.B.S.A. Convention here. Today he delivered a powerful lecture based upon Matthew 11: 12, "The Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." He said in part:

According to the Bible, our earth is the only province in all God's Universe that is in rebellion against the great Creator. We will not recount the history of this rebellion, save to remind you briefly that our father Adam was created in the image of God, in perfect harmony with his Maker. He was abundantly supplied with suitable food, delightful surroundings, and everything needful to his welfare and happiness. The terms under which he might have life and its accompanying blessings continued everlastingly were clearly stated to him by Jehovah God, and were most reasonable. But the temptation to disobedience came; and in his inexperience Adam succumbed to the Tempter. He became a rebel against his Creator, and brought upon himself the sentence of death—not eternal torment. That sentence was, "Dying, thou shalt die"—NOT "Living, thou shalt live in torment."—Genesis 2:17; 3:19; Ezekiel 28: 4, 20; Romans 6:23.

This is the plain statement of the Scriptures, no matter how much we have been taught to the contrary. That rebellion, which set in more than six thousand years ago, has continued ever since. During this period, God has not interposed to stop this rebellion in the human family. Ever since the fall of man, death has reigned over all of Adam's posterity. God purposed to permit sin to take its course for a certain limited period, in order that mankind's experiences with sin should be a great lesson, not only to themselves, but to all of God's intelligent creatures throughout eternity.

The angels have been very deeply interested on-lookers regarding what has happened upon this planet, as the Scriptures plainly show. Some of the angels followed man into sin; others remained true to their Creator and His laws. But while the holy angels have not transgressed at any time, yet they have beheld the transgression of mankind, and are noting how it has turned out. They perceive that in its very nature sin brings a sure penalty; that its only possible effect is mental, moral, and physical decay; and that misery, pain, and sorrow are its inevitable accompaniments, ending in death.

Divine Plan of the Ages.

But our wise Creator does not purpose to permit sin to continue indefinitely. Why should He permit sin to mar His great Universe? Before deciding that nothing can be done for humanity, God purposes to give the whole human family an opportunity to return to harmony and fellowship with Him. This opportunity, the Apostle Peter tells us, will be given during the "Times of Restitution."

"Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 19-21.

There have been no Times of Refreshing since Father Adam's sin of disobedience; for there the curse began and has continued even until now. St. Peter tells us, however, that in God's great Plan our Lord Jesus Christ is to be sent to earth, to accomplish the great work provided for in His death over eighteen hundred years ago. For a thousand years He will reign for the purpose of eradicating sin, of helping mankind up out of their fallen condition and bringing back to the image of God all the willing and obedient. That will be the time when Messiah will take to Himself His great power and reign. First of all, He will bind Satan, so that the nations will no more be deceived by him.

In His own due time God sent forth His Son to be the King, sent Him into this world, this rebellious province, to tell mankind that the great God who had condemned them has mercy on them and wishes to bless them. Our Lord Jesus came to the most favored nation of His time; but they rejected Him and crucified Him. He who had come into the world as its rightful King, as God's Representative, suffered violence even unto death. Since He represented the Kingdom which God purposed to set up on earth, when He was crucified, violence was done to the Kingdom.

These things have not taken the Lord by surprise. God foreknew it all from the beginning. It was a part of the Divine Program to permit His Son to me crucified; and knowing that it was the Father's will, the Son permitted His life to be taken from Him by wicked men. He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name above every name," next to His own. He who came into the world as its rightful King was crucified. But His death as a man was the gateway to glory, when He was resurrected by the power of the Almighty, and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High, there to remain until He should come to earth again to take His rightful authority as earth's Ruler for a thousand years.

Why the Saintly Are Misunderstood.

God foretold the death of our Lord Jesus through the Prophets hundreds of years before He came to earth as a man, in order that we might be able to see that all things have worked according to the counsel of the Divine will, and that sin and evil have not been permitted in any wise to frustrate His plans and purposes. And as it was the Father's design to permit the great Head of the Church to suffer violence, even so has it been His design to permit those who have followed the Master in the way of sacrifice to suffer violence. "If they have called the Master of the House Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of His Household?" (Matthew 10:25.) In these, as representatives of the Heavenly Kingdom, the Kingdom of Heaven has suffered violence throughout the Gospel Age.

How comes it that so false and unjust an impression of Jesus and of His saints could exist? Why should good appear to be evil to many and the evil appear to be good? We answer, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) The religious leaders of Jesus' day said that He had a devil because He did not join in with the scribes and the Pharisees, because He would not teach the traditions of men, because He would not endorse their doctrines nor walk in their ways. Had He joined in with them, He would have been popular. They would have praised Him and pointed to Him as one of themselves. But He would not do this because they were wrong. Our Lord stood for God and the Truth; therefore He could not and would not endorse the theories of the religious leaders of His day. He would not teach their doctrines. As a result, the leaders opposed, maligned and persecuted Him. And thus it has been with all who have followed in His steps ever since.

There was a time when Christ's true followers were put to all manner of gross indignities, were tortured on the rack, were roasted at the stake. We may not to-day suffer in the same manner; for such physical tortures are out of style. Tormenting, burning, crucifying, etc., are no longer practised. Now the Lord's faithful servants are held up to public opprobrium. This is called "roasting." The former kind of roasting has become unpopular; and so we now have this more modern method.

Many newspapers and preachers seek to dishonor those who follow the Master and have His spirit. What shall we do when thus misrepresented and defamed? Shall we return evil for evil? Oh, no! Our Lord Jesus did not do so. (1 Peter 2: 21-23.) Although He had the power to do so, yet He would not use that power. He could have saved Himself from the cross; but if He had done so, He would not have been the Saviour of the world. He knew that His enemies did not realize what they were doing. This was the testimony of the Apostles.—Acts 1: 13-17; 1 Corinthians 2:8.

Suffering Precedes Glorification.

Thus it has been all down the Gospel Age. The members of the Kingdom class have suffered violence from those who knew not what they were doing. Had they realized that they were persecuting the true Church of Christ, they would surely have refrained at once. But the Lord's faithful followers are to put up with this ill-treatment with good grace, knowing that it is working out for them a great blessing, and that in due time a blessing will come even to our persecutors.

This is God's arrangement for all whom He has called to be of the Gospel Church. If the Head of that Church, our Lord Jesus Christ, had not suffered, even unto the death of the cross, He would have not received the high reward of exaltation to the right hand of the Majesty on High. The same principle is operating toward all the Kingdom class. If we miss the persecution, we shall also miss the blessing, the reward. (Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2: 11, 12.) We cannot change God's Plan.

The Scriptures assure us, however, that this matter of suffering violence under present evil conditions will ultimately work out for the good of the saints of God. It is written: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to the called according to His purpose." (Romans 8:28.) How reasonable a proposition, that He whom God has purposed shall be the great King to bring the fallen race of man back to harmony with Himself should first learn sympathy for those whom He would uplift and restore. How reasonable, too, that those called to be associate rulers and blessers with Him should learn the same lessons.

The Masterpiece of Deception.

There has been a great mistake made regarding the nature of the Kingdom of God and the time for its domination of earth. We have not properly understood the matter. We have thought that the Kingdom of God was already here, that its rule had already begun. Some have thought that it was set up when our Lord arose from the dead. Others have supposed that it was set up at Pentecost. But long after Pentecost St. John prayed for this Kingdom to come. (Revelation 22:20.) Still others have thought that it must have come with the destruction of Jerusalem. But it did not come then.

Many people believe that the Kingdom of God was established on earth in the year 800 A.D. Then the Roman Catholic Church had become very powerful, and the European kingdoms very weak. Religious leaders said, "We have waited eight hundred years for our Lord to return and set up His Kingdom. He has not come. But the Church is growing strong and influential. Surely it must be the will of God that we should set up the Kingdom."

According to this conclusion, the Holy Roman Empire was established about the year 800, with the Bishop of Rome as the Vicegerent of Christ—His earthly representative. Doubtless the leaders of this movement thought that they were following Divine instructions regarding the establishment of the long-promised Kingdom; but the Adversary deceived them. The Bible tells us that he has deceived the whole world. (Revelation 20: 1-4.) For centuries this pseudo kingdom of God made and unmade kings, as appointees of God's Kingdom. For a while the kings had to walk very humbly and quietly; for if they displeased the Pope, he would depose them and appoint their successor. History records many humiliating experiences which disobedient European sovereigns were compelled to undergo as a result of the Pope's anger at their course.

Counterfeit vs. Real Millennium.

Surely the kingdom which had such power was not the Kingdom of Heaven which, according to our text, was to suffer violence at the hands of men throughout the Gospel Age. In the light of the Scriptures we cannot believe that the Kingdom of God has been reigning on earth for the past 1,160 years. If it has been in power, we would be greatly disappointed; for the Word of God leads us to expect that Kingdom to accomplish something far greater and far more lasting than anything that has been accomplished during these centuries. That Word assures us that when Messiah reigns, He will reign in righteousness and in judgment; that His control will extend over the entire earth, for the uplift and blessing of the whole world, for their deliverance from sin, sorrow, and death.—Isaiah 32: 1-4; 35: 1-10; Psalm 72, etc.

All this is in harmony with our text, which declares that during the present life the Kingdom of Heaven, the true Church of Christ, suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. The meek have not yet inherited the earth; they seldom get even a good slice of it. Are the righteous blessed and the wicked punished today? No; just the reverse. Those who are living godly lives in Christ Jesus are misrepresented, persecuted, and put out of the synagogues. All manner of evil is spoken against them falsely, for Christ's sake. And all this is being done in the name of Christ.—John 16: 1-4.

For centuries the true Church has suffered violence at the hands of the rulers of this world. Some have done this under one name, some under another; but the persecution has been done under the direction of Satan, whose object it is to destroy the true saints of God. But when the true Kingdom is set up, there will be a great change in this respect.

God's times and seasons are absolutely fixed. No one can hasten them. Everything is in the Father's power. Now we see that God wished the world to have six great Days of a thousand years each, during which to learn certain necessary lessons; and that these six Days were to be followed by a Seventh Day, during which Christ and the Church will occupy the office of Prophet, Priest, and King, in order to teach, help, and uplift the world, restoring them to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary.

The present order of things will not last. Our Lord will set up the Kingdom of God (Daniel 2:44), which will do away with this present order and will bring in the New Order. At that time He will have associated with Him all those who have been loyal to Him and His Cause, and who have proved themselves faithful even unto death.

Seeing these things, perceiving the fulfilment of the prophecies of the Scriptures all about us, and knowing from the sure Word of God the outcome of present events, the Lord's faithful people may well wait in patience for their deliverance, may well lift up their heads and rejoice. (Luke 21:28.) Daily we are getting ready for that Kingdom by proving and manifesting that we have a thoroughgoing loyalty of heart to the coming Kingdom and its principles of righteousness. If we are willing to suffer violence for the Kingdom and its righteous principles, God will know that we are loyal to Him; and He will reward us openly. The deliverance of the suffering saints of God draws near.

Daily are we working more and more to be conformed in character to the likeness of our Lord and Head. In order that we may be fitted for the glorious work beyond the veil. As are ambassadors for God, even though the world knows us not. Therefore it remains for us to stand firmly for all the principles of righteousness found in the Word of God. Of those who prove to be worthy it is written: "Blessed are they that have part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him."

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS

Struggled with Sickness and Discouragement; How Relieved.

Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years. I hated the doctors, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband. I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my housework. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate my health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLEMETT, Box 85, Killingly, Conn.

TIMBALES OF FRENCH PEAS

For eight people there will be required a can of French peas, a tablespoonful of butter, a gill of cream, a tablespoonful of sugar, two level teaspoonfuls of salt, a gill of milk, a gill of flour, one egg, a teaspoonful of salad oil and lard for frying the shells.

Beat the egg till very light, then add the milk and a level teaspoonful of salt. Pour this mixture on the flour and beat until perfectly smooth. Add the oil, cover the bowl, and set away in a cool place until the time to fry.

CUCUMBER BOATS.

Cut large cucumbers in half lengthwise and lay in ice water until cold and very firm. Remove the pulp from the center of each half and mix with tiny slices of young onions and strips of green peppers, moisten with French dressing. Fill the cucumber shells with the mixture, sprinkle with ground cheese and lay strips of pimento on top. Serve on lettuce leaves, a "boat" to each person.

Codfish Omelet.

Cover ½ cup of shredded salt codfish and 1 heaping cup of sliced raw potatoes with boiling water; cook until the potatoes are soft, drain, mash, add 1 teaspoon of butter, a few grains of pepper and 2 beaten eggs and beat until very light. Cover the bottom of the frying pan with pork or bacon fat, put in the mixture, spread it evenly in the pan, cook slowly until a crust has formed, then fold over and turn out on to a hot platter.

Banana Charlotte Russe.

Press through a sieve enough banana pulp to make one cup, add one-fourth cup powdered sugar, two teaspoons lemon juice. Beat until very thin, then fold in one-half pint whipped cream. Have ready some sherbet cups lined with sponge or delicate cake, fill with the prepared cream and chill before serving.

COCOANUT CREAM PIE.

Cook together three cups sweet milk, three well beaten eggs, sugar to taste; butter half size of an egg, thicken with cornstarch and flavor with vanilla. Remove from stove and stir in half cup of shredded cocoanut. Bake rich crust and pour in mixture. Beat the whites of two eggs, sweeten, spread on top of pies, sprinkle with cocoanut, and set in the oven to brown.

RICE PUDDING.

Rice pudding may be prepared very quickly from left over boiled rice, by beating the yolks of two eggs into two cups of new milk. Moisten a tablespoonful of cornstarch with a little milk, sweeten, bring all to the boil, allow to simmer gently, stirring meanwhile until thick and custard-like. Vanilla extract or raisins, or both, may be used in the preparation, and it is good hot or cold. The whites of the eggs may be made into a meringue for the top.

TOMATO CROQUETTES.

Should there be a cup of stewed tomatoes or two large sized fresh tomatoes left, tomato croquets may be made. Peel the fresh tomatoes, mash with a heavy spoon, add an egg, season highly and thicken with cracker crumbs if preferred. Mix thoroughly and then fry, either in deep fat or sautcing. Serve with steak for dinner or as the hot dish for lunch.

RICE PUDDING.

Two cups of cooked rice, two and one-half cups of cooked milk, two eggs. Cook the rice and milk together until creamy. Whip the whites and yolks of the eggs separately. Add the yolks, sugar, vanilla and lastly the whites, beaten stiff. Bake 30 minutes. Serve with hard sauce.

BANANA CROQUETTES

Would like to have you try these banana croquettes. Remove skins from bananas, scrape, using a silver knife to remove the astringent principle which lies close to the skin, and cut in halves crosswise, then remove a slice from each end. Dip in crumbs, eggs and crumbs again, fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper.

HOME REMEDY FOR IRON RUST

Lemon juice and table salt will remove iron rust from table or bed linen. Wet the spot with the lemon juice, then rub in as much salt as it will hold. Place in the sun. When dry, repeat process till rust is gone.

RESULTS PROVE SUCCESS OF FORD PROFIT SHARING.

Henry Ford announced the plan whereby his employes should share in the profits of the company early in January, 1914, and put the plan into effect on the fourteenth of that month.

A minimum wage of $5 for every profit sharer startled the industrial world, and provoked unlimited discussion, liberal criticism, as well as commendation. Sufficient time has now elapsed to indicate clearly the wisdom of the plan and its entire success. Statistics were gathered in two surveys, one in 1914 after the plan had been in operation for five months, the other just completed.

Coming as they do two years apart, an excellent basis for comparison is furnished.

The average bank deposit of the 29,314 men now employed is $904, as against $62.12, the average of the 12,000 men employed in 1914.

The bank accounts of the present Ford employes total $26,968,936, an increase of nearly $5,000,000 over two years ago.

The number of bank depositors has increased from 5,872 to 17,116.

The men are now buying homes worth $21,787,483, an increase of eighteen and a half millions.

The improved living conditions of the men and their families are clearly reflected in the statistics.

In 1914, 2,572 carried life insurance totalling $2,471,663; in 1916 17,116 men are carrying $14,822,916, an increase of over $500,000 a month.

Two years ago only 364 of the men owned their homes, to-day 1,136 Ford men are home owners.

The total wealth of Ford employes, as represented by bank accounts, real estate and real estate equities, is $9,696,460, an average of $617.33 for each man.

Nearly 12,000 more men are now renting homes than in 1914, which has caused the number of men paying board bills to decrease 50 per cent.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS OVERCOME BY SAFE METHOD

Worry, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia.

First, the blood circulation must be improved.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into overworked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep, or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year — no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To sleep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched, a boon to the sleepless — sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

This is An Age— Of Medical Clenics

Hardly Anybody Escapes Study by Scientific Specialists.

In this day of social reforms and statistics, tabulations, and card indices, nobody gets away without being placed under sociological, psychological, or some other ogical glass. This has come to be a very necessary work since the world very wisely broke away from the old aphorism, "Let nature take its course," and found that nature very often responds most readily to efforts of kindly assistance. Since the world entered upon this new and brighter era the minds of many oldtimers are made dizzy at the number and complexity of the new things proposed. They have murmured, but the demand of humanity everywhere that the underdog shall be given a better chance is prevailing nearly everywhere.

Under old forms of police work in large cities, when a crime was proved and a conviction made, the next thing to do was to pronounce sentence. The latitudes allowed by the statute, in rigor or clemency, marked the limitations of things. No thought was taken of whether derelicts might not be wholly responsible, owing to mental defectiveness, for their derelictions. When we began turning into the new day, it was soon noticed that there was a class of continuing offenders long known to the police as "repeaters," because, after fine or imprisonment, they could be expected to be rearrested for a repetition of the same offense or another of about the same character. The records of the St. Louis Workhouse show that in the three years between April 1, 1913, and the same date this year, of 2,788 commitments, 1,129 were of persons committed for the second time, 302 of them were committed three times, and 448 four times or oftener.

This record is not exceptional. The facts argue for mental defectiveness as a cause of much lawbreaking, and in most of the great cities of the country there has been connected with the Police Department mental clinics for the study of such cases and taking means for the cure of such unfortunates, as far as possible. The cost of maintaining such a clinic is never large, and is, in fact, a bagatelle when counted against the great revenues of great cities or set against the improved condition of unfortunate humanity, and the reduction in the number of crimes, the detection, prosecution, and punishment of which cost a great deal more in any large community than the cost of maintaining such a clinic would os.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The reading class was in session, and word "furlough" occurred. Miss Jones, the teacher, asked if any little girl or boy knew the meaning of the word.

One small hand was raised.

"Furlough means a mule," said the child.

"Oh, no, it doesn't," said the teacher.

"Yes, ma'ah," insisted the little girl. "I have the book at home that says so."

Miss Jones told the child to bring the book to school. The next morning the child came armed with a book and triumphantly showed a picture of an American soldier riding a mule, under which was the caption:

THE VILLAIN OF THE PIECE IS A STUPID PORTER WHO SHIFTED SUIT CASES OF TOTAL STRANGERS.

New York, July 8.—Feeling the need of her striped silk sweater as she rode up town in a taxi from the Jersey Central Terminal, Mrs. Edith La Boy of No. 135 West Seventy-ninth street, reached into the suit case a porter had placed in the vehicle for her, and drew out the southern section of a college boy's lurid pajamas.

A second plunge revealed a box of cigars and a third an assortment of choke-neck collars, bearing the initials "W.G." Still hoping to find that striped silk sweater, Mrs. La Boy dived deeper and by the time she reached her home she had found a young man's assortment of summer suits, shirts, dancing pumps, ties and pins, a deck of cards and a love story, and a label on the coat indicating that the bag was the property of William A. Grady, a student at Notre Dame University, South Bend, Ind.

Hurrying to the Herald office Mrs. La Boy caused the following advertisement to be published in the paper this morning:

While she did not advertise the fact it is true none the less that "W.G." may have his own bag and contents when he returns Mrs. La Boy's suitcase.

"I never was so surprised in my life as when I opened that suitcase, exactly like my own, and found it to contain a college man's personal belongings," said Mrs. La Boy. "In leaving the train the porter apparently had taken the wrong suitcase and I did not stop him, as it looked like mine.

"I can picture the college man's astonishment when he finds, if he already has not found it, that the suit case he has contains several little dresses and personal articles with which I equipped myself to spend a few days with a friend at Asbury Park, but I wish that he would hurry around with my bag and get his own."

S.S. Empress for Bay Route.

THE C. P. R. steamer Empress recently took the place of the, S.S. Yarmouth between St. John, N.B., and Digby. The Empress is an ideal passenger and freight boat. She has all the accommodations of an Atlantic liner and the fittings hardly can be surpassed for convenience. Her staterooms are large and well furnished with all that is necessary, while her saloon is very commodious and occupies mostly the length of the ship. Like the stateroom the saloon is furnished and upholstered in plush, while the chairs are roomy and comfortable. To the person travelling for pleasure or business the main thing is comfortable accommodation and no better can be found on many a larger steamship than the Empress possesses. The ship also possesses a post office where letters, etc., can be posted without looking up the purser.

Another feature is a covered observation look-out, situated at the stern of the steamer, where there are clear views all around, and also sheltered from rains and high winds. In fact, the Empress is fitted out with all necessaries for the comfort of the traveller.

The Empress machinery is of the latest design, such as triple expansion engines and all other new devices in marine equipment. She was built at Newcastle-On-Tyne in 1908. She is an iron vessel of 1,342 tons gross and 613 registered. She is 236 feet in length, 34 breadth of beam and 20 feet in depth. Her engines are of 365 horse power. She was on the route between Shediac and Summerside for nine years.

Economy on The British Front

British military thrift is highly praised in an article in the London Times by M. Nemirovitch Danchenki, famous Russian war correspondent, after a visit to the front. He says:

"Never, I think, has the practical genius of the English revealed itself so strongly as in this war. We were taken to see their activity at the rear of the army. It was one of the towns where he whole of the work for the nearest corps is copcentrated. Here some thousands of French women whose fathers, husbands, and brothers have gone to the war earn a handsome living of which they could not dream in peace time.

It is most marvelous to see the things that are done here. Take, for instance, boots. Our boots when they are worn are thrown away by the soldiers. We saw heaps of these cast-offs near the Russian trenches in Galicia and Poland, and indeed of what use could be that leather torn in pieces, and as hard as wood? Here, however, things are different. We saw sheds full of these old boots, piles of rubbish, and I could not understand what they were going to do with it all; but here we saw stage by stage this rubbish turned again into splendid boots, soft and strong. First of all the old boots were soaked in a mixture and then passed from hand to hand until they became pliable. They are then scrubbed and rubbed and carefully patched. New soles are sewn on, and the boots are then hobnailed. All this is done by machinery. This repairig shop turns out about 1,000 pairs of boots per day and it is expected that it will shortly be able to turn out about 5,000.

The boots passed on to the department where the women are working. They give the boots a bath of boiling oil and straighten and shape them. After undergoing several other processes the boots are again immersed in an oil bath, and finally at the other end of the workshop you see similar piles, not of hideous rubbish, but of comfortable, splendid boots with solid soles.

NOTHING WASTED.

The same thing is done with the khaki and linen. First the beastly-looking things are passed through steam of the highest temperature. The rags are then handed to the women, who rip off the sound portions with sharp knives, as, for instance, collars, sleeves, cuffs, etc. Then the women, in long India rubber gloves reaching up to their elbows, wash these rags in a disinfectant, freshening and softening them. From here they are take to the workshops, where they are made up again and returned to the army quite new and ready for use. Those portions which are quite useless are put in sacks and sent over to the mills in England, so that nothing is wasted.

A crashing, thunderous roar, blazing furnaces, showers of sparks, the shrill wdy of iron under the cutting knife, a deafening roar of copper under a red hot drill. This is the hospital for wounded cannon, machine-guns, and rifles. Those which cannot be re-cast are sent to England, the remainder are re-bored, patched up, re-fitted with new mechanism to replace the damaged parts—and all this within a day's journey from the corps, so that the guns which are hors de combat today return again in five days to their positions in a fit and proper state for battle. Broken rifles are collected, and just as the torn boots so are the leather slings treated. The butts and wooden parts are repaired, the damaged metal parts are replaced by new ones the rusty barrels are freshened up, and in a day or two these heaps of old iron which seemed to be quite useless, return to the regiments and look like brand new.

Thousands of broken bicycles are received here. The spare parts are sent from England, and sometimes, almost on the following day, the broken bicycles return in a fit and proper condition to their units. Motor-cars and motorcycles receive similar treatment. There are stocking sheds full of spare parts—radiators, generators, gear-boxes, tires, cylinders, etc.—thousands of them. A motor-lorry is brought in to-day in an absolutely dilapidated state; it is ready in the evening; cleaned, and it tearing again at full speed back to its unit.

ON AN ENORMOUS SCALE.

Everything here is on an enormous scale. The bakeries have turned out in the course of five months 40,000,000 pounds of bread. New clothes, boots, and tinned stuff fill sheds right up to the roof. When we passed through the storehouse for waterproofs we could not believe our eyes. We passed through a number of buildings where old and abandoned gas masks are renovated. Here, again, the girls wear long India rubber gloves; they disinfect the masks in a lukewarm chemical solution and carefully wash them, so that you cannot tell the masks from new ones. I saw here for the first time gas masks for horses and carrier pigeons! The cages of the pigeons are covered over with them and thus the birds are preserved from the asphyxiating gases.

Used cartridges, spoilt cartridge cases, parts of shrapnel—glass, diaphragms, broken boxes, small machine guns on motor cycles—one does not know where to look. Finally you become dazed and walk about bewildered. I repeat all this complicated mechanism of a huge auxiliary department is within a few hours' journey from the firing line, and one ought to see how this work proceeds without any hitch, without any hubbub or shouting as a beautiful machine where every screw is doing its little work in complete harmony with the rest.

CANADA'S SOLDIERS

The Canadian troops around Hill 60, Sanctuary Woods and Zillibeke have repeated their valorous performance of St. Eloi, St. Julien and Ypres. The official British statement describes their recapture of a former British position over a front of 1,500 yards to the southeast of Zillibeke as "a gallant and successful assault." They continued their advantage until they had won back most of the ground around Ypres; they fought throughout the night, says the report, "doggedly bombing their way back to the possession of the position they had lost."

The soldiers of Canada have bulked big for a colony in this European war. When they first appeared upon the field they were a mystery to the trained British trooper; their apparent loose discipline, their recklessness in the face of danger; their slang and their disregard of the English traditions of th camp and field puzzled him. He still tells of a body of troops returning at night from the trenches that were challenged by an English sentry. Receiving no reply the sentry excitedly repeated "Who comes there?" None of your damned business," came from some one in the ranks. "All right, Canadians, advance."

The Englishman, however, suspected the Canadians could fight and he found it out in the engagements around Ypres. They were among the earliest sufferers from asphyxiating gas as a war weapon, when the Germans on the first day of its use endeavored to throw the Allies' whole defensive in Flanders into disorder. Their held their line after the French colonials had been overcome and they battled on for days. The remnant of the Princess Patricias, the best regiment Canada sent to the war, numbered but 150 when it was dug out of the trench it had defended.—New York Sun.

HERZOG MAN JOIN CUBS.

Rumoured That Chase Will be New Manager of Reds.

Chicago, July 8.—Rumours were afloat in Chicago that a deal shortly may be put over, which will bring Thos. Herzog, present manager of the Reds, to the Cubs. According to these rumours, Herzog is tired of his Cincinnati berth and is desirous of getting away. Friction with the Red stockholders is said to be the principal cause of Herzog's dissatisfaction. In the event of the deal going through the story runs, Hal Chase will take up the managerial reins over the Reds.

GERMANS READY FOR A MONTH

BUT THEIR PLANS WENT AWRY IN THE FACE OF THE FRENCH RUSH.

Paris, July 8.—For a month the Germans had been on the alert around the Somme and orders had been given in a secret circular to construct special intrenchments. Saps had everywhere been driven to within 25 yards of the French barbed wire and numerous passages were cut in the German wire entanglements to enable their patrols to spy out every suspicious movement on the part of the French.

Extra shelters had been dug thirty feet behind the trenches so that the men could get into the trenches more quickly when the French bombardment ceased. Exits were made in the rear of these shelters. Numerous listening saps were made in such a manner as not to interfere with frontal or flanking fire from the trenches. Woods, Whenever well placed as was that of Mereaucourt, were turned into formidable redoubts with specially constructed shelters and iron girders over the entrances. Concrete protection was erected to resist the big shells. At frequent intervals there were armored concrete machine gun turrets.

In addition villages were transformed and houses were pulled down in order to give a uniform aspect and to prevent the aviators from spotting the guns placed in the cellars. Finally all the men received four emergency rations of bread and coffee and 150 cartridges and two bombs. Each section had also a flare pistol with 300 flares and two signal cartridges.

When the French attack began July 1 the Germans were so hard pressed that they were obliged to fall back upon Frize. They hoped to be able to cling there on account of the marshy loop of the Somme, but the German regiments holding that position were so badly punished by the bombardment that the reserves were ordered there. This order was received at one o'clock in the morning. According to a prisoner they immediately assembled and in companies marched through Peronne. One after another they reached Biaches, Flaucourt and then Herbecourt. Thence progress was difficult.

O'Toole—Phwat's the matter that ye didn't speak to Mulligan just now? Have ye quarrelled?

O'Brien—That we have not. That's the insurance av our friendship.

O'Toole—Phwat do ye mane?

O'Brien—Sure, it's this way. Mulligan an' I are that devoted to wan another that we can't bear the idea of a quarrel; an', as we are both mighty quick-tempered we've resolved not to spake to wan another at all, for fear we break the frindship.

Missing Lawyer Seized By Police

—Kalamazoo, Mich, July 8.—Alex. H. G. Maidmont, until recently a prominent lawyer of Hackensack, N. J., was arrested here by H. J. Taylor, a Bergen county detective on an indictment accusing him of stealing $50,000 from Mrs. Julia Turner of Englewood, N.J.

Maidmont was living alone here in a boarding house and it was understood that the detective learned of his presence through a letter he had sent to his second wife, who was his stenographer.

As attorney for Mrs. Julia Trainor, of Englewood, N. J., A. H. G. Maidmont sold for her the Palisade Hotel property there, which she had inherited from her husband. The price of the sale included $50,000 in certified checks, which she said she gave to Maidmont last April to invest for her.

About that time Maidmont disappeared and consequently the Bergen County Grand Jury voted an indictment against him, charging grand larceny. Since then the detectives had been seeking him, and part of their work was to watch his young and attractive second wife, who had been his stenographer in the law offices in Hackensack.

After the first Mrs. Maidmont obtained a divorce two years ago, Maidmont married his stenographer, who was a Miss Patterson, and they established their home in a large apartment house in Riverside Drive and 140th street, Manhattan. Soon after he disappeared his young wife appeared at Hackensack and said she would have to go to work for a living. Since then she has been with friends in Hackensack. It was said last night that her mail had been watched and this led to the finding of Marchmont in Kalamazoo.

Maidmont had been a leading lawyer of Bergen county and was about to be named County Prosecutor when his family troubles caused him to be dropped out of Democratic politics, in which he had been a leader.

LIMITS GIFTS TO TROOPS.

Germany Makes Restrictions on the Score of Economy.

In the interest of economy the German military authorities have decided to limit the sending of "liebesgaben" to the troops in the field, according to an announcement made public on June 18, and reported in the London press. It is said that it is no longer permissible "to collect and send presents, the only object of which is to give signs of loyal remembrance" on the part of relatives.

The restriction is to begin with woollen goods, and the military authorities have issued "a request" that all such gifts henceforth shall be sent to official distributing centres, whence they will be delivered under official instructions to the man who are most in need of them.

PELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

To be dressed in perfect harmony with her simple girlish charm, your daughter needs a frock like this one, in either all one material or in goods of contrasting note as pictured. On abundantly full and plain lines for good style, this dress has the front and back gathered to yokes. The full length closing at front with buttons tells with what ease it may be slipped on and taken off, as well as laundered. Scalloping, which is very popular this summer for trimming children's garments, gives a very dainty finish to the collar and wristband cuff, in contrasting goods. The belt, in harmony with the collar, aids in the arrangement of the skirt section into graceful folds.

The pattern is cut in sizes 6 to 12 years. To make in size 10, you will need 3¼ yards of 36 inch material and 1 yard of contrasting goods in 27 inch width.

If you will send 10 cents to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of applicant.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Allies Are Making Progress On Both Sides of The Somme

British Extend Their Line Northward From Hardecourt While French Press Closer to Peronne Capturing German Trenches Near Barlanx and Taking 950 Prisoners Erench Also Gain Ground in New Attack in Champagne District.

GERMAN SUB. CARRIES NO ARMS

LONDON, July 10.—Anglo-French armies pressed forward on both sides of the River Somme in severe fighting last night, despite determined German attempts to stem the great offensive.

The German War Office admitted several reverses to-day at the hands of British and French forces.

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 10.—French troops pressed closer to the railway town of Peronne, the immediate objective of their great offensive, in furious fighting south of the Somme last night, capturing a German line of trenches in the region of Barleux, southwest of Peronne.

At the same time the French broke out with an attack in the Champagne region, capturing German trenches west of Butte Le Mesnill on a five hundred yard front, after three attacks.

The French now threaten in their next thrust on the south bank of the Somme to squeeze the Germans out of all their positions west of the river in the bend of the Somme.

The Germans already have withdrawn their heavy guns to the east bank of the river.

The historic city of Peronne is now at the mercy of the French guns. French lines are now drawn so close that not only long range pieces, but small field guns are emplaced within easy range of the Peronne railway station.

From a rise of ground near Barleux, French officers can look down upon the town from across the river and watch movements of German troops.

During the first eight days of the great Allied offensive, the French have advanced on a 15 kilometre front "west ten miles" to a depth of from three to five miles, it was stated semi-officially to-day.

The War Office reported to-day minor activities at several other places on the French front. In the Argonne a French reconnaissance cleaned up a German trench.

British Extend Line Northward

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—The British force which captured the southern end of Trones Wood north of Hardecourt in Saturday afternoon's fighting has extended its position northward, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon.

For forty-eight hours heavy fighting has been going on in the woods. A German counter attack was repulsed wtih heavy enemy losses.

British troops captured several hundred more prisoners on the Somme front in this morning's fighting. On the British front farther north the Germans bombarded British positions for three hours in the region of Hooge. In this region British troops made three successful raids on German front line trenches.

BERLIN, July 10.—British troops have penetrated the Trones Woods, and the French the villages of La Maisonette, Barleux and Recoqueres, it was officially admitted to-day.

Hard hand-to-hand fighting is going on without cessation in the village of Ovillers north of the Somme.

Threatens Action Against Deutchstand

Examiner Special:

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 10.—Legal action, possibly the seizure of the U-boat "Deutschland," at Baltimore, is threatened by Simon Lake, the inventor of the submersible boat, if the German underwater merchantman uses devices which he has patented in the United States.

Lake, with two attorneys, was to leave here late to-day for Baltimore to inspect the vessel.

"If the boat has any of my patent devices on it—and I have every reason to believe it has—I will sue out a libel," Lake asserted.

Submarine Has No Guns on Board

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The German super-submersible Deutschland is not a warship. She is not even an armed merchantman. She has no guns or armament of any kind aboard her. This was the report made to the Treasury Department shortly before noon by custom officials who boarded the submarine at Baltimore. The State Department immediately was informed of the ship's status by Secretary McAdoo. The report while preliminary is considered definitely to establish the Deutschland's status, and her right to dock in United States' ports.

BAKING DEMONSTRATION

Most women are, and all women should be interested in any movement that has in view the betterment of humanity. It is now an established fact that the matter of purity of food products has much to do with physical conditions. The proper mixing and baking of food stuff is likewise important. The women of Peterborough are afforded an unusual opportunity during the present week and no one should fail to take advantage of the pure food demonstrations at E. F. Mason's store.

The demonstration is conducted under the personal supervision of Mrs. Clarry Hunt, the famous food expert, from Australia. On Tuesday, July 11th, Mrs. Hunt will demonstrate ribbon cake and baking powder buns. On Wednesday, chocolate cake and orange fritters. On Thursday, Almond cake and cocoanut rocks. On Friday, Layer cake and Tea Biscuits. On Saturday, Strawberry shortcake and Banana fritters.

Mrs. Hunt uses Magic Baking Powder exclusively.

57TH BAND.

The full band of the 57th Band will play at the Sacred Heart Church social on Tuesday evening, July 11. The band will hold a rehearsal tonight at the Conservatory at eight o'clock sharp and every member is asked to be on hand sharp on time.

GIANT SUBMARINE ARRIVES SAFELY IN U. S. WATERS

Undersea Boat is Claimed to be a Submarine Merchantment and Carries a Large Cargo of Dye Stuffs.

MESSAGE FROM KAISER

BALTIMORE, July 9.—The world's first submarine merchantman, the German underwater liner Deutschland, anchored below Baltimore tonight, after voyaging safely across the Atlantic, passing the allied blockading squadrons and eluding enemy cruisers watching for her off the American Coast. She carries mail and a cargo of 750 tons of costly chemicals and dyestuffs, and a message from Emperor William to President Wilson, and is to carry back home a cargo of nickel and crude rubber, sorely needed by the German army.

No torpedo tubes are visible. She is capable of submerging in less than two minutes. On the surface of the water the submarine has a speed of from two to three knots an hour more than the average merchant steamer.

Fifteen days out from Bremerhaven to Baltimore, the submarine reached safety between the Virginia Capes at 1.45 o'clock this morning.

Three hours later the big submarine started up the bay under her own power with the German merchant flag flying, convoyed by the Timmons. She was making more than 12 knots, and could have docked in Baltimore to-night, but arrangements had been made for receiving her with formal ceremonies to-morrow, and her captain was ordered to wait in the lower harbour. He and his crew of 29 men remained aboard their craft.

LOCAL CUSTOMS NOT NOTIFIED.

Regarding his vessel as a merchant man, subject to no unusual restrictions, the skipper, whose name is said to be Captain Kairig, went up the Chesapeake without waiting to notify local Customs and quarantine authorities of his presence. He was five hours away before Norman Hamilton, collector of Norfolk-Newport News, heard the news, and started on his trail aboad the coastguard cutter Onondaga. At last reports to-night the cutter had not approached the submarine, and it is understood that she merely was ordered out to keep the strange craft under surveillence as a neutrality precaution.

Little was known here to-night about what happened during the epoch-making cruise across the ocean None of the submarine's crew had landed, and the agents of her owners had received only meagre reports.

The boat is consigned to A. Schumacher and Company, local agents of the North-German Lloyd Line, and her cargo to the Eastern Forwarding Company, a concern said to have been organized within the past few

ANOTHER PETERBORO SOLDIER HAS MADE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Another Peterborough name has been added to the long list of those who have made the supreme sacrifice for the Empire. In Saturday night's official list appears the name of Lance-Corp. Robert Gifford ,who is officially reported killed in action. Lance-Corp.. Gifford enlisted here with the 21st Battalion and went overseas with that unit. Before the war he was employed with the Canadian General Electric Company, formerly residing on Lafayette avenue. His brother, Pte. Victor Gifford, enlisted here with the 2nd Battalion, First Contingent, and was wounded once, but is now back on the firing line.

Mr. Wm. Henry has received the following letter from Pte. Harold Losey, who was in the same battalion as Mr. Henry's son, Harold, recently reported killed in action:

Belgium, June 23, 1916.

Dear Mr. Henry,—As a friend of Harold's, I thought it was my duty to write you a few lines to let you know that I am very sorry that he was killed in action, and to let you know that he did not suffer any, as he was killed instantly. He was buried with a calm and peaceful look on his face as if he was asleep. Harold was a brave man, and we were very fond of each other. I always looked upon him almost as a brother, and you can believe me Mr. Henry you have my deepest sympathy in your loss. He was a great favourite among the boys of his company. In your sorrow you can always hold the thought that he died a brave soldier. I know this is a very blunt letter, but I hope you will pardon my way of speaking as I am a very poor hand at writing letters at any time.

Well as I have told you about all, I will close.

Good-bye, your friend,

Harold Losey.

The Examiner has received the following letter from a Peterborough member of the 39th Battalion, now at Caesar's Camp, Shorncliffe:

I think we might well be proud of the boys that enlisted in Peterborough, for they certainly hold a pretty large percentage of the non-commissioned officers' ranks of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F. I might also say that we have two officers, who also hail from the Electric City. Captain M. H. Park and Lieut. G. K. Beckham, both being well liked in the Battalion, as well as efficient officers.

The following is the list of men who enlisted in Peterborough to serve with the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., and who have since risen to the rank as set opposite their names:

Bandmaster Perryer, W. H.
Armourer Sgt. Hart, F.T.
Sergt. Brown, J. J. W.
Sergt. Chambers, G.
Sergt. Harris, W. J.
Sergt. Clayton, H.
Sergt. Charles, W. J.
Sergt. High, A.
Sergt Kelly, Hy.

Corp. Dunkley, W.
Corp. Wilford, H.
Corp. Payne, E. W.

Corp. Lutkin, W.
Corp. MacKenzie, A.
Lance-Corp. Lashbrook, C. H.
Lance-Corp. Robinson, F. W.
Lance-Corp. Gibson, E.
Lance-Corp. Boylett, W. T.

The Kingston Whig says: —

Sergt. G. F. Toone, 93rd Battalion, will soon go overseas, where he will make a total of six brothers of the one family all in uniform and at the front. This splendid record was only made after a great deal of personal sacrifice on the part of the 93rd sergeant. He was conducting three grocery stores in Peterboro, but the call to duty made him throw up everything to get into uniform. He sold out two of his stores, and keeping only one at 639 George street, Peterboro, he enlisted under Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston in the 93rd Battalion, joining that wonderful organisation and body of men that he has brought together. His business experience enabled Sergt. Toone to be chosen for the orderly room, where he is now very busily engaged in keeping the records of the unit.

It is worthy of note that Mrs. Toone has three brothers also in uniform.

The 93rd battalion will be leaving immediately for the front, and Barriefield will lose one of the finest units of infantry that has been brought into the camp since the war broke out.

Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnston, commanding the 93rd battalion, is to a great extent responsible for the splendid progress that has been made, and great credit for its splendid organization should be given to him. When he was authorized some six months ago to raise a battalion for overseas service from the city and county of Peterboro, he started using a long military experience as a foundation. His staff of officers was carefully chosen, and the N. C. O's had to prove

RUSSIAN ARMIES ARE STILL SWEEPING ON

PTE. ERIC STUART,
With the 93rd Battalion. Pte. Stuart's brother, Corp. Hubert Stuart, died of wounds a short time ago.

Cross The Stokhod River and the Capture of Kovel is Only a Matter of Days— Rapid Advance Has Almost Paralyzed German Forces.

EIGHT VILLAGES TAKEN

LONDON, July 9.—The Russian offensive on the lower Stokhod River is developing with a rapidity and strength which has almost paralyzed the German armies. Before the Teuton forces can recover from the shock of one assault General Brussiloff sweeps forward again with his forces intact. Yesterday the Austro-German forces were compelled to abandon their lines along the Styr and to take up less easily defended positions on the Stokhod.

Admission of the withdrawal of the Austro-German lines along the Styr River was made in the official statement issued in Vienna to-day. The Austrian forces were ordered to retreat, according to this statement, because their advanced lines were exposed to a double flanking movement from "hostile forces which have increased from threefold to fivefold superiority."

EIGHT VILLAGES TAKEN.

No less than eight important villages along both sides of the railway from Sarny to Kovel were captured by the swiftly-moving Russian armies, and more than 2,000 prisoners were bagged.

The fall of strategic positions north and south of the railway paved the way for a cavalry rush in the centre which swept everything before it and made the Russians masters of the whole triangle comprising Kolki, Rafalowka and Manevitchia.

To-day the irresistible advance of the Russians forced them across the stream at one vital point and enveloped two more villages south on the Sarny-Kovel railway. The Teutons by night are in disorderly flight along the whole front in this sector, and the Russians are moving forward from a point only 24 miles from Kovel.

THREATENED FROM TWO SIDES

The crossing by the Russians of the Stokhod River near Ugli and Janovka, which are reported in flames, seriously threatens the Austro-German forces from two sides. Ugli is about half-way between the two railways running into Kovel from Rovno and Sarny. The Teutonic salient eating its way into the front at the centre exposes both groups to a flank attack, and opens the way for the capture by the Muscovite armies of the life-lines of the enemy.

Two day's fighting between the Styr and the Stokhod has resulted in the capture of 12,000 unwounded men.

To-night's Russian communication reports the enemy forces in this region retiring in great disorder, and adds that the Russians have occupied Hulewichi, which is about 24 miles to the east of Kovel, while apparently the Russians are already across the Stokhod River somewhere in the region of Janovka.

German possession of Baranovichi and Kovel are absolutely essential if she is to retain her hold over the invaded parts of Poland and Lithuania, but it is considered likely that it is only a matter of a few days before the Russians will be in possession of Kovel, which would compel von Linsingen's retirement from the Lutsk salient.

German official and unofficial despatches reflect anxiety over the Russian advances as being greater than over the Anglo-French offensive, which the German military critics contend will not interfere with the operations against Verdun. Major Morath and other German critics express surprise at the extent and persistence of the Russian offensive and the endless resources of ammunition.

It is reported from Rome that at a recent council of German and Austrian marshals, Von Hindenburg de-

BIG REVIEW AT CAMP BORDEN WILL BE SPECTACULAR

Nearly 1000 Officers and 31,000 Non Coms and Men Will Pass Before Minister of Militia at the New Camp To-morrow.

REHEARSAL TO-DAY

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 10. — All roads lead to the ceremonial grounds at Camp Borden to-day. The 32,000 officers and men lined up on the parade grounds for the first full dress rehearsal at 9.15 a.m. and this afternoon at 2 o'clock another practice was held. To-day is a brilliant day at Camp Borden. The temperature at 9 o'clock was 82 in the shade, and the mercury is still rising. Judging by to-day's rehearsal, to-morrow's military spectacle will be a brilliant one from every standpoint. There will be present Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia; Brigadier-General W. A. Logie, six colonels, 10 brigade commanders, forty lieutenant-colonels, 80 majors, 150 captains, over six hundred lieutenants, 35 bands, and 31,000 N.C.O.'s and men. Last night and this morning postal corps handled 75,000 letters and cards mailed yesterday by soldiers to their relatives and friends.

Are Wounded And Prisoners

Three More Peterboro Boys Turn Up in German Hands

News that three more Peterborough boys who have been officially reported missing are prisoners in Germany, reached their relatives to-day. All three, Ptes. Geo. R. Butcher, A. E. Bartley and Ernest Crofts, are members of the Mounted Rifles and all three are wounded as well as prisoners. The news was particularly gratifying to the parents of Pte. Butcher as his name had appeared in the official list as killed.

REPORT WAS INCORRECT

Pte. Max Breckenridge Not Killed in Action.

The report that Pte. Max Breckenridge, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion, had been killed in action, was an error, as word has been received from Pte. Breckenridge himself in a letter written June 19th that he was in good health and had just come out of the trenches. This news will cause joy in many circles here and in the district.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

The enterprise of promoting and protecting the public health, as represented by efficient sanitation, seems to have languished with the oncome of hot weather, and to be in a state of suspended animation. There are so many things outside of specific undertakings that affect sanitation and the public health that their discovery should result from a larger official study of the many civic conditions and problems that are associated with civic sanitation and the public health. A correspondent refers to the building by-law in a way that shows how many sides of effect there are upon sanitation. The man who cleans our streets, and lanes, the sewer contractor, the builder, the plumber, the man who keeps down the microbe-laden street dust with doses of oil—all these and others not mentioned have their share of responsibility for contributing to the conditions that underlie efficient civic sanitation—a dominating element in preserving and promoting the public health.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS.

Peterborough's experience with supervised playgrounds brief and limited as it has been, is no exception to the successful experience met wherever such grounds have been established and conducted. As will be seen by an excellent contributed article on another page, the fact is evident that supervised playgrounds have come to stay. They meet a decidedly important need in a decidedly important way. However, the general public and many to whom the matter more directly appeals, have not the knowledge of, and cannot be expected to take the most intelligent and helpful interest in the work. Those who want to know and should know what part supervised playgrounds play in the scheme of social and civic life in the summer should, by personal visit and observation, make themselves better acquainted with their working and results. They will then be prepared to give them their moral and material support with better heart and better results. Nothing but praise is due the public spirited and self-sacrificing ladies, who are spending the days of the heated term, when nearly all the world is seeking rest and recreation, in the strenuous work of play—providing facilities for play for those whose only playground, otherwise, would be the dusty and dangerous streets — dangerous both physically and morally.

SWIMMING.

It appears that the play-grounds enterprise is going forward swimmingly — adequate provision for every kind of play a boy needs is provided, except swimming. True, there is an arrangement for swimming at the Y. M. C. A., in connection with the play grounds, but that does not at all fill the bill. The average boy, especially the boy too big for playgrounds, longs for the open waters; the noble river flowing through the city is an almost irresistible temptation.

It is unfortunate that there is no provision made for setting apart and developing for bathing certain parts of the river from north to south—providing for some regulation with safety appliances provided and some sort of supervision. Now, the boy is confronted on these broiling hot days with the German principle of prohibition, which plasters the German Empire with the word "verboten"—forbidden; now, if boys seek to enjoy an open swim in the river at any conveniently accessible point within the corporation limits he has a vigilant policeman "shooing" him off with a club. It would be wise to have some bathing and swimming facilities provided at proper points on the river front for boys and girls who are too large to be satisfied with the cut-and-dried facilities represented by supervised play grounds, which, admirable as they are, cannot meet the demands for adult or semi-adult recreation, aquatic or otherwise. A swimming tank at the Y. M. C. A. is all right in the winter, when no other is available, but it doesn't fill the bill in summer, when the wide-open river invites to the big, free splash and the lusty swim.

The authorities might arrange to put bigger boys and girls "in the swim" for better reasons than recreation and refreshment. The learning of the art of swimming should be encouraged. Summer is the best time to learn it, and summer is the time when our waters are more abundantly frequented, and the incidental dangers of accident — which knowledge of swimming can nullify—are consequently increased.

GOOD BEGINNING OF THE WEEK.

The despatches this morning begin the week with cheerful and important news of allied progress on the western front, and no relaxation of the Russian thrust. The Italians are more than holding their own. At Saloniki the allied forces are ready to strike with victorious effect. That they are not already fighting is explained by the fact that the great war council of the allies has not yet fixed the favourable hour. The war is going the right direction, with the allies closing in all round and narrowing the ring of steel and fire that is enclosing the Teutons, with an irresistible push behind— abundance of reserves, mountains of munitions, and forests, not mere parks, of big guns. So far the allied forces have been chiefly sowing the seed—preparing for real work, and everything indicates that the harvest is ripe for reaping and that the reaping has begun. Russia, with its quarter of a million of Austrian and German prisoners has its barns bursting. The losses in the last Russian drive and the slaughter around Verdun, where for months the Germans have been knocking their heads against the wall, amount to more than half a million men—more troops, perhaps, than were ever engaged on both sides or all sides, in any past war, except that of 1870-1. This colossal loss would not be so bad, if it had been the price of victory, but when it is the price of defeat; of loss of position; of loss of guns and munitions; of loss of prestige and loss of prospect of success, it represents a staggering blow to the German cause. To rightly appreciate the relative position of the two great contending forces, it is only necessary to imagine the conditions reversed—Britain and the allies in the same desperate condition as the Germans and Austrians, and the latter occupying the dominant driving force and fact of the Entente allies. Then we should have real cause for despair. But the sun of the allies is on their side of the hedge; the prospects of triumph are bright, even roseate. If we keep up the drive, maintain the push as we are both prepared and determined to do, the ultimate victory is coming every day nearer. But while we can hope we must be prepared to face a stern fight yet. The German powers are strong, their forty years of preparation for war is not yet exhausted, and their dying struggle may be violent and comparatively prolonged. Hunters of big game say that their quarry is most dangerous when brought to bay — figuratively fighting in the last ditch, as we have reason to feel our enemies are doing.

Bullet Faster Than Its Sound

There are a lot of interesting facts surrounding the subject of the flight of rifle bullets. For instance, high power rifle bullets travel much faster than does sound, and consequently in modern warfare if a man is shot and killed by a bullet from a rifle a couple of hundred yards away, as the Irishman says, "He don't hear the shot until after he is dead."

It is also true that it is impossible to make a high power rifle silent. You can put a silencer on it and some noise is cut down—in fact, all the noise caused by the explosion of the gases as they leave the muzzle of the rifle, but there is still left a whip-like cracking noise caused by the flight of the bullet. It is a whip-like cracking because mechanically it is produced in the same way. As the bullet travels along at high speed, it goes so fast the air does not have time to fly in behind it and there is a space back of the bullet of about one inch or two inches in which a high vacuum obtains and the noise is caused by the sudden collapse of this vacuum; in other words by the air rushing in and closing up.

This noise is irregular and is not a steady noise because of variations in the density of the air through which the bullet travels, and also because of the many others which are produced.

The fastest railroad train goes from New York to San Francisco in about four and one-half days. If our government Springfield rifle were fired in the right direction and the wind resistance did not slow the bullet down or gravity pull it down to the earth, it would take one hour and twenty minutes to get from New York to San Francisco, which makes the railroad train look like a piker.

Reasons Why Nobody Loves A German

The poor unfortunate Hun is fretting and whining because nobody loves him; and it seems to be a mystery to him why this should be. The late Field Marshal Von der Goltz wrote an article in the Deutsche Revue, in which he said: "Germany to-day is wrestling with almost the entire world." It is quite true that nobody loves a German, and also that "Germany to-day is wrestling with almost the entire world." But the coincidence does not seem to afford to the unhappy German any explanation of the mystery of his own unpopularity. He says to himself, and incidentally to the world: "I am amiable, kultured, beautiful. I have fascinating manners. Like the much-advertised dog, 'I will eat anything, and am specially fond of women and children.' If I hustle women off the sidewalk it is so as to give them more room in the gutter. If I kill Belgian or English children it is to save them from a world of temptation, especially the temptation not to be German. If they have been good they will be German in the next world, and if they have been bad it doesn't matter what they are. Yet with all these charms nobody loves me." It never occurs to the modest Teuton that the mere fact of almost the whole world being against him shows that there is another side to the question of German superiority.

A much easier problem for him to solve to his own infinite satisfaction is the explanation of Germany's pre-eminent greatness and strength. Von der Goltz had the audacity to say: "Next to personalities it is moral ideas which make a nation great and strong." Here he wrote truer than he knew; as he would have known had he lived until to-day. The want of moral principle has been the ruin of Germany. Nevertheless, he asks: "And what idea holds as commanding a place in Prussian and modern German history in general as the idea of duty? The first Hohenzollern termed himself 'God's vice-regent on the throne,' and that conception is peculiar to all the Hohenzollerns." It isn't: it is common to all the vulgar and brutal tyrants who wear crowns. They all reign by divine right. It is an atrocious blasphemy to associate the foul murders of Belgium, France, the East Coast of England and the Irish Sea with any vice-regent of God.

Already we have seen success of German arms quoted as a demonstration of the correctness of the principle of Germanism, and as a proof of the divine right of the Hohenzollerns to rule the world. That militarism is still part, and the chief part, of the religion of Germany is shown by this bumptious article of the late Field Marshal's. He says: "A dreamy recluse may be forgiven for raving about 'eternal peace.' One who lives in the world of reality knows that wars are and always will be indispensable in the life of a nation. It is a virtue, therefore, for a people to feel pleasure in martial deeds and a soldier's life." This, after all the horrors of the last two years! If Von der Goltz had wanted to inspire the Allies with a stern determination to kill and bury German militarism, even if they have to kill and bury every German to bring that about, he could not have written a stronger argument.—Montreal Herald.

A COLONIAL IN LONDON

As the devout Arab goes to Mecca, so does the Colonial come to London. They come to pay homage to a city and to its ghosts of the past. Far away in the distant parts of the globe they dream of London, and their dreams are strange ones. Their picture is a mixture of Dickens and Pepys, of the "Spectator" and the "Tattler." Added to this is the stalwart figure of the London policeman, and in the background a Phil May coster girl's ostrich feathers wave coquettishly.

I have seen London twice, and I have spent months attempting to sort out and pigeon hole impressions that crowd each other so close that they are little better than the far-away conception gleaned from Pepys and Dickens. The first time I saw London was on a bright June day, gay with flowers, flags and bunting for the coronation of King George, quite different from the foggy, rainy city I had heard about. This time I came on a dull day, with the spires and domes showing up uncertainly through the soft rain—the London I had heard so much about, and not unpleasant either.

I passed through Whitehall and Westminster, and I looked out at the greater sooted, grimy Palace, and the great Abbey, feeling that none of it was new to me. Later I visited these places again, and my first thoughts were confirmed. I felt I had always known London. The people here in England do not know all the world of meaning in the word heredity. It seems to them almost inconceivable that a person can come from an over-sea Dominion to this great city and automatically into the places his forefathers filled. But it is so.

I had thought to see St. Paul's great pile gleaming in the sun in all the splendour of white stonework and masonry. Instead, I saw it closed round on all sides by buildings, and it was befouled and sooted and grimed from smoke and fogs. Then I knew that therein lay its beauty. Wren had no hand in all this. In those great stone columns and massive cornices the dirt and smoke of centuries have worked a miracle of light and shade. Reliefs are made to stand out amazingly, the great flat walls are softened and marbled in greys and blacks. In places in striking contrast, the rain has washed the stones and kept them white.

The most impressive thing to the Colonial, whose country is in the making and practically new is the ancient history which enshrouds London—to touch an altar rail that was set in the stone floor six centuries ago; to kneel at a shrine where the Templars prayed; to walk on a terrace where Raleigh smoked tobacco from his own Virginia. The Far East loses much of this fascination, for its history is so ancient that you cannot re-people it to suit yourself.

It is not the great Abbey that you marvel at, but the part it has taken in the lives of the English people. Think of the raw stone for the arch under the chisel of the carver, and the spire still masked in scaffolding to which figures in mediaeval costume carry these carven blocks to set them in their places. Think of Westminster with its tonsured monks and its gowned novices. Think of that high window in Whitehall on that day when a king stepped from it to the scaffold above the silent, awed crowd. Always it is the same. In Holyrood, in Edinburgh, a little wainscotted room would have no meaning to one who did not know the story of Rizzio. When that is told the past returns. It is the same in London.

What matters if you watch the two-peaces ticking up on a taxi clock as you go to the Tower? When you enter St. John's Chapel there, all the present is blotted out by the mist of years, and you see in the half light the kneeling figure of the conqueror in mail, and white surtout, praying for this realm, and the accents of others in the chapel seem to be the voices of the Norman priests droning their credos and their pafers. One almost smells the incense from the swinging censors.

The sound of mellow bells steals through the narrow windows, and outside you hear the footsteps of armed men, the stamp of caparisoned war-horses as the conqueror's knights gather to offer thanks for past victory or pray for the success of fresh ventures. What does it matter that the benches are unoccupied and the altar bare of vessels of silver and gold? In the still hours of the night all these ghosts return, and there is the slow chant of voices, the splash of holy water as the stone stoop is filled, the rustle of the vellum leaves of the ponderous missals and the tinkle of coins into the alms boxes.

This is London, a city of ghosts, that will stay for all time.

What Goes in the Missionary Box.—"Whatever are you doing, Molly?" asked mother, as she entered the nursery. For her five-year old daughter was busily stuffing broken toys, headless dolls, ragged clothes, and other odds and ends in an old leather bag. "Oh, mother, can't you see?" cried Molly. "I'm packing a missionary box, just like the ladies do. And it's all right," she added proudly, "I haven't put in a single thing that's any good."

Shag Shaughnessy Up Against a Millionaire Combination

Salary List is Removed in Inter-State and Ottawa Boy Has a Battle to Keep Up Near Top—Season is Run Off on Two Schedules.

The first half of the Inter-State Baseball League will be completed on July 12th. There is a bare chance of Shag Shaughnessy's Warren aggregation beating Ridgeway to the wire, but it is somewhat remote as Ridgeway is four full games in front to date. The second half will be inaugurated on 13th July, and the winners of each end of the schedule will collide in a "little world's series" at the close of the season in September for the league pennant. This system has been adopted by the Central, Virginia, and several other minor leagues.

At Warren, Shaughnessy is up against a pretty strong combination, and that he is up so high in the race is a remarkable tribute to his managerial prowess and good ball playing. The Ridgeway and St. Mary's clubs, which are first and third respectively, are run by millionaire sportsmen and have brought in the best minor league talent obtainable to produce winners. On account of the bad weather encountered last month, the league lifted the player and salary limit and as a result Ridgeway is carrying 20 men and St. Mary's 18 at the present time. Warren, Erie, Bradford and the other towns cannot afford the pace and must be content to trail the high salaried clubs. Throughout the circuit the newspaper critics pay great tribute to Shaughnessy for having a cheap club up in second place. An Olean, N.Y., organ says the ex-Ottawa boy is a regular" big league pilot," and out of his place in the minors.

Bobby Roberts is pitching great ball for Warren and in his last four games has allowed only 15 hits. Dunlop, whom London sent to Cleveland a couple of years ago, is playing a wonderful game at short. Shag changed his style of hitting and he is now clouting over .300. Shaughnessy himself is having a good year with the stick, and up to last Tuesday was stinging the pill at a .325 lick. Dolan is hitting about the same.

Dick Cotter, the former Philadelphia and Chicago National catcher, is doing the backstopping for Warren. Both Smykal and Powers are playing a good fielding game and hitting fair. Warren is drawing better crowds than any town in the league. At Ridgeway and St. Mary's the owners don't give a whoop for the crowds. Their one big object is to win. Some of their men are drawing down as high as $325 a month.

Fred Herbert has rounded to form, and has been pitching gilt-edged ball for Toronto of late. Failure to hit behind him has cost him several well-twirled contests.

Latest statistics show Earle Neale is hitting for .282 with the Cincinnati Reds in 56 games. The ex-London boy is sure delivering.

WITNESSES TELL HOW GUNNER ELLIOT MET HIS DEATH

Interesting Evidence Offered at the Investigation into the Shooting of Peterboro Boy by a Sentry at Drydrock Barracks on Thursday Night Last—Dying Declaration of Gunner Elliott Produced

The evidence offered at the investigation into the shooting of Gunner Russell Elliott at Kingston on Thursday night, was of a very interesting nature. As announced Saturday, the Coroner's jury exonerated Sentry West, who fired the fatal shot.

Gunner Ernest Powell of the 74th Battery, was the first witness called. He said that on Thursday night, in company with the deceased, Gunner Elliott, and Gunner Howden, he had paid a visit to Lake Ontario Park. They returned to the city about 11 o'clock, and after having a lunch at a Chinese restaurant, proceeded on their way to the barracks.

"I was in the lead as we approached the guard," said the witness. "The guard said to me, 'Who goes there?' I said, 'Friend.' Then the guard said, 'Advance friend, and be identified.' I advanced and he (West) recognised me. After I had passed inside I heard West open the bolt of his gun. I waited for Gunner Howden, and when he came up we went on. I did not know what was going to happen. I heard a gun go off, I turned around, and I saw Elliott fall. He was in front of the gate, and had his hand to his side. I heard him say, 'Oh, oh!'"

The Coroner asked the witness if he had heard any disturbances. He replied that he had not. Witness heard the sentry ask Elliott to advance and give the password. The electric light was burning at the street entrance to the barracks. It was 11.45 o'clock when the shooting took place.

To Mr. Rigney witness said that he was the first man to enter into the barracks. Howden followed him, and he heard him challenged. Elliott came third, and he also heard him challenged.

Thought Guard Was Teasing.

Gunner Ivan E. Howden followed with his story, and he corroborated the evidence given by the previous witness regarding the movements of Elliott the night before.

"I heard the guard open the bolt of his gun, but walked on," added the witness.

"What did you think when you heard the guard open the bolt of his gun?" asked the coroner.

"I just thought that he was teasing him."

"Did you expect that there would be any firing?"

"No, I did not."

"I heard the shot fired. I was about five feet away from the barracks at the time I saw Elliott fall. I did not hear him say anything. I did not feel like going back to him, I guess I did not have the courage."

The coroner asked witness if he or Elliott or Powell had been drinking.

"No, sir," said the witness.

"Had you any liquor to drink?"

"No, we did not have any."

"Did you hear Elliott say that he was going to raise a row with the guard?"

"No, I did not."

"Did you hear Elliott make any remarks about the guard—that he was going to fool him?"

"No I did not."

"Was Elliott in the habit of raising a row with the guards?"

"No, sir, he was not."

Witness also told the coroner that Elliott was a quiet man, and that he had his pass in his hand when he was about to go into barracks."

Gunner Powell was recalled, and he also swore that he and his two companions had not been drinking.

Witness was asked by the coroner regarding the instructions given to guards. Did they understand that they had the power to shoot, or were the guards merely regarded as figure heads. Witness said that the guards were given to understand they had the power to shoot. It was the duty of every man to advance and produce his pass when challenged by the guard.

Bullet Split in Two Places.

Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardiner was called. He made a post-mortem examination on the body of Gunner Elliott, and presented a written report to the coroner. The direct cause of death had been due to hemorrhage and shock.

A strange fact was revealed in his evidence, when it was shown that the bullet fired at Elliott had been split in two pieces before entering the body. One piece entered his forearm and the other pierced his left side. The two pieces of bullet were produced and viewed by the jurymen.

Col. Gardiner said that the bullet might have been split into three pieces, as there was two openings in the man's stomach.

"I want to say that Gunner Elliott was absolutely sober," added the witness. "There were no signs of liquor whatever in the body.

Ordered to Shoot at Ground.

Gunner E. H. Chesney said he was sergeant of the guard on Thursday night. He was in the guard house when he heard a shot fired. He immediately turned out the guard on hearing the shot fired. He saw Gunner Elliott lying on the ground. There was quite a bright light from the street lamp at the time. Elliott was lying about eight or ten feet from where the sentry was standing. Elliott did not say anything to him.

Witness was questioned closely by the Coroner as to what he did, but he frankly admitted that he did not make any investigation as to the cause of the shooting.

"Did the shooting strike you as very ordinary.

"I thought it very unusual."

Witness added that when he got to Elliott he found that other soldiers had been caring for him. Asked as to the instructions given guards, witness said that they were ordered to shoot at the ground when a man failed to obey orders and produce their pass.

Capt. Arthur J. Latornell said that he had been acting commander of the batteries at the Ceres' Company's building. He was not present at the time of the shooting. He was questioned regarding the instructions given to guards. He said that they were all instructed to shoot at the ground in such a case as this.

Gave Important Evidence.

Capt. McManus, an infantry instructor, gave very important evidence.

"As an instructor, you would be well posted on the duties of a sentry," said the Coroner. "What are the duties of a sentry?"

"The duties of a sentry as I understand them are very strict;" said the witness, who added that a sentry on giving a challenge three times, and feeling that the party was not a bona fide party, he should take no chances. It must be remembered that the country was at war.

"As far as I know, if he is not satisfied, he has the power to fire."

"If he has time to summon the guard should he fire first and then summon the guard?"

"No, I would not say that. It all depends on what orders he has been given. I do not think the average sentry would shoot to kill. As a soldier I think this man was carrying out orders."

"Are the duties of a sentry more strict in war time than in times of peace?"

"Yes, sir, they are."

Produced Dying Declaration.

Col. Gardiner was at this stage recalled, and presented to the Coroner the dying declaration of Gunner Elliott as already given.

The Coroner pointed out that the evidence of a dying man could be taken as sworn evidence.

Col. Gardiner said that he had taken the statement from Gunner Elliott when he was in a very low condition. The patient rallied a little later, and then the witness read the statement over to him, and as a justice of the peace he had administered the oath.

RIFLE WAS PRODUCED

Gunner Elliott's rifle was produced and officers questioned by the Coroner stated that each sentry was given five rounds of ammunition. The rifle was not loaded, the ammunition being kept in the sentry's bandolier.

Capt. McManus was recalled, and was questioned about the splitting in two of the bullet. He said that the bullet might have been split in three pieces. As an expert, he would say that the bullet struck something before it entered Elliott's body. It might have struck the ground.

Col. Gardiner said that a piece of the bullet struck Elliott's arm, but the member was not fractured.

The fact that the bullet must have struck the ground first established the fact that Gunner West did not point his rifle directly at Gunner Elliott.

Lieut. Russell Williams, of the 73rd Battery, was called to give evidence regarding the inspection he made of the sentries.

ANOTHER SENTRY'S EVIDENCE

Gunner Francis Wilman, of the 75th Battery, who went on duty on what is known as beat No. 2 at 11.30 o'clock the night of the shooting gave evidence.

"I was at the far end of my beat," he said. "I heard West shout, 'Who goes there.' I heard the answer, 'friend', and heard the sentry say, 'Advance and be recognized.' I saw a man holding a pass in his left hand. I could not hear the exact words that passed between this man and the sentry, but I do know that the sentry told the man to come up with his pass. The man replied, stating that if he wanted the pass to come down for it. I watched for about half a minute, and I heard the sentry ask the man if he was coming with his pass. The man replied, stating that he did not have to come down with it, or words to that effect. Then I heard the sentry shout, 'Are you coming with that pass?' The man said 'No'. Then the sentry said 'You won't: won't you?' Then I saw the sentry bring his rifle up pretty near to his shoulder and fire. The sentry was about seven yards from the man when he fired."

TWO BROTHERS IN KHAKI.

The two brothers of Gunner Elliott were not in attendance at the inquest, but while the members of the jury were considering their verdict they waited anxiously outside. They are Lance-Corporal Lewis H. Elliott, and Pte. E. Gordon Ross Elliott, of the 93rd Battalion, now encamped at Barriefield Camp preparing to leave for overseas shortly. They corroborated the evidence of Gunner Powell, who said he thought the deceased had had ten months' training previous to coming to Kingston. The elder brother stated that his late brother had been at Camp Sewell, and had undergone military training there. They stated that their brother had only enlisted three weeks ago, and was preparing to take the rank of Saddler-sergeant as soon as the horses arrived at the barracks and that he was twenty-six years of age.

Coroner Mundell, before giving the case over to the jury, charged very strongly against Gunner West, stating that from the evidence it was to his mind a clear case of manslaughter. He held that Gunner West was not justified in shooting as he did. In discharging West, he stated that the jury had found that he was not responsible, but stated that he hoped that the case would be a warning in the future to guards that although armed with rifles, they should not use them in this way.

Gunner Elliott's dying declaration was as follows:

"I, Russell Elliott, certify that the following is a true statement of the shooting accident: The guard was up to the end of the line about 25 or 30 feet away and I was opposite the gate when challenged. I showed him my pass. He told me to come to where he was. I told him to come to me. I won't go, and he shot me. Guard was not pacing his beat but was standing at the far end when he challenged. He said he would learn me not to fool with the guard, that it served me right. After being halted, held up pass and told him to come and get it. Believing this to be a conscientious statement and knowing that I am going to die."

The statement was taken by Lt.-Col. Gardiner as a Justice of the Peace, and witnessed by Dr. Bogart.

"Do you ever worry, old man?"

"Never."

"How do you work it?"

"In the daytime I am too busy and at night I am too sleepy."

La Tena's Animal Shows Make a Hit

La Tena's big wild animal show which arrived in this city at 4.30 o'clock this mornin ggives its first performance at the Fair Grounds this afternoon at 2 o'clock and proved a big success in the line of show entertainments. The show is bright and clean and overflowing with genuine arts of worth-while quality and was pleasing to young and old alike, with its excellent programme of novel numbers, more than one of which would have done credit to a much more pretentious show. Everything about the show was clean and well regulated, the costuming and staging of the various acts was beyond reproach and the entire outfit proved one of quality and considerable merit.

Both in the quality of the programme and in the show, La Tena's shows proved a genuine credit to the show business as a whole.

From the opening parade to the final number there was not a dull moment for somewhere, either in the ring, on the stage or within the big steel animal arena, an act worthy of notice was in progress. A feature that proved well worth the price of admission alone was provided by Picard's seals, an aggregation of trained animals that would be hard to equal anywhere. They play ball, play in a band and one old fellow actually succeeds in walking a tight rope unaided. In vaudeville, Picard's seals would be termed a big time act, as an attraction the number has few equals.

Other animal acts worthy of more than passing notice were Archie Dunlap and his performing elephants, Johanning's bears and last, but by not means least, Florine's lions. The programme also included a very clever troupe of wire walkers who did many novel tricks and a gifted family of contortionists besides a number of aerial performers of merit. Trained dogs, a small army of clowns and a host of other attractions added the necessary variety and all in all it was a very fine entertainment.

Congress of Clowns.

There is a congress of merry old clowns and many laugh provoking stunts have been prepared to excite the risibilities of the most sedate.

JAPAN'S FIRST GLASS.

That observation car would have done credit to any railroad in the world. A Japanese fellow-passenger, an official in the Japanese Ministry of Communication, was amused at our expressions of delight.

"Of course this is all very recent," he explained. "Five years ago we had nothing like this. Forty-five years ago there was not a single car nor a single mile of track in the whole of Japan. "Why," he laughed, "I can remember the first jerky little trains that were run on the first line to be opened—the one between Tokio and Yokohama. Glass was a new thing to the Japanese, and there were a great many windows broken and heads bumped those first few weeks. Passengers persisted in trying to put out their heads without first raising the windows. Finally the glass smashing became so expensive, and there were so many complaints over bruised and cut heads, that the company was forced to paint a white bar on every window to teach passengers the nature of glass."

Which story we could appreciate, for we had already noticed in the corner of a railroad yard a little old car with white bars painted across the windows. Some of these cars, our companions told us, are still used as third-class conveyances on newly opened branch lines—the people do not quite understand glass.—Christian Herald.

A Special Gossard Corset for Tennis

TENNIS is no longer a young girl's game. Women of every age and figure play this lively and fascinating game. Some of the best tennis players enjoy the game more and are able to play longer, because they wear this newest Special Gossard.

It conforms to the rules of the game, and will go through the most trying set without making you conscious of it being there with you, to keep you cool and your body supported.

The elastics are full of live rubber---the material, an open mesh, is flexible; so are the bones.

The bust line is not high, and no amount of exercise will cause the Corset to slip-up on your body---a most uncomfortable sensation.

Tennis is popular this season, and the women who wear this Corset will enjoy every set played. It is ideal for this sport. Your size will be sent you or you may be fitted by our expert Corsetiere to the model which suits you best.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE POPULAR WITH CHILDREN

Are the play grounds popular with the children? Well, on the hottest day last week there were over two hundred children playing games, using the swings and just being happy and contented generally at the King Edward play grounds from nine oclock in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon. And some of them didn't want to stop to go home for dinner. The same report may also be made of the Central play grounds, although because of the less crowded neighbourhood the attendance there was about 150 a day.

And not only the older children like the play grounds, but as many as eight mothers with their babies have been present at one time—the wee tots to play in the sand while the mothers became acquainted with the supervisors and watched the other children at their play.

At the Central school Miss Littlefield has already begun her folk dancing classes, which are proving most popular with the girls.

The swimming classes for the boys are already under way, Mr. Gilbert having a class of twenty-five boys at the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool on Mondays and Thursdays at 11 o'clock, and Mr. Tillotson having his classes on Tuesdays and Fridays at the same hour.

With such a successful beginning there is no doubt that the play grounds in Peterborough have come to stay. Surely the ladies of the committee who went out in the face of opposition even from their own ranks, to sell carnations and to collect rags, and the men of the Association who are now trying to increase the Association membership, have their reward in the knowledge that many little children are going to have a safer and happier summer in the Peterborough play grounds.

No Danger Done in Aeroplane Raids

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—No one was injured and no damage done excepting that windows were smashed in two raids on the coast of England by German aeroplanes yesterday, the War Office announced to-day. The first raider yesterday morning was chased away before he could drop bombs. The second German plane that appeared off the coast before midnight, dropped seven explosive bombs and escaped.

Asquith Introduces Home Rule Parliament

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—Premier Asquith this afternoon formally proposed in the Commons the plan for an Irish Home Rule Parliament framed by David Lloyd George, stating that it had met with the approval of Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond, leaders of opposing Irish factions.

German Sub. Captain Boasts of His Trip

Examiner Special:

BALTIMORE, Maryland, July 10.—In a formal statement at noon today Captain Paul Koonig, commander of the giant submarine Deutschland, declared the vessel which arrived in Baltimore to-day will be followed soon by several others. The first of them, he said, would be the "Bremen." He said he had no trouble eluding British warships.

Supplementing a written statement the captain this afternoon told how his vessel had lain at the bottom of the English Channel one whole night, how he and his crew played the gramophone beneath te waves, and how they had lived on champagne and the best of foods, how they had openly sailed 3,800 miles, submerging only a few times for a few hours, and doing only ninety miles under the surface during the entire trip.

Great Britain to Make Quick Move

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng. (Special Cable), July 10.—Although granting great admiration for skill, German promoters and sailors who succeeded in submarining from Germany to Baltimore, the British people believe its chief value is its advertisement of German enterprise.

"The power that smashed Germany's submarine warfare, and placed one hundred fighting submarines hors de combat, can be relied on to speedily cripple submarine merchantmen activtiies,'" said one high naval authority to-day. "While these vessels may be able to make one trip, possibly two or three, they cannot long elude the vigilance and resourcefulness of the British navy."

In the lobbies of the Commons this afternoon members of the Government said this new move of Germany would be met in a swift and effective manner.

It is recalled that British submarines have frequently made trans-Atlantic trips under own power.

Dr. D. S. Abbott, Pure Food and Drug Commissioner for Texas, condemns the use of egg albumen in Baking Powder.

Interstate Grocer, St. Louis, Jan. 24, 1914.

"Albumen is not a necessary constituent of baking powder," states Dr. Abbott in discussing his decision. "Its use in baking powder is to produce a foam when water is added, for the purpose of deceiving the consumer with respect to its quality. In this respect albumen serves a fraudulent purpose."

According to the Department's statement, albumen in powder forms a slight membrane over the mixture made when water is added to the powder, and, as the gas is generated from the powder, it is held beneath the membrane, thereby causing the mixture to rise rapidly. Sometimes there may be less gas really generated from the powder than is generated in other brands of powder where the egg albumen is not used. Because of the very small quantity that is used it serves as no healthy ingredient, and hence the department has forbidden its use.

More Trouble Ahead For Elmer Hicks

PORT HOPE, July 10.—Difficulties are increasing for Elmer Hicks, who deserted from a Barriefield battalion and accompanied by a young Kingston girl, went into the United States, where they were arrested and later confined in Canton jail.

The American police have found that Hicks is suspected of abandoning a young girl in Depeyster, N.Y., some time ago. It appears that they had been living together as man and wife, and that the woman has a young child. Both mother and child are now being cared for by the Town Council of Depeyster. A warrant charging Hicks with the earlier offence was sworn out after news was received at Depeyster of his arrest by the immigration officials and will be served after the federal investigation is concluded. In the meantime both Hicks and Miss Hawkins will remain locked up in Canton jail.

Baby Enters World Under Sad Auspicices

KINGSTON, July 10.—A four months' old baby, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead, are serving terms in the Portsmouth Penitentiary was removed from the institution to a local institution and will be taken care of until such times as the parents have been liberated. The case is a pitiful one. The father and mother were sent to the penitentiary last February to serve long sentences for cruelty to one of their children and while in the institution the mother gave birth to another child.

PETERBORO BOY TELLS OF THE YPRES FIGHT

the following letter from her brother, Pte. J. F. Hardwicke, 27th Canadian Battalion, and now in hospital in England.

Dear Sister,—A few lines to let you know that I am improving and able to be around on my feet a little, although I have got greatly weakened by having been in bed for over two weeks. I have had no word from Charlie and won't have now for three weeks, as the mail is all stopped for that time, commencing to-day, so it looks good to us. Our armies have been preparing so long for the offensive and the time must be close at hand. Too long have we played with Mr. Fritz; his punishment is past due, and the sins he has to account for are many ("legion"). We as Canadian have suffered very heavily at his hands. Our fairest and best of our young manhood have given their life's blood on those crimson fields of Belgium, many a mother's, many a widow's, many a sweetheart's, and thousands of fatherless one's hearts are sore to-day in our fair Canadian homes, looking for the one who has gone never to return. All these things has Mr. Boch got to account for, and he knows no braver men, heroes they all are, who fought him back time after time in the memorable two weeks of this month. We made him pay a dear price for his attack, but we lost some of our best in doing so Canada should be proud of her boys. They upheld the honour of their native land. Experienced officers say, "They never saw troops advance to attack as coolly under a terrific rain of shells" as did our Canadian boys at Ypres. Well, the British Tommies are always glad to work with us and the Jocks and us have always been fast friends, as we have been in a few mixups together, always coming out on top.

You will have read the account of what happened in that eventful two weeks in the Ypes salient. I have seen no account myself, but I have seen days in the midst of it before they got me, and it was simply hell, with all Satan's and Kaiser Bill's (they through her friendship for Miss Elizabeth Marbury, who is associated with Mr. Slocum in the management of "Nobody Home". It is highly appreciated in every city because of its artistic and unusual appeal. The chorus is composed of girls who represent distinct types of American and European beauties.

Many of the popular numbers of the score are already familiar to local music lovers. "The Mazie Melody" is now accepted as one of the best one-steps of the season. Other numbers which will no doubt become popular here are "A Question of Bait," "You Know and I Know," "Why take a Sandwich to a Banquet," "Keep Moving," and many others. The book of "Nobody Home" is by Guy Boltop and Paul Rubens, and the music by Jerome Kern.

with the Bulgar and Josef, with the Sultan for the goat) cunning devilish devices mixed up, "sausages, whizzbangs, rum ajrs, coal boxes." We actually thought sometimes he was throwing locomotives at us. We got all the French did not get at Verdun, put we stuck; what we lost we took back with heavy interest. They have to hand it to the boys, and I am proud to have been with them, and it's no idle boast.

But then the other side is the tragedy. So many of the pals you knew, the boys who chummed with you, who fell at your side, not a murmur or complaint. Their memories will not be forgotten. May their souls rest in peace, as their bones will never have peace in Belgium clay until this mighty struggle is over and victory is perched on the united flags of the allies.

I have a few lines which suggested themselves to me as I think of the many wooden crosses with R.I.P. on them, looking so solitary in all the turmoil of battle:

"Somewhere in France" there is a nameless grave,
Where sleeps some mother's son amid the brave.
A cross with letters twain doth mark the place,
And they the hand of Time shall soon efface.
No storied urn, nor animated bust
Shall hold this humble, friendless soldier's dust.
For him no cheering crowd, no pealing bell,
But he will reck not, and shall sleep as well.
No volley shall be fired, no Last Post sound;
But yet his last long sleep shall be profound.
And nobly is this spot as though he lay
Amid the mighty in the Abbey, grey,
Only one of the "rank and file," but he heard the call,
And for his country he loved so well
He gave his all.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW

The Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—After perusing the building by-law of the City of Peterborough one is struck by the wisdom of the Council who appointed the City Engineer as Building Inspector without an increase in salary. For to my mind the building by-law is an absolute joke, it is narrow in scope and weak in administration and confines its very limited operations to the fire limits. One would imagine that fire was the only thing that the citizens need be protected against.

The by-law contains little or nothing of any value from a hygienic viewpoint and is therefore unworthy of a city of the size and importance as Peterborough. It contains no provision for enforced sewer and W.C. connections, even when the sewer is on the street, hence the trouble and expense to a great extent of a crude and insanitary method of collecting night soil.

It makes no provision for floor space, air space or window space and there is no provision for ventilation of any description such as a movable top sash in windows. There is none for the erection or drainage of stable or any to prevent the erection of rear dwellings. There is no supervision of interior alterations in dwellings or of rooms over stores so to insure the safety of the buildings or the health of the occupants, except that which protects the external walls. Mr. Editor it would require to much of your valuable space to adequately criticise Peterborough's mythical building by-law, but enough has been said to prove conclusively that Peterborough is in need of a real live building by-law for regulating the erection and to provide for the safety of all buildings and the health of its occupants.

Yours for a healthy as well as a beautiful city.

A. HOPE,
704 George street,
City.

CONSCIENCE IS CLEAR SAYS WEST

Special to the Examiner.

KINGSTON, July 10.—Speaking to his friends, Gunner Joseph West, the Toronto young man who shot Gunner Russell Elliott of Peterborough, last Thursday night, when he refused to produce a late pass at the Barracks' gate, said that his conscience was clear in the matter, and that he was free of all blame. He held that he simply did his duty as he saw it.

The Coroner's Jury has exonerated him from all blame.

MILITARY NEWS

their worth before being promoted. The men were practically all secured from within the limits of the district and the esprit de corps that has since developed was what the 93rd was built on. Constant hard work was required, but for the name of their home town and county every person worked with a will. The physique of the men required personal attention, and only the best of man were kept on, the slightly unfit ones being gradually weeded out. By using discretion and good judgment the conduct of the men reached an unusually high plane, and to-day there are few marks on the conduct sheets of the 93rd Battalion.

The band, under Bandmaster Hughes, is admitted to be second to none within the camp limits. The machine gun section, signalling section, and all of the various branches, have already reached their maximum efficiency.

This grand organization will soon be going forward to take its next step on the way to the front, and the regret at its loss is now being felt. The camp will to a man regret the leaving of the 93rd for Col. Johnston is taking away one of the finest battalions of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Vote in Perth Will Be Small

STRATFORD, July 10. — Despite strong organizations and efforts of a host of workers for both parties the vote in the city and throughout the county in to-day's North Perth legislative bye-election will not be large. Both parties claim victory.

Big Musical Comedy Coming

"Nobody Home" With an all Star Cast at Grand Saturday

This clever comedy, with its jolly tuned, unique dances, and bright lines, kept New York, Boston and Chicago singing, dancing, and laughing for nearly two years. The cast to be seen at the Grand is headed by Charles Richardson, who created the leading comedy role in London. He will be remembered here in the original "Spring Maid," "Rose Maid," "Little Miss Fix-It" and "Sweethearts." Other prominent names include Zoe Barnett, Harry MacDonough, Mabel Withee, Roydon Keith, Della Niven, Low Christie, Roy Torrey, Helen Jost, John Paulston and Mark Nescott.

The story of "Nobody Home" tells of Freddy Popple, of Appleton, England, who comes to New York to visit his brother, Vernon, New York's most famous dancing teacher, and of his winning the love of the prima donna of the Winter Garden, Tony Miller, who has been much sought after by the wealthiest men of the Metropolis. Freddy is a shy whimsical chap of the "Silly-ass" type, very slow and calculating and as played by Charles McNaughton, is one of the most delightful characters of the production.

One of the special added attractions of the piece is the dancing of Bebe Layman and Sylvia Chaulsae, who created nothing less than a sensation in New York last summer while playing an extended engagement at the "Palace Theatre." The famous Vernon C. Castle is quoted as saying they were "the greatest dancers in team in America" and added that the statemen included Mrs. Castle and himself.

The scenery and stage decorations were planned and designed by Miss Elsie de Wolfe, designer for the smart set of New York. This is Miss Wolfe's first work of the kind and it was done

THE POULTRY ASSOCIATION

Next Meeting Will be Held on Wednesday Night

The Peterborough Poultry Association held their regular meeting on June 14, ex-President Kelly in the chair.

When the regular routine business was finished a number of birds were put on exhibition, the judges being Kenneth Lang and Alex. Elliott (two of the youngest and brightest members in the Association) assisted by some of the more experienced birdmen of the city.

English Game Bantam cock—1st, A. Elliott; 2nd, K. Lang.

English Game Bantam hen—1st A. Elliott.

The next regular meeting will be held in the Labour Hall Wednesday, July 12th, when all the members are expected to be present to receive ex-President Kelly's experience in "Preparing Birds for Exhibition." No memeber of the Association can afford to miss this, as Mr. Kelly has had a long and successful career at the principal exhibitions of Canada.

The meeting will commence sharp at 8 p.m.

DEATH OF A FORMER PROMINENT LOCAL RESIDENT

Mr. George Stethem Passes Away at Fort Francis.

Word has been received of the death of a former well known resident of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Geo. Stethem, who died at Fort Francis, Ont., on Saturday. Mr. Stethem lived in Peterborough for many years and was widely known and highly respected in this district. For a long time he was engaged in the hardware business here, and since going to Fort Francis occupied an important civic position. Major G. A. Stethem of 141st Battalion, is a son of the deceased, while another son has been officially reported missing since early last year, having gone overseas with the first contingent. One daughter, Mrs. Reynolds of Winnipeg, and another, Mrs. Guy, Vancouver, also survive. The funeral, which will be strictly private, will be held here tomorrow.

SEWER COST DROPPED WHEN ENGINEER SAW CEMENT WAS MISS

Mr. Paul Mercer at Civic Probe Swore He Found Three Hundred Ninety-Five Bags Gone From Some Street Works—When Hole Was Plugged Work Was Done at a Much Reduced Cost-

Montreal, July 10.—City Engineer Paul Mercier opened another page in the Bordeaux sewer case when he told the court presided over by Mr. Justice Panneton how cement and other materials belonging to the city for use in the construction of sewers in Bordeaux ward, had disappeared, and how after the leakages had been discovered, the work was continued by the city at a cost which in some cases was one hundred per cent less than what it was before. Mr. Mercier said that he was engineer in chief of the city, and had held that appointment since 1st Jan., 1916. He said that as a result of complaints that had been made respecting the building of sewers in Bordeaux ward, he had been requested by the Board of Control to make a private enquete, and the result of it had been the instituting of the present enquiry. He produced two reports that he had made on the enquiry, one dated the 1st of May, and the second the 15th of May last.

He explained how his department was divided into three services, one for roads, a second for sewers, and a third for aqueducts. An engineer was in each division charged with the construction of sewers, and the engineer in charge of the sewer work now being inquired into at Bordeaux, was Mr. Amireault. The foremen were Wilfrid Menard, brother of the Alderman, and Armand Major, who Ald. Menard the other day testified had been recommended by him.

THE SEWER STATEMENT.

Mr. Aime Geoffrio, K.C., counsel for the city, asked Mr. Mercier fro a statement of the sewer work that had been carried out at Bordeaux during the past two years, and he produced it, with dates and particulars along with the reports of foremen in charge. He said that in the North division there was a big storehouse belonging to the city and in charge of an accountant, Mr. Decelles, who business was to register the requests for material, etc., made by the foreman. The taking away of the material was registered, and when the work was over, and the material was brought back, it was also marked down in the books.

Mr. Geoffrion then questioned as to the quantity of cement took to do a certain amount of and how much was used on the construction work at Bordeaux normally took about one bag of for one yard of work. Mr. said that as soon as he received plaint that everything was not as it should be in the use of ma for the Bordeaux sewers, he that othe cement should be

THE CEMENT MISSING

"And what was the result?" Mr. Geoffrion.

The result was that cement h appeared in the following qua on work in the following street

On Bois de Boulogne street, 7 of cement were missing.

On Valmont street, 76 bag missing.

On Bourage street, 60 bags accounted for.

On Viel street, 176 bags had peared.

City engineer Mercier said satisfied that the sacks mentio unaccounted for had not been the construction work because had they would have made the too thick, and the results would been bad. He was satisfied, too the bags of cement had not be turned and not marked

The part of Mr. Mercier's dealing with the suspicion that thing was wrong, and the rep of the old foremen by new fo with the result that the wor carried on by the city at a co ably reduced cost, was especially esting.

He said that as soon as th got an inkling of what was p the foreman on the Bordeaux work were suspended. One of tho pended was Mr. Gordien Menard father of the alderman. Whe foremen were suspended, other their places and the price of the immediately dropped.

LOCAL ORANGE LODGES ATTEND DIVINE WORSHIP

LIST OF LODGES

On Sunday evening, Orangemen to the number of about three hundred attended divine worship in George Street Methodist Church where an interesting discourse was delivered by the Rev. R. G. Peever. The Orangemen assembled at their quarters on Simcoe street and headed by the band of the Salvation Army, marched to the church. The parade was headed by the juvenile lodges, followed by L.O.L. No. 80, L.O.L. No. 1175, L.O.L. No. 50 in charge of the district directors.

The Nassau lodge and visiting members of various district lodges followed next while the Black Preceptory brought up the rear.

Mr. E. F. Reid, County Master and Mr. J. H. Spence, District Master were in charge of the parade. After the service the lodges again reassembled and paraded back to the Orange hall headed by the band. The fine weather brought out a large crowd which congregated along the line of march.

AT THE CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Peever in extending a hearty welcome to the Orangemen made special reference to the junior members of the Order who were well represented. He enaracterized the Order as the "vigilance committee of Protestantism" and said that the organisation represented liberty of action and thought. His text was taken from Mark 7:6-7, "This people honour eth me with their lips but their heart is far from me."

"Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

The speaker reviewed the history of the Orange Order and its inception. The chief principle, he said, was Christianity. The Order stood for intellectual freedom as well as freedom from domination of any kind. We do not propose to have the church, priest or pastor stand sponsor for man. To Christ and Christ alone we are responsible.

Our weakness attributed to Protestantism is denominationalism. The day may come when this great body of liberty loving worshippers of the Protestant faith will be cemented together in one common bond of unity. It was never intended that we should "rend the body of Christ in several parts," said the speaker in conclusion.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Job didn't get away with all the patience. Moses didn't corner the meekness market, Solomon didn't know it all and, by hokey, Ananias wasn't the only liar.

RUSSIAN ARMIES ARE STILL SWEEPING ON

clared that it would be impossible to attempt a new offensive on a large scale without reinforcements of at least a quarter of a million men.

The Roumanian Government, according to a Berne despatch, has declined an invitation from the German and Austrian Governments to participate in a conference of the Danube powers.

SUCCESS IN GALICIA.

Meanwhile the successes of the Russians in Galicia are preparing the way for a great victory in that sector. Yesterday Gen. Letchitsky captured the important railroad junction of Delatyn, west of Kolomea, and in the same stroke cut off Gen. von Bothmer from his principal base of supplies. A vast amount of booty fell into the Russians' hands with the capture of the city.

In Southern Bukowina the Austrians have rallied and pressed across the Moldava River, according to Vienna.

BOTH ARMIES THREATENED.

A Reuter's despatch from Petrograd says that the Russians have crossed the Stokhod River at Ugli which is approximately half way between the railways running to Kovel from Sarny and Rovno. The despatch adds that inasmuch as the Austro-German forces defending Kovel the chiefly concentrated along these lines, the Russians move in the centre threatens both groups.

"The Russians are masters of the whole triangle comprising Rafalowka, Manevitchie and Kolki, says the despatch.

weeks, especially to handle the business of under-water liners. The latter company has a pier and warehouse, in which are stored the goods to be loaded on the Deutschland for her return trip.

The Deutschland is a new commerce carrier, built in Bremen, and sent here on a purely commercial mission, according to Henry G. Hilken, the senior member of the Schumacher concern. She belongs to the Ozean Rhederei Limited (Ocean Navigation Company, Limited), and was launched at Kiel in March.

DIMENSIONS OF BOAT

The undersea liner, Mr. Hilken understands, is about 315 feet long and thirty feet beam, and is propelled by two great Deisel oil engines. She is as large, if not larger, than any of the German naval submarines, and carried 750 tons deadweight or cargo. As to details of her construction, Mr. Hilken said he was lacking in information.

Mr. Hilken is an American and his firm has been in business here operating ships under the American flag since 1824.

To whom the Deutschland's cargo is consigned Mr. Hilken said he did not know, but he believed it was going to a number of concerns badly in need of dyestuffs.

When she will return, whether it is planned to have her make regular trans-Atlantic trips, Mr. Hilken refused to discuss.

"This project was conceived," he said, "by German commercial interests who wanted to reopen trade with the United States. We need some of Germany's commodities and Germany needs some of ours. It is a purely commercial proposition and that is all there is to it."

Six months ago came first reports that Germany was preparing to put into the trans-Atlantic trade a line of submarines. London cable reports told of the organization of a company to inaugurate such a service, and English experts were quoted as saying they felt no surprise at the announcement of the plans.

RECORD CROWD IS EXPECTED

Arrangements are practically completed for the celebration of the glorious twelveth of July. To-day a merry-go-round is being erected on the market square and judging by the number of refreshment booths that are being constructed a large crowd is anticipated. With fair weather the crowd may easily reach ten or twelve thousand people. Ample accommodation has been provided in anticipation of a record breaking gathering. The churches throughout the city have arranged to serve meals.

HOLIDAY SEASON HARD ON BLACKLISTERS

The holiday season is apparently a source of temptation for the blacklister and, at this morning's session of the Police Court, another local man was assessed ten dollars for being under the influence of liquor whilst on the index. The prisoner had procured two bottles of the forbidden nectar from one of Lindsay's hostelries.

A porter from a local hotel appeared after a week's remand on the charge of breaking into his proprietor's bar and stealing liquor. The prisoner elected to be tried summarily and put in a plea of not guilty. Mr. Ruddy who appeared for the accused was not ready to go on with the case, and the case will be tried on Thursday. Application for bail was made by the prisoner's counsel.

FIRST MEETING OF THE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

The Board of Agriculture of West Peterborough as the Farmers' Institute will be known henceforth, held a meeting in the Council chamber on Saturday afternoon to complete the election of officers postponed from the annual meeting at R. N. Scott's farm a few weeks ago. The new Board is as follows:

President—Mr. J. A. McGregor.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Clayton Taylor.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Wilbert Roseborough.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. A. B. Mann.
Auditors—Mr. John Riddell and Mr. Jos. Barnard.

This constituted practically the entire business considered and the new Board is well prepared to continue the work of the Farmers' Institute.

CAKES AND PIES FOR 52ND BOOTH

Will those who are contributing cakes and pies for the benefit of the 52nd Battery Booth on July 12th, kindly send their contributions to Mr. E. F. Mason's Grocery Store, 429 George street, before 6 p.m. on July 11th. The purpose of the booth is to raise funds to purchase a Victrola for the boys of the 52nd.

Upset on Stoney Lake With a Can of Cream and Didn't Loose Single Dr

Upsets at Stoney Lake are part of the programme, so is the regular duty of going after milk. But when a canoe overturns, including a can of cream and not a drop of it is lost, then you have something of an anomaly in milk delivery. The lake was rather rough yesterday when Miss Vera Stock, daughter of Mr. Harry Stock, of Juniper, and Master Jim Pogue, son of Rev. Robt. Pogue, were returning from McCracken's with the day's supply of cream. The youngsters were apparently both amphibious, for their canoe overturned the first they thought of was the cream, was immediately secured and h home like the message to Garcia water was no strange element to young people. Jack Hunter pu from McCracken's in his laun help them and other persons in were near at hand. It isn't quite whether the young folk were ed, but the main fact is that paddled home in their canoe brought all the cream.

LOST IN JUNGLE.

Intense excitement prevailed in the west end of the town on Saturday, when a little girl of five years old, the daughter of a resident of Homewood avenue, disappeared from her home. After several hours' search by an organized posse of men and dogs she was finally located near daylight on Sunday morning in the thick jungle of burdock and other weeds on Hunter street west, near Walton. The parents were naturally overjoyed to recover their lost darling. This should be a warning to other parents, as this spot is particularly dangerous, being the haunt of ferocious wild animals of all kinds.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

TAKE NO RISKS

GLASSES that you buy ready made, trying them on till you get a pair with which you can see fairly well, are a positive danger. Both lenses being equal strength, and very few people having eyes of equal power, one eye is going to be injured by using a lens of wrong focus. It doesn't pay to take such a serious chance. This was obtained under an agreement with the Water Commission.

Illuminaied Balloons At Sacred Heart Social

A feature of the lawn social at the Church of the Sacred Heart grounds to-morrow afternoon and evening will be the ascension of three or four balloons, the biggest one at ten o'clock. The first will be sent away about 6.30 as a diversion during the supper hour. The balloonists will be Messrs. Will. Grady and Gene Hurtubise, both of whom promise to suspend another bright star or two in the constellation of Ursa Major, following which Mr. Hurtubise will reach up and hand the great bear an original Hurtubise "bear hug." At that if the "Bear" swings a few feet lower to-morrow night "Gene" ought to catch him without unduly stretching himself, and rescue his paper twinklers.

DOUBTS REPORT OF HIS SON'S DEATH

And Letter From Private Max Breckenridge Increases the Uncertainty

The family and friends of Private Max Breckenridge have refused to believe the unofficial report of his death as currently circulated, and from uncertain and decidedly dubitable sources. As far as can be learned, his father has received no report from the Record Office, and it is a strange fact that the first word he received is said to have been from neighbours. A letter dated June 22nd was received from Private Breckenridge this morning by one of his Peterborough friends. He was safe and sound upto that date, and there is nothing authentic regarding him since that time. Hence, his father to-day decided to regard his son as safe, believing that the news recently reported was only unreliable rumour. The citizens generally will join in the wish and prayer that Private Breckenridge is unwounded and safe.

BEECH—LAWRENCE.

Mr. W. J. Beech of the Globe Tailoring Co., who have a branch at 439 George street, Peterborough was quietly married to Miss R. M. Lawrence of Newport, Mon., England at the home of the Rev. R. B. Cochrane, 44 Albany Road, Toronto on July 3rd, 1916. The bride who sailed from England on June 23rd on the S.S. Grampian (Allan Line) arrived in Quebec, July 1st and Toronto, July 3rd a.m. and the ceremony took place at 9 p.m.. Mr. Charles Gray Keary, Toronto and Miss Myrtle Holland, Toronto acted as groomsman and bridesmaid. Mr. Louis Green (Globe Tailoring Co) also attended. After the ceremony the couple left for a short trip to Niagara, etc.

There were many handsome presents from England, particularly from Newport, Mon., where both bride and groom are well known, the bride being associated with Emmanuel Congregational church for a number of years. Needless to say the bride brings with her the best wishes of her many friends from the Old Land and that their future happiness may be attained will be the wish of the many Peterborough friends of the bridegroom.

Last Minute War Dispatches

LONDON, July 10—

"The Present war, the Prime Minister said, was one dominating factor compelling acquiescence in preparations."

He pointed out that the plan of settlement would be in effect only until a year after the end of the war, when it could be extended or rejected by parliament.

BERLIN, July 10—

The War Office also admitted that the French have obtained lodgement in the village of Biaches, about a mile from Perrone.

GERMANS ARE EVACUATING THE CITY OF PERONNE

The Italians Have Made A Number of Important Gains

ANOTHER WINTER TRENCH WARFARE

NEW YORK, July 8.—Miss Carita Spencer, National Chairman of the Surgical dressing Committee of the National Civic Federation, has returned after spending four months in the European war zone, investigating the manner in which the dressing have been distributed to the Allies by the International Committee, of which Mrs. Mary Willard Hatch is Chairman. She is the first American woman to visit the western fronts of the British, French, Belgian, and Italian armies, and in addition interviewed the Queen of Belgium at La Panne and Pope Benedict in the Vatican.

While many of the officials she met hoped that peace would be brought about this year, the prevailing opinion, Miss Spencer said, was that the troops would spend another Winter in the trenches.

"The morale of the allied armies," she continued, "was excellent, and when I left the war zone three weeks ago the troops were ready, both physically and mentally, for the big offensive movement which they had been expecting since the middle of May.

"The British, Belgian, Italian, and French soldiers are all fine types of fighting men and impress the observer in their different ways, but the vivacity and magnetism of the poilu stands out above it all. France has been desolated by this war but she has found her soul and a new nation will be developed afterward.

The Queen of Belgium received me in the kindest manner, and I was practically the guest of the Government in Belgium for two weeks. I obtained a private audience with the Pope through Monsignor Samperre, and was treated most courteously at the Vatican. Pope Benedict shook hands with me in a simple, democratic manner and discussed the work that was being done by the various American organizations in the war in which he expressed his great interest. He hoped that peace would come to Europe soon.

"Our surgical dressings," Miss Spencer went on to say, "are being distributed to 600 hospitals in France and Belgium from the bureau in Paris to which they are sent direct from New York at the rate of 250,000 a month. Not only the chief surgeons in France, but also a number of Colonels, Majors and Captains have written to the Paris bureau to thank our organization.

"During my wanderings I was frequently within sound of the booming of the big guns, and one morning, near Ypres, when I was at breakfast in a charcoal cellar, a piece of a shell penetrated the wall of my bedroom and struck the cot on which I had been sleeping. When I went up to the room the piece of steel was imbedded in the wooden floor, and I dug it out with an axe to bring home with me as a souvenir.

"The most interesting section of the war zone I visited was the Italian front in the Dolomite region, where the line consists of 600 kilometers of what is really a mountain chain. The way in which the Italians managed to drag their artillery up these almost perpendicular peaks is wonderful."

TORONTO WOMAN STRICKEN AT PICNIC

ST. CATHARINES, July 10.—Stricken with apoplexy while attending the Sunday school picnic of the Olivet Baptist Church, of Toronto, at Port DaDomie, on Friday, Mrs. Charlotte Richards was brought to the home of her brother, Abraham Fisher, this city, and she passed away this morning. The remains will be taken to-morrow to Toronto, where four small children survive. The deceased woman's husband is at present at the battle front in Belgium with the 70th Battalion, C.E.F.

A little powdered alum rubbed on gilt braid or lace, after it has been brushed well, will restore the brightness. Alum should be left on for a few hours, then brushed off.

Grapefruit seeds will grow and make a pretty ornament for the breakfast table in winter.

Russians Continue To Drive Back Enemy Along The Entire Front

Berlin Marvels at Stream of Men and Munitions Adversary on the East is Directing at Teutonic Line---Right Wing of General Brusiloff's Armies Drives Back Enemy from the Styr to the Stokhod Line of Fortifications and Advances Fifteen Miles, Following Them Beyond the River in Swift Pursuit North of Lutsk.

MANY PRISONERS CAPTURED

PETROGRAD, July 11.—(Official)—Russians have crossed the Stockhod River at many points, and are closely pursuing the enemy south of Polessi.

The eyes of the Germans are turned to-day toward the eastern rather than the western front. The weight of the first onslaught in the west is believed to have been fully estimated, and in spite of whatever surprises British strategy still may have in store, public and expert opinion here is confident of the outcome. It is believed that the Sixth army and reserves have the situation well in hand on the Somme front and that nothing can interfere with the progress of the Verdun campaign. In the east, however, a great general offensive has burst forth all along the line from Riga to Roumania. Wave after wave of Russian flesh and steel is rolling against the Teuton dyke which stretches across the Russian provinces. Thrust follows thrust in constant succession, and no sooner do the Germans succeed in walling the advance at one threatened point than another menaces.

The most striking results thus far manifested have been in the leadership and distribution of the forces of the Central Powers rather than in the actual movement of the contending armies. With the exception of General Pflanzer, commanding a small group at the extreme southern end of the line, the Austro-Hungarian units are everywhere interlarded by Germans, who have furnished reserves to bolster up particularly threatened points.

At the very outset the German leaders have been astonished at the recuperative powers of the Russians and their freely flowing reservoirs of both men and munitions. Time after time it seemed as if the Russians must be nearing their last resources in shells and reserves. Time and again correspondents at Austrian headquarters reported that the Russian troops were losing their vim and striking power, only to chronicle a day or two later a new onslaught with fresh troops, freely supported by artillery.

Despite the Russian gains, however, which, when marked on the map of the eastern front make a comparatively small showing for such a colossal expenditure of blood and iron, no uneasiness is manifested here. The general offensive on all fronts simultaneously has compelled the Germans to discontinue their favourite railroad strategy, but the strategic defence, which the Germans have deliberately chosen on the eastern and general western fronts, has so far proved adequate to hold up the Allies' offensive and has not interfered with the continuance of the German assault against Verdun. To such an extent is this true that the Germans still retain the strategic initiative and show no indication of relaxing their grip on the great French fortress.

Coop and Lent's Circus Will Exhibit at Peterboro

Thursday, July 20, Peterborough will be the Mecca for thousands of visitors from the surrounding country for the "Coop and Lent" All New United Monster Shows, will exhibit there on that date.

These exhibitions are completely new this year and no other organization that has ever been seen hereabouts covers so broad and comprehensive a field of up-to-date Circus diversions.

The large and varied performances naturally demand an arena of vast dimensions, utilising three rings, two stages and a spacious hippodrome track, and obviously the features to fittingly fill so extensive an area can only be those that are big in action and necessitating large numbers and groups of participats. There are oriental and European novelty acts of wonderful daring and skill and the equestrian acts for outshine anything hitherto presented together under canvas.

The racing contests evoke tumultuous enthusiasm and, collectively, the performance, the Menagerie, the Aviary and Field Museum, etc., are said to be unexcelled in originality, quality and quantity.

"Is that youthful looking man really your father?"

"Why yes," replied the debutante, as the Birmingham Age-Herald relates it. "He doesn't look as old as the man who had the last dance with you." "Mercy, no! That was grandfather."

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

The Unjust Volunteer System

In a small way the nation has seen the working out of the volunteer system again. Circumstances more kind to it could not be imagined. The emergency was hardly larger than could be met by the adventurous men of the country if they had been available as soldiers. It has required thus far only the mobilization of the larger part of the national guard and the recruiting of the various regiments to their war strength.

That has been all thus far necessary and it was all that was necessary to show the vounteer system up as an iniquitous fraud. Can any able bodied man, fit for military service, find for himself any satisfactory reason why he is going about his normal pursuits when some one of his acquaintance is engaged in the abnormal business of soldiering?

Does Brown, who is going about his affairs without a change of habit, think that Smith, who has changed all of his violently, is working for Smith or for the whole nation? And what has the nation done particularly for Smith that he should be singled out for unusual service in return and have his reasonable expectations and civil pursuits knocked to pieces?

If the nation has particularly favoured Smith during times of peace, by some concession or grant, then Smith is only meeting an obligation, but Brown knows that Smith has had nothing more from the government than he has had, and Brown can ask himself a hundred times why Smith should serve and not he and he will not find an answer satisfactory to him.

Brown, being an honest man, there upon concedes that universal service is the only just service, and later he will find that it is the only efficient one. Probably 50 per cent. of the men now mustered into the federal service from state service have no business being in the federal service at their time of life and in their condition of life.

It is important to the nation that they, having established themselves in civil life and being parts of the nation as a going concern, should be kept undisturbed so long as possible.

If we were organized sensibly under universal service, war with Mexico would call upon part of the men of the nation, but it would call them fairly and would find them trained. It is probable that the men actually in training would be more than enough. It is probable that for Mexico the reserve organizations of men in civil life would not be needed.

In a greater danger civil life would have to be disturbed, but again the call would be fairly made and the men would be found efficient. The nation would treat its citizens fairly. When it permits ten men to avoid doing what it gets one man to do, the people are treated unfairly, and when it expects one man to try to do something for which he has been imperfectly trained and equipped it does another injustice.

If square dealing and efficiency mean anything to the American people, the American people will be for compulsory military service.—Chicago Tribune.

CROPS ARE GOOD ALL OVER WEST

A telegraphrich report uniformly optimistic in tone on the condition of growing crops, and embracing the northern, central and southern divisions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, has been received. This report is confirmed by wired advices from the Department of Agriculture for the provinces concerned.

The report points out that the weather prevailing over the western country from the eastern boundary of Manitoba to the Rockies is generally so favourable that the principal crops are making splendid progress. There are indications that in a few lowlying sections the grain has not yet entirely recovered from the backward early conditions. The details follow.

Milk bottles should be filled with cold water the instant the milk is taken out, then they wash easily.

Eskimos Ravaged By Tuberculosis

The need for medical missionaries in Alaska has been emphasized in the most striking manner by a special correspondent of the Medical Record, who has recently completed a sanitary survey of St. Michael Island. His purpose was to find out the extent to which native children were infected with tuberculosis, and he concluded that about 75 per cent. of the population was so affected. His report presented a picture of living conditions that would appear almost incredible to dwellers in civilized communities.

"In the ravages of the 'great white plague,'" he wrote, "the Eskimo has not been overlooked. Just how or when this disease was introduced into Alaska no one knows, but it is obvious how its spread, increasing mortality and morbidity are continued. There are various reports on the tuberculous percentage among the natives, and these reports seem to have been formulated by writers other than medical men. This disease is so common in Alaska that every white man or white woman and most of the natives themselves think first of tuberculosis as the cause of all ailments, whether external or internal. The general opinion is that about 75 per cent. of the natives are suffering from tuberculosis.

"With this is view the writer made a tuberculosis survey of the native children of St. Michael Island. This survey was conducted as follows:

"1. Sanitary survey of the native villages so as to obtain an insight into their mode of living, food, percentage air space per individual, number of children under 15 years of age, sewerage, and garbage disposal.

"2. Physical examination of as many children below the age of 15 as possible.

"4. Sputum examination.

"5. Making developmental measurements.

Eskimo Living Conditions.

"Sanitary Survey.—A person who has never visited an Eskimo village and has never come intimately in contact with the natives in their natural state has not the slightest conception of the most insanitary surroundings they maintain. The villages from which these conclusions are drawn are considered among the cleanest and most up-to-date villages in North-Western Alaska. The houses are usually one room with a storm door entrance, low ceiling and about fifteen feet square, made of plank, logs, grass and scraps of tin—in fact, anything that will keep the little heat they have within the building and keep out the cold. Every possible crack is closed so as to keep them warm, and no attempt whatsoever made at ventilation.

"In this little house will live the entire family, and at times other families. In one house of the St. Michael village, nineteen persons live continually, and sometimes have visitors. The average cubic air space is about 150 cubic feet per person. The native also stores all of his belongings, except dogs, in his house; so we also find poorly tanned and foul smelling furs, seal oil, and fish that have been caught possibly many months before and in a decomposing state, a few dirty vessels of one kind and another, such tools or implements as they make their catch with, and sometimes a stove.

"The door into the house is usually covered by a piece of canvas, bagging or a skin so as to aid in keeping out the draughts. Any form of table, chair, or bed is an unusual article. In fact, in some of the villages the natives sleep seated on the floor with their backs against the wall. At one time the distinguishing feature between the Eskimo Indian and a citizen (in the legal sense), was based upon whether or not he ate off a table or on the floor.

WATER SCARCE AND LITTLE USED.

"Water is very scarce, particularly so in Winter, as everything is frozen and all water is obtained by melting ice. Considering the above, we can readily understand that the Eskimos rarely, and in some cases never, bathe. They also rub themselves with seal oil, and when you enter one of these houses you encounter an odor incomparable in intensity and offensiveness with anything that the writer ever before came into contact wit. They sometimes catch fish in Summer and bury it in the ground, (possibly to keep the flies away;) then will exhume this decomposed mass in Winter and eat it as such, or perhaps cook it for themselves or their dogs. Should you enter this house now, the intensity of the smell will stifle you, but the native is placidly enjoying the aroma of these viands.

"All waste is thrown out of the door, but as the natives eat all of the seal oil and the entire flesh there is but little refuse from this source. Is it surprising that communicable diseases spread among these people and that tuberculosis is threatening to destroy the Eskimo? It is only a question of time!

"Some tuberculosis investigators have said that once we contract this disease the lesion remains, although at times in an inactive or walled off condition, the patient presenting no symptoms. Having this in mind it was thought best to examine the children. There are two schools at St. Michael, one called the 'native school' which pure-breed natives attend and the other the 'white school' where there are a few children with Eskimo blood. The results of physical examination, tuberculin reaction, and sputum examinations are collectively tabulated as below.

	White School 8 children	Native School 26 children
Positive.	62.5 per cent.	61.5 per cent.
Negative.	12.5 per cent	23.0 per cent.
Suspicious	25.0 per cent	15.5 per cent

"On further examination fully one-half of the suspicious cases would prove to be tuberculosis.

SOME PARENTS OBJECTED.

"This is a small number from which to draw conclusions, and it is not intended to state that 61.5 per cent. of the native Eskimo children of Alaska under the age of 15 years are suffering from active tuberculosis lesions, but it does furnish an insight into the high percentage of tuberculosis in the natives, even at an early age and in one of Northwestern Alaska's best villages.

"During this survey there was occasion to examine eleven adults who were complaining of pain in their chests. All eleven showed advanced tuberculosis. These same adults are living in the above-described homes with their children, brothers and sisters. In all there are 27 homes in the village with 107 persons, 46 of whom are children under the age of 15 years. It was impossible to examine more than twenty-six of them, as the parents objected in the remaining cases, and antagonism was avoided wherever possible.

"The twenty-six children were all children from the native school, between the ages of 4 1-2 and 14 years. Besides the 107 persons referred to above, there are ten others who live in the village occasionally and a large number of others who live in other villages but visit here at St. Michael, living in the native village during their sojourn.

"Although the percentage of positive cases from the white school was highest than from the native school, the physical signs were far more marked in the latter, and there was a greater percentage of advanced tuberculosis in the native school. These eight mixed-breed children from the white school live under much better sanitary conditions, in fact all of them are at present living under conditions approximating those of white people; none of them live in the native village. These children intermingle to a certain extent, and most of them had lived under conditions, during a portion of their lives, simulating Eskimo habits. Even the white man, in general, lives under poor sanitary surroundings at St. Michael.

FIELD FOR MEDICAL MISSIONARIES.

"It is stated that the Eskimo, as a rule, has little or no appreciation but the writer believes he appreciates medical attention when approached in the proper manner. He is a man that one cannot force into doing things and to attempt to compel him to clean house (in the white man's sense), or to discard food that a civilized man would not eat, will soon gain his ill-will and distrust. The field for medical and surgical work on the Alaskan native is untouched. It is a field where medical missionaries can reap great harvests. The United States Bureau of Education has a small medical appropriation annually, but it is far too little, and only a very small percentage of the natives can receive much benefit from it.

"There are a few hospitals scattered over this enormous country and a few doctors here and there. They are undoubtedly doing valuable work, but there are too few of them. If the churches, religious societies, and benevolent organizations in general of that rich and wonderful country of ours—the United States of America—would turn only a part of their attention to Alaska and render financial aid, these poor and wretched natives, many of whom are without clothes, and hungry to-day, could be elevated mentally and physically to a much better position."

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

THE CURIOUS WILL OF AN INSANE MAN

The curious will of an insane man made when he was poor and near death has come to our notice, says "Commerce and Finance," New York. The old man had no property but he realized the true values of life and these he sought to pass on to posterity in his will. The document was composed by Williston Fish, now a lawyer in Chicago, and is beautiful for its thought. For childhood, for lovers, and for old age he left every joy. The optimism and wholesome spirit of the document warrant its being reprinted here, although its economic significance is rather remote. It reads:

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory, make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order to justify as may be to distribute my interests in the world among succeeding men.

That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property being inconsiderable and of no account I make no disposal of in this my will.

My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted all else in the world I now devise and bequeath—

Item: I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments and I charge said parents to use them justly and generously, as the needs of their children may require.

Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the fields, and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks, and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows that dip therein, and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night and the moon and the trail of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subject nevertheless to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.

Item: I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played; all pleasant waters where one may swim; all snow-clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate; to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all shadows with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods and their appurtenances, the squirrels and birds, the echoes and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance and without any incumbrance of care.

Item: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need; as the stars of the sky; the red roses by the wall; the bloom of the hawthorn; the sweet strains of music and aught else by which they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

Item: To young men jointly, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry, and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength though they are rude; I give them the power to make lasting friendships, and of possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses, to sing with lusty voices.

Item: And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave memory, and I bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live over the old days again, freely and fully, without stint or diminution.

Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

FRENCH-CANADIANS IN ARMS IN FRANCE

New and Old France Instinctively Rejoice at Arrival of Jean Baptiste—Old Chansons Again

The bringing of the old songs of France back to life by the marching French-Canadians, the spontaneous welcomes, the rejoicing of officers at seeing King Arthur's country, are pictured in a narrative of the Canadian Eyewitness. Sir Max Aitken writes:

Of all peoples the French are the most susceptible to the appeal of the historic. One can imagine with what feelings they learned that two thousand French-Canadians had landed with the 1st Canadian Division at St. Nazaire—one company of the 14th Battalion was entirely composed of French-Canadians—and as the new arrivals started on their slow journey to the front, the air rang with the old chansons which three centuries before had come out of their own France. These songs had been forgotten in the land of their origin, but still lived in the New France. Very strange must have been the meeting between these two branches of a race sundered so long by the seas and time.

Welcome Home!

"The population," writes a French-Canadian officer, "applauded us, people rushed to the doors of their houses to offer us fruits and wine; at stopping places, French soldiers brought us coffee and rum; joy and gaiety reigned everywhere. Gradually it dawned on these people that among the strange soldiers from across the ocean were men speaking their mother tongue; not the French perhaps of modern Brittany and Normandy, but French none the less."

One must picture the joyous effort to find the common idiom and accent, the older country casting back in memory across the years to the point where the two streams of speech have divided; the younger nation of the older speech, casting forward to catch the new French which had sprung up since the division. The scene is one for the painter or the novelist more than for the Record Officer, but this wonderful journey, ending in lovers' meetings, must leave an ineffaceable imprint on the memories of both England and France.

Romance in Cattle Cars

Dramatic moments are few in modern war, but this was one of them, a fitting pendant to that other scene a few years back, when the joint memorial to Wolfe and Montcalm was unveiled on the high plain above Quebec. To most, this mutual recognition must have been an affair of instinct rather than of knowledge; but to a few was given a fuller understanding of the ancient romance underlying their tedious journey in cattle trucks.

"I thought," says another French-Canadian officer, speaking of the journey through Brittany to Rouen, "of the Knights of the Round Table, of Anne de Bretagne, of the Romance of Paul Feval and of the Vendeans and of all my boyhood reading." But the romance was soon to be substituted for the stern reality of a winter campaign in Northern Europe.

Canadian Objector

The Nottingham Tribunal disallowed the claims for exemption by several conscientious objectors to military service. One applicant stated he belonged to the Socialist party in Canada, and had come from the Dominion to England since the war. He declared human life was sacred, but the lives of men and women in Belgium had nothing to do with him. Sir John Maccraith observed what a contrast there was between applicant and other Canadians. Another member of the tribunal declared that applicant would no thave dared to say what he did in the presence of other Canadians fighting for the Empire.

"Uncle Sam will be too weak to manage with arms."—A significant Japanese comment on United States preparedness, from Yorodzu, Tokyo.

In most cases it is better to keep that honest opinion a profound secret. And there is always room for the sprinter who keeps ahead of the procession.

Dr. June 16

— The Canadians have as you say again covered themselves with glory, but I fear at a terrible sacrifice — I am much distressed to see that poor Mercer is killed — I formed a high opinion of him as a Brigadier — This Russian advance comes just at the right moment & things never looked better than they do for the Allies —

Yours Sincerely
A. Smith-Dorrien

FINE TRIBUTE FROM SMITH-DORRIEN—Sir Henry Pellatt has received a glowing tribute to the worth of the Canadians and to the late General Mercer from Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, special A.D.C. to the King. Above is a fac-simile of part of the letter. In a later letter he said: "How grandly Canadians have done in this war, and how proud you must be of them. I was fortunate enough to be commanding in the Ypres area when they saved the whole situation during the great gas attack of April 22nd last year."

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS AND HOW OFTEN PREVENTED

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere; large size, containing two months' treatment, costs $1.00, small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.

UNIVERSITY'S HEROES

Lieut. the Hon. William Alastair Damer Parnell, of Arts '17, and Science '18, of McGill, who served with the Grenadier Guards in France, has been awarded the Military Cross for distinguished conduct in making a raid on the trenches of the enemy. Lieut. Parnell came to McGill from Rugby in the fall of 1913, and entered the class of Arts '17, at the commencement of the session of 1914-15 he became a member of the class of Science '18. On the death in action of his brother, Sir Henry Blight Fortescue Parnell, he returned to England and took out a commission in his brother's regiment. He was born in 1894, and is the son of the late fourth Baron Congleton, major-general in the army, who served in the Crimea after the fall of Sebastopol, and during the campaign against the Zulus. Lieut. Parnell was the fourth McGill man to be awarded the Military Cross, the other three recipients being Capt. Human Lightstone, of Med. '10; Capt. D. M. Mathieson, of Science '07; and Lieut. Evan B. Hugh-Jones, of Science '12.

Blacks Gave Biplanes

Through the Overseas Club sixty-eight biplanes have been presented to the Royal Flying Corps. One of these was bought by the chiefs and people of Eastern Krobo, Gold Coast, another by the chiefs and people of the New Juaben Settlement, third by the people of Saran, while the Oshene chiefs and people of Kwahu, Gold Coast Colony, raised the funds for a fourth.

CHEAP PATRIOTS THESE

Some Londoners Took Advantage of Car Conductors

War time labor problems have produced a new race of dodgers, who do not pay their street car fares. So large has become their number that the London County Council are taking special steps to deal with the matter. On some of the more crowded routes extra conductors are to be introduced during the busy hours. The second official will take on half the work, and then leave the car to perform a similar service in another. It had been found that taking advantage of the many new conductors certain systems are regularly worked by fare evaders, who pay a half-penny or a penny and remain in the car for a long journey, trusting that they would not be noticed in the crowd.

Generals' Nicknames

Lord Kitchener is known in the army as "Hawkeye," although to the outside world he is usually known as "K. of K." Lord Charles Beresford is "Buck-'em-up," the late General Gateacre was always called "Backacher," General Hutton is "Curly Hutton," while the late Lord Roberts was not only "Bobs," but was also familiarly called "Little Freddy."

Tricks of Hun Lie Factory

"A Neutral" says this and "A Neutral" says that. This is one of the Hun tricks in disseminating lies. The latest of these is that the Kaiser disapproves of the Zeppelin raids on Great Britain. If so, why has he decorated some members of the crews with his beastly Iron Cross?—King ston Standard.

McCuaigs of Montreal

Mr. C. J. McCuaig, of Montreal, has good reason to be proud of his three sons, who went overseas with the first of the units of the Fifth Royal Highlanders organized—the 13th Battalion, the fighting unit, the memory of which will never die in the mind of Montreal and the Empire. One son, Major D. R. McCuaig, won the Distinguished Service Order for bravery. He is, unfortunately, a prisoner of war in Germany at Hanover, and was seriously wounded before surrender. Another son has been wounded. He left as a lieutenant and adjutant of the 13th Battalion, and became Major G. Eric McCuaig, second in command of his regiment. The other son, Captain Clarence N. McCuaig, left a lieutenant and won promotion on the battlefield

HOW THE BRITISH CENSOR WORKS

Joseph W. Grigg, a representative of the New York World, was recently allowed to see how the British censors examine the mail for Europe from America in the ships landing at British ports. His report is extremely interesting. Writing from London, he says:

"The opportunity has been given me as a representative of the New York World, to accompany through the British postal censorship a consignment of more than 200 sacks of mail from the United States to Continental points. It is the first time during the war that such a facility has been granted to any correspondent. And not only am I able to give the experience of this particular consignment of mail, which was landed at Falmouth from the Holland-America liner New Amsterdam, but the latitude afforded me to witness the working of the whole postal censorship gives me the opportunity to describe it as well.

The liner New Amsterdam had just dropped anchor in Falmouth Harbor as we came alongside in a steam drifter. The boarding party included officers who were to examine the papers of 240 passengers landing in England and as many more destined for Holland or other Continental points. There were a police representative and two women; the women it was explained, were to make any searches among the women passengers that might be thought to be necessary, which is contrary to the German reports that men search women passengers. One of these women, the daughter of a very well known titled person in London, and formerly a nurse in South Africa, does this work voluntarily. Then there was the officer in charge of unloading the mail.

The British officers paid their respects to the Dutch officers and the respective duties of the former began. I paired off with the one in charge of the mail.

CENSORED IN LONDON.

The hatchway of the hold where the mail was carried had already been opened. The officer got his men ready on the drifter, and in conjunction with the Dutch crew, the unloading proceeded without delay. This officer explained to me that every sack of mail has to be accounted for by him in a sworn statement. Every letter taken from passengers must likewise be kept account of in another report.

In less than an hour the 202 sacks were aboard the drifter and we had started for the docks, where they were to be loaded into railroad vans by means of a steam crane. In an hour and a half they were ready to be forwarded to London, 291 miles away, but had to wait the departure of a train several hours later. "All roads lead to London" is true of the mail censorship with the one exception of terminal mail—from the United States or vice versa. In such instances they are censored at Liverpool.

The mail officer showed me some of the consignments that had been handled by him in recent months. Thus, on January 5, 1916, the New Amsterdam had brought over from New York a total of 1629 bags, the biggest single consignment to be landed at Falmouth during the war.

Other big mails include the consignment on the liner Rotterdam in February, 1435; Ryndam, 997. To South America from Holland: Zeelandia, 1419; Gelria, 845.

But my narrative concerns principally the 202 sacks of mail on the New Amsterdam. They reached London between three and four o'clock in the morning on June 8 and were immediately taken in post office vans to the big structure in Carey street, where headquarters of the postal censorship of Great Britain is installed.

1500 CENSORS WORK FAST.

At 9.30 that morning 1500 censors, men and women—a larger proportion of the former—began the actual work of censoring these bags from the New Amsterdam. At three o'clock the next afternoon I saw these bags of mail being loaded into vans at the General Post Office, from which place they were being taken to the Holborn railroad station on their way to Gravesend, and thence by boat to Holland, two days ahead of the New Amsterdam.

To sum up the case for the censorship as presented to me by its highest officials; there are several outstanding features. Here is an institution that has come with the war and without a precedent, so far as Great Britain is concerned. Its cost is approximately $8,750,000 a year, including the Liverpool branch. There were delays of from ten days to three weeks in the early days in handling certain consignments of mail, a delay frankly admitted to me by its officers, but they assert that this is no longer possible. Like any other business, it has acquired efficiency with age. It has also acquired two set rules: First, a time limit of two days on all outward mails—that is from Europe to the United States; second, a time limit of four days on inward mails—that is from the United States to Europe—the delay in the latter class being occasioned by the greater vigilance which must be shown the mails coming this way.

As illustrating the efficiency now in handling mails as compared with six months ago, the case of the steamship United States, from Sweden to the United States, touching at Kirkwall, on June 6, was cited. These included 56 bags of ordinary mails and 20 bags of registered. They were brought to London, from Kirkwall censored, and placed on a vessel sailing to New York from Liverpool within 36 hours, or half a day inside the time allowance. Six months ago it would have taken, it was admitted to me, fully ten days. There were practically 4,000 letters in each bag.

FOOD FROM NEEDY POLAND.

British Contend Notice Shows Germans Seek Fruit There.

London newspapers reprint the following official notice, recently made public in Germany, with comment that this disproves the German assertion that food is not being taken from starving Poland.

"A rich harvest of fruit is expected in the areas of Russia which are under Marshal von Hindenburg, and all measures have been taken in the administrative districts to make full use of this fruit harvest. A part of the fruit will probably be used in the area of occupation itself, while a great part of the fruit of all kinds will be taken away into Germany and used there. There will, therefore, be a valuable addition to the food supply of our people. The fruit is to be delivered in waggons in the chief market centres of Germany."

BY UNIQUE OPERATION

PARIS, July 5.—The most remarkable of all operations for wounds received in war was performed recently at the Grand Palais in Paris by Professor Laurent of Brussels University.

Corporal Rousselet had lost part of his thighbone. Amputation had been decided when Private Hilliette was brought to the hospital and his leg removed.

Dr. Laurent grafted the bony offshoots of Tilliette's stump on Rousselet's thighbone, the two soldiers remaining linked together for a week. When the two were separated Rousselet's thighbone was restored and the leg was saved.

Needless Care.

BRITAIN AFTER WAR

Will Government Control of Great Factories Continue?

At the end of this war Great Britain will find herself with this great national factory, this great national organization of labor, planned, indeed, primarily to make war material, but convertible with the utmost ease to the purposes of automobile manufacture, to transit reconstruction, to electrical engineering, and endless such uses. Either the state must go on with this production, as it can do, straight off from the signing of peace, converting with a minimum of friction, taking on its soldiers as they are discharged from the army as employes with a minimum of social disorder and a maximum advantage in the resumption of foreign trade, or there will be a dangerous break-up of the national factory system, a time of extreme chaos and bitter unemployment until capital accumulates for new developments. I believe that out of the ruins of the nineteenth century system of private capitalism that this war has smashed for ever, there will arise, there does even now arise, in this strange scaffolding of national munition factories and hastily nationalized public services, the framework of a new economic and social order based upon national ownership and national service.—H. G. Wells.

Why not cut out all the guess-work and let a cold-blooded machine do the work? Print unchangeable figures under lock and key in and out shifts, four or six times a day, if necessary, giving Records that form an original PRINTED wage sheet."

THE ONE UNIVERSAL MAN OF THE WAR IS MARCONI

His Wireless Has Played Tremendous Part in the Struggle—England Nearly Got a German System Instead of His.

The astonishing part which Signor Marconi and his wireless system have played in this war to our advantage, and how nearly the British came to replacing Marconi by a German, is told in two remarkable interviews by Harold Begbie in the London Daily Chronicle.

Mr. Begbie sat Signor Marconi in London, and writes:

"Here is the one universal man of this world-war

"It is odd to look at him, smoke with him, and laugh with him, reflecting that a thought of his brain is spun like a spider's web all over the bloody battlefields of Europe, all over the seas of the world, and high above the clouds. His invention, you feel, should belong to some legendary hero. It is too immense a thing for a man still living, and a young man—a young man who has moods of frivolity, who loves to laugh, and who is perfectly simple, modest and unassuming.

"He is at once a young, old man, and an old young man. He is young as youth in his moments of gaiety; and in his thought, when he is serious and reflective, he looks far older than his middle age. His face lights up at times with an almost boyish delight in a piece of fun; but it becomes at other times more than serious and more than grave, it becomes clouded and suffering and sorrowful. Few men are so many men. He loves horses and music. He loves fun and science. He is interested in literature and politics. He is fond of motoring and is somewhat of a mystic. He said to me:

"'I often think that D'Annunzio came pretty near the truth when he suggested that wireless is something of a symbol for religion. We send our thoughts through silence to one who is invisible. And a good deal of the process is still a mystery. In any case the universe is mysterious enough and the more I investigate the more I wonder.'"

The story concerning Marconi which it is well to remember in the present, is thus told by Mr. Begbie:

"If those people who raised a vulgar and disgraceful hullabaloo about the Marconi contract a few years ago had got their way—that is to say, if the government and the working classes of the country had not stood firm as a rock in the midst of a maelstrom of aristocratic and middle-class scandal, Germany might by now be the mistress of the world.

"For the great competitor of our English Marconi was a Germany company: and I can assure you that it was actually on the cards that this German company might have been brought over to London to drive Marconi out of the national business.

"Every responsible person in the Marconi Company is now a member of the British Secret Service. They know things of the highest importance. They hear every hour of the day things which must be divulged to no one. And who is there among the slanderers to raise a voice, even a whisper, in condemnation of these loyal subjects?

"Such is the initial romance of the Wireless War. We might have been in German hands for a weapon which is essential to national safety.

"And now to the war itself. If I might tell you all I know about this matter, and I know only a very little, you would be astonished and amazed; but at least I can tell you enough to show you, if you have not thought about the matter before, how romantically the invention of Marconi is interwoven into all this grim business of mutilation and slaughter on the earth," adds M. Begbie.

GILLETT'S LYE

THE INVISIBLE BATTLE IN FLAT FLANDERS

Deadly Trench Warfare Amid Windmills and Canals—Wonderful Endurance of Trench Fighters

H. Warner-Allen, official British press representative with the French army, writes: It is no easy matter in the flat plains of Flanders to reach the advanced lines. The smallest eminence gives so wide a view that the enemy's look-outs can, on a clear day, spot a motor car many miles away, and the German gunners are generally ready to welcome such a tourist. However, there is much mist in Flanders, and under its cover it is possible to reach without danger points where, in sunshine, one would surely have been bombarded. There is a certain village at an important cross-roads. Here the visitor can gather a very fair idea of the famous Flanders mud. Every cavity and depression was full of water thinly frozen over on the day I visited the lines, and one could only marvel at the magnificent patience and endurance of the men who stood for days up to the knees in what was practically a freezing mixture.

Wonderful Barbed Wire

Nowhere along the line is war more invisible than in Flanders. A misty, grey line of trees, a ruined farmhouse, a stake or two with tangled barbed wire—that is all there is to show where the enemy is lying. As for our own defences on close inspection they prove most encouraging. A master mind has been at work, taking advantage of every little hill and depression in the monotonous plain. Is there a spot where barbed wire entanglements can be concealed from the enemy's artillery, to prove at the moment of the assault a fatal obstacle? There you will find neat rows of stakes intertwined with that deadly barrier which has done so much to change the whole system of warfare.

Occasionally the bare expanse is broken by a good-sized wood. In such flat country the cover given by trees is invaluable. Indeed, the undergrowth of a coppice is a far more powerful defence than the strongest wall of a medieval castle. Such a wood may hold a regiment, a brigade, a division—a veritable army, and its resistance could only be overcome at terrible cost.

Picturesque

To the stranger the only gay thing about the country is the windmills. Right up within the zone of fire they continue to throw up their arms with extravagant gestures to the skies, working away steadily at their daily task, despite the invader, with true Belgian persistence and obstinacy. Some of them have been mutilated by the enemy's shell, and one I saw had only a single sail aloft, which still stood upright as though defying the Germans a few hundred yards away.

In this land of dikes and canals perhaps the most interesting features are the formidable barricades which prevent the flood water from reaching the sea, and maintain the unudations which guard the line. They are such barriers as had elsewhere along the front been raised to hold back the barbarians—thousands of sandbags neatly piled one on the other, and in time of frost, when the tide is low, covered with an armor of ice. Against such tremendous obstacles no bombardment can be effective. A lucky shell may displace a score or two of sandbags, but they can be replaced without delay and the whole barrier is only the stronger.

Caring For the Wounded

Some miles behind the firing line I visited a hospital built at the cost of the wife of a British officer. Here the men who require immediate attention are nursed until they are able to be sent to the base hospitals. The doctor in charge considered that the position of his hospital ideal since, thanks to motor ambulances, the wounded could be brought down with a minimum of delay and at the same time it was far enough away to give perfect tranquility to the patients and to allow the surgeons to operate without the nerve-racking disturbances of big shells bursting near. He told us that during the early part of the war he had a mortality of between 20 and 25 per cent.

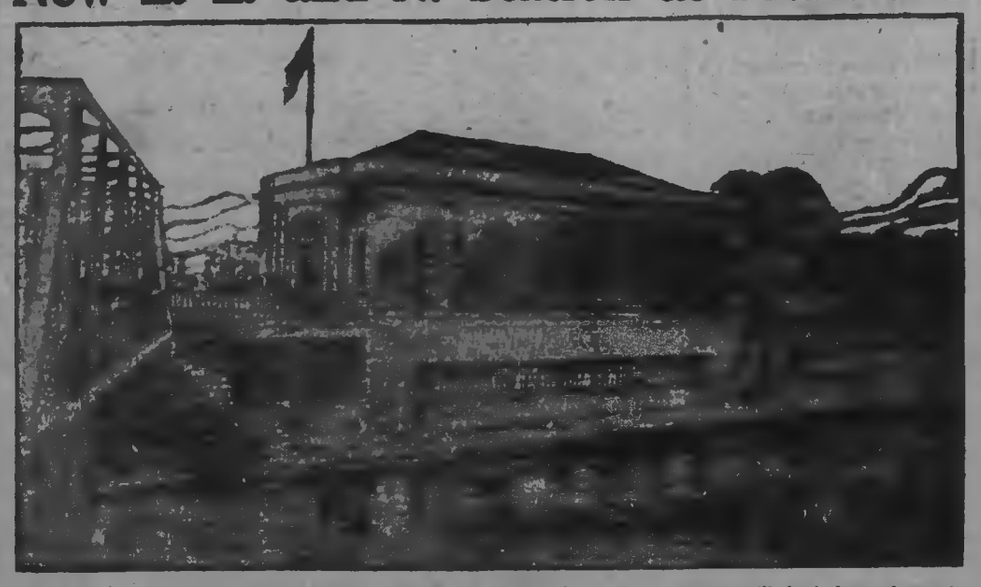
At that time he was in charge of a mobile field ambulance, and it was no small gratification to him that now, during trench warfare, he had been able to reduce the mortality to less than 6 per cent. "Yet," he said, "in trench warfare wounds are really more serious than they are in war in the open. The wounds made by grenades and trench mortars are particularly deadly, as the projectiles touch the ground before hitting the man, and therefore infect the wound."

In Flanders, as everywhere else on the French front, the doctors are loud in their praise of the stoical heroism of the French wounded, and of that indomitable French gaiety which nothing can quail either in the field or in the hospital.

No Room For Deserters

The Swiss troops on all their frontiers have been instructed to permit no deserters to pass in the future, no matter from which country they come. This step was taken to avoid diplomatic complications. The Italian government some time ago demanded the extradition of a number of soldiers who had deserted from their regiments and sought an asylum on Swiss soil. The request could not be granted under the Swiss laws, and the controversy between Italy and Switzerland became somewhat heated. The Italian government gracefully withdrew it's demand.

New L. E. and N. Station at Brantford.



The Lake Erie and Northern Railway, a subsidiary of the C.P.R., and the Brantford and Hamilton Railway, a subsidiary of the Dominion Power and Transmission Co., entered into an agreement recently to build a joint station in Brantford, Ont., and, as already stated in Canadian Railway and Marine World, the contract for its erection was let to Schultz Bros. Co., contingent on satisfactory arrangements being made with the city council and subject to the Board of Railway Commissioners' approval.

The plans as shown in the accompanying illustration provide for a one-story building, located over the tracks at the southwest corner of Colborn and Water Streets, with 38 ft. frontage on Colborn St., and 76 on Water St., and tracks to pass beneath the main floor of the building, with platforms, express and baggage accommodation at the lower level. The design is New England, Colonial style; red brick, with limestone trimmings and green slate roof. The main floor, at street level, with entrance from Colborn St., is to contain a main waiting room 35 x 50 ft., women's retiring room and lavatory, men's lavatory, and ticket and telegraph offices. Two stairways will lead from the main floor to the track platforms. Baggage and express rooms and steam heating equipment will be located in a separate extension 14 x 76 ft. on the lower or track level. This extension will abut the retaining wall of Water St. and will be accessible for teams at the lower end of the street. The interior of the building will be finished in Canada ash; the walls and ceilings of main waiting room to be plastered and finished with plastered cornice. The floors will be concrete. The lavatories will have a marble wainscot 6½ ft. high.

With Cities Like Graveyards Huns Struggling On

PETROGRAD, July 10. — The "Russkoe Slovo" publishes an account as to conditions in Germany from a neutral who has just returned from a business trip through Germany and Austria to Moscow.

Having confirmed the statements made by other travellers of the terrible ordeal which the travellers have to undergo on the frontier, he goes on to describe Bremen:

Bremen is the home of the North German Lloyd. Here are situated its head offices, chief warehouses, workshops, and numerous institutions which are connected with this great shipping company. Now this beautiful town is dead. It is like a vast churchyard.

To see how the Germans amused themselves during the war, I selected the most fashionable music hall of the town.

What surprised me most was the complete disappearnce of actresses from the programme. It appeared that women are now prohibited from acting in the music halls. All turns therefore are performed by men. They are very bad.

Panis, Circenses, Etc.

And it seems that no one goes to German music halls to amuse himself but solely to have alcoholic refreshments. I have never seen such drunkenness as I saw during my short stay in Breman. In peace time, to, one might meet in Germany, people who were tipsy, or sometimes noisy, but never dead drunk. Now I saw some officers of high rank making their appearance in public dead drunk. The streets in the evening are full of drunken people.

The best place at which to dine in Bremen has always been the "Rathauskeller." I went there to see how the Germans fare. I got fish, meat, vegetables, potatoes, even a roll, small and stale, reminding one of malt bread. But the prices had increased enormously. For a Wienerschnitzel one has to pay 3 marks 75 pfennigs, which is more than double the pre-war price.

The war bread seems humanly uneatable, but perhaps it is good for horses. It smells like hay or grass. It is being baked most abominably, perhaps not without a purpose.

So far as concerns the general economic situation the war has left undeniable traces everywhere. Not only must Germany carry on the war and find gigantic sums to cover war expenses, but she is already now spending much money for alleviating the results of the war after peace is concluded. It is a mystery where she gets the money, for money is being spent most lavishly.

Horses for Future Use.

For instance, Germany, foreseeing that after the war there will be a tremendous lack of horses both for the army and general work, is already buying up horses everywhere she can get them. She completely disregards the fact that from neutral countries their export is impossible. I have witnessed how this business is transacted in Holland. Probably in other neutral countries it is done in the same way.

The Germans pay without bargaining, and then make an agreement with the owner of the horse. He is to receive certain upkeep money, and must keep the horse in good order; he also has the right to use it until the date when it will be possible to deliver it to Germany. At the time of my stay in Holland already almost one-half of all the available horses had been in that way sold to Germany.

The same if not greater energy is displayed by Germans in buying up foodstuffs and other goods. They are buying in Holland enormous quantities of coffee, cocoa, rice, groats, leather and machinery. This is stocked. As according to Dutch law such goods cannot be exported, and, on the other hand, their owner, if of foreign origin, has no right to keep them in stock more than three months, the Germans have hired in various parts of Holland, big warehouses, and after the expiration of the term of three months, simply move the goods from one storing place to another. According to my information the quantity of goods thus stored by the Germans is enormous.

It is certainly impossible to ascertain even approximately what Germany is spending for that purpose. But it is evident that after the war she will have enough horses and goods to go on with, while the neutral countries will lack both.

Von Sherlock Homz.

On my return during the search and interrogation at Bentheim I was suddenly told that I was an Englishman and that my passport was false.

"What is the reason of this accusation?" I asked.

"Well, didn't you have whiskey and soda in the car this morning? Whiskey and soda are taken in the morning only by Englishmen."

On my journey back I arrived in Berlin at Easter. This weather was excellent. The streets were full of people. But at Friedrichstrasse station I found only five old motor-cars and a few old-fashioned cabs drawn by old horses. Motor-buses have stopped running and are replaced by horse trams.

I have a great number of friends in Berlin, and I have seen many of them and had long talks. I was most definitely informed that all disorders which had taken place in Berlin on account of dearness of food have been up to now dealt with without firing on the people, but disorders of the same kind in Leipzig and Dresden have resulted in a great number of killed and wounded amongst the rioters.

All are anxiously waiting for peace, but it was emphasized by everybody with whom I had an opportunity of speaking, that as long as th military power is as strong as it is now all talk of a speedy peace will be in vain.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Pretty Hands Are Attractive.

To be sure that your hands and nails are well kept you must push the cuticle, very gently, every day. Do this with a blunt edge of an orangewood stick. If the cuticle is stubborn, you should apply cold cream or vaseline to it every night. The hands may be kept white by the use of this lotion. Put into a bottle two ounces of glycerine, 2 ounces of water, 4 tablespoons of lemon juice and a few drops of carbolic acid. Shake well. After washing and drying the hands rub a little of the mixture into them. Slices of freshly cut cucumber rubbed over the hands will tend to whiten the skin.

The skin of the hands, like that of the face withers because of inadequate circulation. Renew the circulation by exercises of the hands, round and round, upon the wrists. Drop them as though they were heavy weights from the shoulders. Raise and lower them rapidly from the wrists. Hands are overworked. We give them too much work to do by making meaningless gestures. Don't gesticulate much. But when you do let every gesture mean something. Let the gestures be free and large, from the shoulders, not from the elbows.

Not to Blame if They Forget.—To the average Scottish church goer the minister who reads his sermon is a weak sort of preacher. In a Highland village the minister was always offending in this respect. At last a deputation of his congregation waited on him to point out that they would prefer him to preach without reading every word from a manuscript. "Ah, my friends," he said sadly, "I must apologize; but I have a bad memory. If I had not it in writing I should forget what I have to say." "Weel, meenister," was the spokesman's soothing answer, "if ye canna remember yer ain discourses ye canna blame us gin we forget them."

Beatrice Redpath

ALTHOUGH Canada is still too young a nation to have a literature distinctively Canadian, she is producing to-day writers of such merit as to attract the attention of the outside world. In poetry, particularly, she has begun to blaze her own trail, such writers as Bliss Carman and C.G.D. Roberts having won recognition from all who know true inspiration. Different from these and yet even more thoroughly Canadian, for she has remained true to Montreal, is Beatrice Redpath, whose recently published volume of verse "Drawn Shutters," was described in T. P. O'Conner's well-known literary review as "coming like sunshine amid clouds, themselves noble and impressive." The poems of Mrs. Redpath are typical of the quiet dignity of Mount Royal with its stately trees, below which the world lies spread in a mysterious beauty. No name is better known in Montreal than that of Redpath, but the author of "Drawn Shutters" was born to the name of Peterson, daughter of Alexander Peterson, C.E., engineer of the C.P.R. bridge built across the St. Lawrence at Lachine in 1886, and Chief Engineer of the C.P.R. when the Ste. Annes and Vaudreuil bridges were built and the great railway bridge at Sault Ste. Marie. "One of the best railway engineers in the world," said the "New York Times" of her father. "One of the truest poets of our time," might well be said of Beatrice Redpath.

A New Sort of Ham—Two Scotswomen met in a country road near P—. One of them was carrying a queer-looking parcel, and the other asked what was in it. "Oh, it's just some ham," was the reply. "I always buy my ham from Mr. Sandy's shop in P—. My husband is rather particular and he likes Sandy's ham." The other Scotswomen said her husband was rather particular also, and she thought she might try some of the same ham. So she went off to Sandy's shop in P—. "I want some ham," she said. "What kind of ham?" the shopman asked her. "Oh, the same kind of ham that Mrs. So-and-so gets." Sandy smiled quietly, and, leaning over the counter, he whispered, "Where's your bottle?"

God Only Knew—The practical teacher taught natural history from everyday illustrations and comparisons. "Take a bear," he said. "Look at his fur." The boys had no bear to take, but they had a picture of one, and they looked at it. "His fur," the teacher went on, "is the bear's overcoat, the same as your big coats are your overcoats." "He can't take it off, though, same as we can ours said one contentious youngster. "That is true" said the teacher. "The bear cannot take off his overcoat. But why can't he take it off?" Every boy thought hard. "I think," said the contentious youth, finally, "that it is because nobody but God knows where the buttons are."—R. M.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

These who like variety will welcome this blouse, with the back extending over the front shoulders to form a fancy yoke, the fronts of the garment being gathered to it. Lace edging plays an important part in contributing an exquisite collar; the square vest effect to the fronts is unique with edging, mitred to match the collar. A double row of buttons further decorates the waist and indicates where the closing is made, and the cuffs on three-quarter sleeves show the collar treatment has been repeated. The pattern provides for long sleeves, if they are preferred. It is not necessary to give their cuffs the effect shown on the short sleeve cuff.

This pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To reproduce in size 38 will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, 2⅛ yards of edging 4½ inches wide, or, without the edging and collar and cuff portions mitred, 2⅝ yards will be plenty.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 10 cents, or 2 for 20 cents.

Cantalmaisson Captured And British Make Further Progress

TEUTONS ASK BULGARS FOR HELP

LONDON, July 11.—British troops last night carried by storm the village of Contalmaison, northeast of Albert, about which violent fighting has raged since the opening of the Allied offensive. General Haig in announcing the victory reported that many German prisoners were taken.

Further east we stormed several lines of enemy trenches in Mametz Wood, added General Haig. The greater part of the wood is now in our possession.

Heavy fighting continues in Trones Wood, north of Hardecourt.

In the fighting of the last two days the French took 1,000 prisoners.

Ask Ferdinand To Come to Their Aid

Examiner Special:

ROME, July 11.—Kaiser Wilhelm and Emperor Franz Josef have sent an urgent request to Czar Ferdinand that he despatch Bulgarian troops to the Galician and Trentino fronts to help check Russian and Italian offensives, says a Swiss despatch. Ferdinand is considering it.

The Austrian losses in the recent offensive on the Trentino front and the Italian counter-offensive have totalled 150,000 men it is estimated here. The Italians already have won back nearly all the territory occupied by the Austrians in their drive through. The concentration of 2,000 guns of heavy calibre has impeded their advance.

Attacks Repulsed is Berlins Statement

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 11.—The repulse of strong British attacks on both sides of the Mapaume-Albert highway, between the Ancre and the Somme, was reported by the War Office this afternoon.

Twenty-Two Villages Have Fallen to Allies

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 11.—Twenty-two villages, all fortified to the highest degree of which the Germans are capable, have been captured by the Anglo-French armies since the great offensive of the Somme began ten days ago.

Peronne, lying barely a mile across the Somme from the French advanced lines, and the next importantp rize toward which the French are advancing, lies almost within grasp of General Foch's army.

Despatches from headquarters to-day showed that the village of Biaches, one-mile from Peronne, was captured by the French in the same dashing spirit that drove the enemy out of Dompierre, Hardecourt, and other strongly fortified points.

Dompierre with its entire first line German positions was taken in fifty minutes, and Hardecourt in only thirty-five minutes. The Germans resisted more stubbornly at Biaches, but within less than two hours the village and all its strong defensive fortifications were in the hands of the French.

German troops launched a powerful attack against the French works northeast of Verdun at four o'clock this morning after intense bombardment extending from Fleury to Chenois Wood.

East of Chenois Wood and in Famin Wood the Germans occupied our advanced trenches, but were later thrown out by counter-attacks, the War Office stated to-day. Everywhere else the attack was checked by curtain fire.

The War Office admitted that German troops entered 200 yards of French trenches in Lorraine, east of Reillon.

Nickel for Deutchsland Bought in Market

Examiner Special:

BALTIMORE, Md., July 11.—Nickel to be shipped on the Deutschland "was bought in the open market without any restrictions" as to export, Manager Hilken said to-day. He refused to name the seller, though he indicated that it came from a source other than the International Nickel Co.

At any rate, he said, there would be no complications over the complaint.

The International Nickel Co. is the concern which gets its nickel from Ontario mines.

Britain and France Are Taking Steps

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Great Britain and France have decided to do everything in their power to prevent the United States recognizing the super-submarine Deutschland as a ship of commerce, and to prevent operation of a line of submarine freight carriers proposed by the North German Lloyd Steamship Co. This was admitted at the Embassies of the two governments here to-day.

It is pointed out that such vessels, although the Deutschland may be unarmed, are potentially warships.

Claims British Patrol Boats Were Sunk

BERLIN, July 11.—At least four and possibly five armored British patrol boats hunting submarines in the Adriatic were destroyed by Austrian cruiser Novara in an engagement off Otranto Road the Austrian Admiralty claimed to-day. All were destroyed by artillery fire. Of the crews the Novara could rescue only nine British sailors.

EVERYTHING IS IN READINESS FOR THE CELEBRATION

A BIG EVENT

Given fair weather, Mr. E. Reid, County Master of the Orange Order, will to-morrow be called upon to marshall one of the largest parades that has ever been held in Peterborough. This year, lodges will be seen here that have journeyed from a much greater distance than is usually the case. At least ten thousand Orangemen will participate in the festivities, while an equal number of visitors may be expected to be on hand to witness the celebration of the 226th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

Every effort has been put forth to handle the large crowd that will visit the city. Refreshment booths are being erected at convenient points, while extra staffs have been engaged to look after the crowds in the regular places of business.

The Orangemen upon arrival in the city will congregate at Central Park, from which point the big parade is scheduled to start shortly after dinner. It will take anywhere from two to three hours for the parade to pass a given point, so that the afternoon will be pretty well over before the Orangemen find their way back to Central Park, where a number of speeches will be delivered by local speakers.

BAKING DEMONSTRATION

Most women are, and all women should be interested in any movement that has in view the betterment of humanity. It is now an established fact that the matter of purity of good products has much to do with physical conditions. The proper mixing and baking of food stuff is likewise important. The women of Peterborough are afforded an unusual opportunity during the present week and no one should fail to take advantage of the pure food demonstrations at E. F. Mason's store.

The demonstration is conducted under the personal supervision of Mrs. Clarry Hunt, the famous food expert, from Australia. On Tuesday, July 11th, Mrs. Hunt will demonstrate ribbon cake and baking powder buns. On Wednesday, chocolate cake and orange fritters. On Thursday, Almond cake and cocoanut rocks. On Friday, Layer cake and Tea Biscuits. On Saturday, Strawberry shortcake and Banana fritters.

Mrs. Hunt uses Magic Baking Powder exclusively.

Come to Sacred Heart Social this evening. You will enjoy a good Supper and meet all your friends. Band in attendance.

TWO OFFICERS OF THE 93RD BATTALION

MAJOR R. P. WATT. LIEUT. J. KETCHUM.

DID NOT ENLIST TO PARADE FOR SAM HUGHES SAY SOLDIERS

That is the Slogan Around Borden Camp To-day---Last Night's Disturbances Were on a Large Scale---93rd Band Gives Concert in Kingston To-night---Orders and General Military News.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 11.—"We enlisted to fight Germans, not to eat black dust and parade for Sam Hughes."

You hear this all over camp this morning, especially among the West Ontario battalions, who were brought here from their own camp, and were the chief disturbers in riots last night.

Sir Sam Hughes arrived at Camp Borden at six o'clock this morning accompanied by a big staff. The Minister's private secretaries were also with him as well as many newspaper men from Ottawa and Montreal.

General Logie and staff met the party at the station.

"Don't talk about that," said the Minister quietly, when asked about the riots of last night. He would not say anything more about it.

A conference is being held this morning between the officers commanding Western Ontario battalions, Sir Sam Hughes and General Logie and his staff. There are sounds from the lines of London units which show that the trouble is not over. The conference may determine many things.

It is possible that the review may not take place at all. Workmen are repairing the extensive damage done to the administration building this morning.

Story of the Riot.

Camp Borden, Ont., July 10.—"Sam and Sam Hughes" sums up a riot which broke out here this evening among the London soldiers who had been brought to this camp against their will. Before the trouble subsided several rifle shots were fired, the headquarters was besieged and windows broken.

The immediate cause of the riot was the rushing of preparations for the big review of Sir Sam Hughes tomorrow. For the last week the ceremonial area upon which the review is to be held has been the scene of prodigious stumping, and for the past three days the men have been put through tedious rehearsals in the broiling sun, on a dusty plain, for no other purpose than to present a big eyefull of khaki for the Minister of Militia on Pine Plains.

Outbreak of the Trouble.

The trouble had been brewing since the return from the rehearsal at 2.30 and there was evidently some organization of a demonstration in force at headquarters. A reporter was returning from the station, when loud cries could be heard in the distance from the lines of the London battalions. About two thousand men formed up in a straggling way on Hughes avenue, her by men waving great sticks, and howling. Most of them had a stick, and all were shouting. Among the shouts could be heard such things as "Do we like this hole?" "No." "We can't get a wash." "We want wet canteens." "We want to go back to London." "We won't sleep and live in dust for twenty-four hours."

Col. Osborne's Efforts to Calm Men.

When the parade arrived near headquarters, Col. Mewburn and Col. Osborne appeared on the scene, and things looked dangerous. Sticks were flung at the officers. Lieut.-Col. Osborne was lifted up, and he tried to reason with the mob. The men cheered him. He told them that he had been working hard for weeks to make the camp comfortable, and if they would be patient things would soon be all right. The crowd was unconvinced and howled the Colonel down.

"We want to get out of here," shouted one man, and the whole lot went mad. "We enlisted to fight the Germans, not to eat dust!" shouted another, and they all moved off to the Headquarters building.

Here was enacted an indescribable scene. The front of the south verandah was a mass of writhing and howling men, black with dust. They climbed on the room and mounted the railway cars nearby. Officers and N.C.O.'s tried in vain for a hearing.

A good proportion of these men were from London, and they kept repeating their request to return to that city.

Gen. Logie Meets Them.

At last Brig.-Gen. Logie appeared, with a list of complaints that had been handed to him on behalf of the men. The first, he said, was that they had not been allowed water bottles on the parade rehearsal. He promised that they should have the bottles to-morrow.

"We don't want them' There'll be no parade to-morrow! We don't want to see Sam!"

"Next," said the General, "is the kick on the camp."

"That's the big kick," cried one man, and there was an uproar."

"We want to go back to London or send us overseas. We might as well die there as choke here with the dust."

"I cannot send you back, or overseas. That is for the Government," said the General.

"Sam Hughes!" was the unanimous cry, and the General could not go on. Every mention of the Government or the Minister of Militia only added powder to the fire. Cries of "Graft!" were continuous.

Riotous Proceedings.

The officers then left and held a conference. The shouting continued, windows were broken and doors burst open at Headquarters. A band was brought up and this soothed slightly the savage breasts of the men. Tents were pulled down, and when the noise subsided many of the men went to their lines. About three hundred loitered threateningly, and the more pugnacious of them tried to force the rest for a charge. Rifles and bayonets were visible in the dark, and eight shots were fired from the lines of the 169th (London) Battalion, where the men were lined up. The eight cartridges were evidently blank. The 170th (Toronto) Battalion were called out with bayonets fixed, and

BIG VICTORY FOR THE LIBERAL CAUSE

PTE. ROBERT H. SANDYS— Of the 93rd Battalion, brother of Mrs. James Head, Montreal House, who came from Pomeroy, Ohio, U.S.A., to enlist and protect his sisters, who are all residents of Canada. He has been a resident of the U. S. A. for over 24 years and is also a citizen of the U. S. A. This ought to be some encouragemnt to the young man of Canada to protect their sisters.

LOYALTY CRY FAILED

STRATFORD, July 10.—One more Provincial bye-election has gone Liberal. North Perth to-day elected Mr. F. Wellington Hay of Listowel by a majority of 627, reversing a Conservative majority of only two years ago of 1,117. The contest rivalled that of Peel, the Ontario Government making a desperate effort to save itself from the defeat that it felt would be meted out to it. The Prime Minister, Cabinet Ministers and members of the Legislature joined in defence, but from the day of the Conservative convention the Government was doomed, and the vote shows decline of confidence in the Administration. The Conservatives cannot blame their cadidate, as Mr. John A. Makins is a well-known farmer of North Easthope, who has proved his popularity there by being elected Reeve in a Liberal township.

Mr. Makins himself does not suggest that it was too big a task to support a moribund Government, but says he realized from the first that he was in a losing fight.

MR. MAKINS EXPLAINS.

To the Globe to-night he said:

"The result of the election of to-day was from a combination of the liquor interests and the temperance Liberals, coupled with the vote of the pro-Germans in the riding."

Asked if the Germans in this county were not loyal subjects, Mr. Makins replied that the result of the election did not prove this. He charged the Liberals with having canvassed the Township of Ellice with the appeal to the Germans that he as a member of the County Council had been too generous in voting money for field kitchens and machie guns.

LOYALTY CRY FAILED.

This loyalty cry of the Conservatives did not succeed. In the city of Stratford, where the population is only 10 per cent. of German origin, the Liberals made their greatest gain. In 1914 the Conservative candidate, Mr. James W. Torrance, who was responsible for the present bye-election by retiring to accept a Government position, was given a majority of 635: Mr. Hay had a majority to-day of 108.

Even in the normally Conservative township of Elma, where there is but a very small percentage of Germanborn, and where the Conservatives played their loyalty card the strongest, their appeal to prejudice did not gain them anything, for the Liberals there made a gain of 67.

LIBERALS LET GERMANS ALONE.

There was some gain amongst the Germans, no doubt as the result of Conservative efforts to engender hatred, but in these cases the Conservatives drove them away from

THE BIG REVIEW AT BORDEN CAMP WAS CARRIED OUT

Although Several of the Western Ontario Battalions Marched Out Sullenly and Another Riot is Threatened by Some of the Men To-Night.

SARCASTIC MUSIC

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 11. — Despite last night's rioting, the big review of thirty thousand troops before Sir Sam Hughes took place today as scheduled, except that some features were slightly curtailed.

With the exception of a few of the ring leaders, the rioters unit all turned out.

The weather was again hot and several of the Western Ontario units marched out sullenly.

Some of the men threaten another riot to-night, even if to-day passes without trouble, and some say they will march out of camp to-night.

Sir Sam formally opened the rifle ranges to-day, firing three shots while he lay down on the turf.

The big review was over shortly after 1 o'clock. The London battalions were about 300 men short on parade.

The spectators cheered the Western Ontario battalions lustily to encourage them on the march. Sir Sam sat on his horse, and his "well done boys, very good boys" could be heard repeatedly. The ambulance waggons were busy taking in those exhausted.

Sir Sam is expected to leave camp at three o'clock. Over 100 soldiers slept on verandahs in Barrie last night and have not returned to camp.

At a conference of the officers of London units and Sir Sam and Gen. Logie this morning, it is understood that no action of any kind was taken. Sir Sam addressed the officers of units before the parade. He complimented the officers on their work and spoke of the hardships the troops underwent in France. While Sir Sam was speaking one battalion band commenced to play "How Dry I Am" and another band played "Home Sweet Home" and derisive shouts from some almost drowned the voice of Sir Sam. Outside of this the parade passed off as a great military spectacle.

52ND BATTERY BOOTH.

The 52nd Battery Booth will be located in Central Park at the corner of George and McDonnell streets tomorrow. All friends of the boys of the 52nd Battery are asked to liberally patronize the booth to-morrow in order that the handsome gramaphone should be secured for the Battery.

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1916

YES.

The Ottawa Journal thus remarks and inquires:

A French-Canadian in Chicago has eight sons enlisted to serve in Mexico. Is there anything in environment as regards patriotism?

Yes, there is a good deal in environment, and centre, too. In Canada we have the adverse influence of Nationalism expended upon the people of Quebec, an influence radiating from the Cabinet centre that holds three Nationalists — men who hold that it is no part of Canadian patriotism to fight for the defence of the Empire in part composed of Canada. Then another emanation from a centre is the indifference of the Dominion Government in the matter of recruitig—rtusig in practice to give official countenance and leading to the work of saving the Empire as represented by recruiting; and neglecting to apply what those who have a knowledge of, and take an interest in, recruiting, think is necessary—substitution of system and the adoption of some form of official registration from the hap-hazard methods that have prevaled and still prevail.

REST AND RELIGION.

The population is thinning out during the heated season, though the warmth of the weather cannot be said to cause many removals from the city. The churches are an index of what is going on. The congregations are notably smaller. Of course all the absences from the Sunday services are not due to absences from the city. The motor car is responsible for some of the vacancies in the pews and under circumstances which may not be justifiable. There are so many opportunities for joy rides during the week and during the long evenings now that the Sunday diversions will not be excusable.

The average man wants rest more than diversion. His muscles may be sore from hard work. His brain may be tired from worry and over-use. His heart may ache from a burden for which there is no balm during the stress of business engagements. He wants, or needs, to get away from the tumult and the strain and find refreshment in profund rest. The sequestered spot for this is not a thousand miles away, to reach which money and time must be spent. It can be had in a hundred places in and about the city. It may be found in the privacy of one's garden, under the shade of his own trees, and with the bloom and perfume of the flowers to soothe and satisfy. But man, busy man—and woman, busy woman—must rest somewhere, and preferably during the summer season.

The preacher who struck upon this thought yesterday struck a sympathetic chord. There were some empty pews before him, and this suggested that those who usually occupied them were off to the woods and the waters, and, amid the attractiveness of nature, recuperating, and gathering fresh strength to return to business and the activities of the hour. These were absent from their accustomed places, but on the wonders of creation they had occasion to ponder, with thoughts rising to the Creator of all things, and with a desire to offer Him gratitude and praise. Worship need not necessarily stop when one seeks the quiet of some retreat. Rest and worship are in a sense inseparably connected and they enter largely in the happy life of the individual.—Kingston Whig.

THE SUBMARINE CARGO BOAT

The German submarine Dautschland has arrived in an American port with a small but valuable cargo.

The Germans show a fine aptitude for timing their acts well. The news of the safe passage of this boat will cheer Germany when she badly needs cheering, for her allies are in a critical state. But the journey of this submarine is more an advertisement than anything else.

Nobody has doubted that a submarine could cross the ocean, and Britain could have sent one to Halifax or New York any time during the six months since the German intention of doing so was announced. Perhaps it would have been good business to have done so, and no doubt it would have been done if Britain had possessed a publicity department and if she attached as much importance to advertising as do the Germans and Americans. But John Bull rather makes a merit of the fact that he "doesn't advertise."

Britain does not need to avoid the surface of the sea in shipping goods across the ocean. When the Germans hail with delight the success of this underwater boat they admit completely the hollowness of their claim that they accomplished anything in the battle of Jutland. The German ship must still keep off the surface of the seas. This vessel, being able to grope its way through the depths — coming up for air now and then, but ready to sink in two minutes if a British flag is seen anywhere along the horizon—was able to elude capture and reach the American coast. But it may have less luck in returning, and it is the cargo it will try to carry back that Britain will most desire to intercept.—Toronto Star.

THE RESULT IN NORTH PERTH.

Mr. Wellington Hay's signal victory in North Perth proves that on its general record the Hearst Government has ceased to hold the confidence of the people of Ontario. The constituency, in both Provincial and Dominion contests, is normally Conservative by about 200 majority. It went Liberal in the Federal election of 1908 by 41, but in the Provincial election of the same year, when Mr. Hay was the Liberal candidate against Mr. Torrance, the sitting member, the Conservative majority was 266. This was increased in 1911 to 572 and in 1914 to 1,117, when a third candidate intervened, and Liberals lost heavily on the prohibition issue.

What has brought about the extraordinary change during the past two years? The apologists for the Hearst Government declare that the action of the Government in passing a temporary prohibitory law has alienated anti-prohibition Conservatives and brought no compensating support from friends of prohibition who formerly voted Liberal. The obvious answer to this explanation is that Liberals could hardly be expected to vote against their own leader and their own candidate, whose policy is that of permanent abolition of the bar, in favour of the candidate of a party which only a few months ago was in close alliance with the liquor interests and which may be again when the question of the repeal of the temporary prohibitory law comes before the electors three years hence. There has been no "betrayal" of the Hearst Government by Liberal temperance electors, because they never agreed either explicitly or implicitly to support the candidates of the Government. Mr. Hay and those who assisted him in North Perth have stated plainly that the liquor interests have nothing to hope for from him, and that he stands squarely on the Rowell platform of the permanent closing of the saloon in Ontario. In face of this declaration, a circular letter issued by Mr. G. A. Warburton of the Committee of One Hundred to the electors of North Perth on the eve of the election betrays a very curious twist of judgment. Speaking, not for the committee, which refused to interfere between the parties in a case where both candidates were acceptable to temperance electors, but for himself, Mr. Warburton said:

"I have been credibly informed that the liquor interests of Ontario have determined to beat the Conservative candidate in the North Perth bye-election. Those who know Mr. Rowell are sure that he would not be a party to any alliance with the liquor interests, but if I lived in North Perth I would try to discover whether it is true that the liquor vote is going to the Liberal candidate. If I found it to be so, or believed it to be so, I would vote for the Conservative candidate. Apparently both candidates are personally admirable men and both are in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act. But the situation seems to be this: The liquor interests are out to hit the Government, and especially the Premier, as hard a blow as they can. They are using the Liberal party and its candidate as a club, whether with the consent of that party or not, hardly seems to be to matter much."

The temperance electors of North Perth refused to be led away by Mr. Warburton's sophistry. They knew that Mr. Hay was as good a temperance man as Mr. Makins, that Mr. Rowell was an even more tried and tested temperance reformer than Premier Hearst, and they decided that it would be a most unjust proceeding to vote against the candidate of the Liberal party, which had done the hard pioneering work for prohibitory legislation, and to cast their votes for the candidate of the party which had taken the issue up when the state of public opinion was such that it was no longer possible to ignore it.

Mr. Hay's election is no more a triumph for the liquor interests than Mr. Makins' election would have been a triumph for prohibition. The truth is that Ontario is tiring of the sort of Government that is provided from Queen's Park, and is turning toward Mr. Rowell as the ablest man in the public life of the Province. Ever since the death of Sir James Whitney this tendency has been marked. No other meaning could be read into the by-election of 1914 in West Hamilton, when a Conservative majority of 1,411 in June was reduced to 36 in November. In Dundas, when a successor to Sir James was elected, the Conservative majority of 673 shrank to 63.

In Peel, where Mr. Fallis' horse-trading methods alienated hundreds of Conservative electors, a Conservative majority of 627 in June, 1914, was changed to a Liberal majority of 305 in February, 1916. North Perth is but another example of a tendency that was clearly marked long before any breach occured between the liquor interests and the Government, and when the reason advanced by Conservatives for the turnover in North Perth was not operative. Ontario, by these remarkable reversals of majorities, is trying to wake the Seven Sleepers of Queen's Park.

A FRENCH SOLDIER'S DIARY

(Copied From a Letter From the Front.)

Mobilized at the beginning of the war, he laid down his pen and went off with many of his comrades of the press to fight for his country. In an engagement in Lorraine he was badly wounded and invalided out of the army. During his convalescence he collected his campaigning souvenirs, and these he has now published in the form of a very readable soldier's diary.

Here are some extracts:

Company parade on the Aisne The Lieutenant speaks:

"It is not your officer, but your comrade who has summoned you to meet him. Above the gratio lie four Englishmen who were killed last month. I know that on All Saints' day you would not have their graves appears to be abandoned. Get some wreaths and flowers, and we will take them to those who died in defending our soil."

The men filed off in silence and disappeared in the wood. In an hour they returned with several beautiful wreaths of ivy and holly. In a garden the Germans had forgotten to devastate, they had found chrysanthemums And the tombs, marked only by the cypress round which the day before shells had been bursting, were transformed into graves as pretty as in a country cemetery. The section shouldered arms and the entire company ranged itself on the crest. The ceremony was a simple one. Our lieutenant paid a tribute to our unknown brothers who had fallen in France.

We cried, "Vive l'Angleterre!" The picket presented arms, and then each one returned to his post. The dead who lie there are: Lieut. B. MacGuire, and Soldiers H. C. Dozer, E.-Byrne and Ford, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

Varlet, the cook, went down to the village to make soup. He took with him the two dishes and the section's kettle. An instant later he returned furious and dishevelled, with empty hands. "Well, then; what about the soup?" Varlet shouted. "D—— this soup! You'll have to tighten your belts this time. A Jack Johnson has fallen on the kitchen.' Varlet relates how he heard the whistling of the shell and knew that it was for him. He had only time to throw himself on the ground and dive into a dog kennel. "When the explosion came," he explained, "I was only half way into the kennel. The dog prevented me from going farther. Good-bye to our dinner, good-bye to the plates and the mess kettle.

Crossing Paris before the battle of the Marne. As we marched through the streets in company formation, our rifles on our shoulders, on our way to Gare St. Lazare, the men hailed the taxi chauffeurs, "Hey, chauffeur! Will you take a message to my wife or mother or sister? Such and such a street and such a number. Bring you as quick as you can to Gare St. Lazare." "Right you are!"

And the chauffeur was off. Half an hour later he brought back all the family, and more than once while they were embracing and caressing one another he discreetly withdrew without his fare.

Encamped in an abandoned sow mill. While we were doing ourselves very well at dinner there was a knock at the door. A straggler had lost his way and was in search of food and shelter. We asked him to join us. When he saw the table his face broke into one large smile.

"I'm in luck," he said.

The Lieutenant filled up his plate and poured him out a glass of wine. With his mouth full the stranger said:

"Merci, M. Roberty."

"What! You know me?"

"Rather, and you too" — and he pointed at me. "I was a waiter at Lavenie's. The last time I served you was at luncheon the day after mobilization."

Strangely moved, we shook hands with him all round.

"Excuse me, old chap," said the Lieutenant, "I did not recognize you."

He excused him.

"Keep your seat," added the Lieutenant. "I'll wait on you this time."

When dinner was over we gave our best corner in the straw to our friend the waiter.

At the battle of Soissons. "In Colonne par Leux, en Avant!" ("In file! Forward.) Hardly had we started out in the direction of Bucy, when we were saluted by a shell, then two shells, and then three. They had got our range. At the first houses in Bucy artillerymen, sabre and revolver in hand, cry to us:

"What news?" we shout.

He made a grimace and says nothing. Evidently there is a fight on. The section climbs towards the trenches. Half way up the hill we meet a few men and a lieute nant from another reigment. They look haggart and don't seem to know where they are.

"Where are you going?' questions our lieutenant.

"I haven't the least idea,' replies the other. "This is all that remains of my company. We have just been blown up by a mine."

On we go, climbing continually. I have had enough of it. Still I keep on, supported by Charensac, the big Auvergnat. The slope is steep and muddy. I must jettison some of my provisions. Taking from my sack a a tin of stew and another of lobster, I mechanically offer them to Charensac. To my astonishment he shakes his head. He does not want them. I throw the tins away, and Charensac and I climb on sighing heavily. At the summit we bear off along a sunken path, with mud up to our knees. My section must pass in front of a firing battery. Our lieutenant politely remarks to the artillery officer that it would perhaps be prudent to interrupt the fire in order to avoid accidents. The captain smiles disdainfully.

"Stop firing to let the infantry pass!" he explains with scorn.

We turn into a communication trench and pass under the muzzles of the battery. Having organized our positions we settle down to rest, plentifully sprinkled by German shrapnel and high explosives. Suddenly Charensac creeps to my side. He has my lobster and my stew. "It would have broken my heart," said the thrifty Anvergnat, "to have left them behind." At the risk of his life he had gone back and fetched them. And, to his credit be it said, he would not hear of it when I insisted on making him a present of them.

Liquor Question To Be Big Issue in Michigan Fight

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—The battle between the wet and dry forces in Michigan promises to have a far-reaching effect in the fortunes of candidates in both parties.

The filing of a petition with 75,000 dry signatures, requesting that the issue be put up to the people of Michigan at the November elections, was the opening gun of a campaign which bids fair to make the old time politicians reminiscent.

That the wet element is thoroughly aroused over the seriousness of the situation to their cause is evidenced by increased activity in securing speakers and candidates who possess liberal views. It is stated that State Senator James Murtha of Detroit was offered $2,000 for a single speech in advocacy of the wet cause.

Murtha to Manage Wets.

Murtha, who is an orator and one of the strongest men in the Democratic party, has been quoted as being anxious to run as a gubernatorial candidate on a straight wet platform, dumfounded liquor leaders by declining the offer and criticising the manner in which their campaign has been conducted. It is now said the Detroit senator will become manager of the wet campaign in Michigan.

His acceptance as leader of the wet forces brings disappointment to Democratic party leaders, who had picked him to run for the governorship in place of Governor Ferris, should the latter adhere to his determination not to become a candidate for a third term.

Surprise is expressed over the small number of candidates who have filed petitions for various offices thus far. While July 29 is the last day on which petitions can be filed, the applicants are far behind numerically compared to other years.

Sleeper Is Wide Awake.

A. R. Sleeper of Bad Axe, Republican candidate for governor, has turned a clever campaigning stunt on his rivals. Headquarters have been established at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, and all Michigan visitors are immediately tagged and hurried to the Sleeper booth to sign his petition. This move has the double barreled object of securing many names on Sleeper's petition and getting in touch with voters.

This invasion of Frank B. Leland's territory naturally does not make a hit with the supporters of Detroit's candidate for governor, and his friends are devising ways and means to counteract Sleeper's action by making a raid on the Thumb, where the latter enjoys his greatest popularity.

Rumour has it that Mayor Oscar B. Marx of Detroit is to be an eleventh hour candidate for governor as a standard bearer of the liberal element in the Republican party. Marx has designs on the position, but is inclined to bide his time for a couple of years, so he can serve another term as mayor of the metropolis.

SOOTHING AND HEALING!

Greco-Bulgarian Intrigues Have Tobacco Land Behind Kavala as Their Background

LONDON, July 10.—The deep mystery enveloping the political attitude of Greece for many months, and the energetic measures recently taken by the Allies against Greece, forcing her to demobilization, is about to be cleared up. The Italian censor has alloged the news of the situation which forms the back-ground of the extraordinary intrigues which for more than a year has mystified all the nations, belligerent and neutral alike, to become public.

Secret agreements between Greece and Austria, disputes and threats between the Allied Powers, Austria and Bulgaria, and a recent secret agreement between Bulgaria and Greece, all are part of this amazing back-ground.

An interesting consequence of the agreements just forced upon Greece by the Allies is that the Franco-British expedition at Salonica now will expect active warfare with the Bulgarians. Under the pre-existing conditions the Bulgarians, it is declared, refused to fight the French and British troops.

It is now known that Germany urged upon Bulgaria the necessity of making an attack on the Allies at Salonica six months ago, when the latter were poorly prepared. The reply of Bulgaria was that her campaign was limited to Macedonia and to operations incidental to the accomplishment of her purposes in that region, and that she would not be moved from her resolution not to expand her campaign.

Tobacco is at the bottom of Bulgaria's war. History may give to the Balkan end of the present war the name now commonly used regarding it in the southeast of Europe, "the tobacco war." Tobacco—the article known as "fine Egyptian" or "Turkish" tobacco, which in reality is now Greek tobacco—has been the cause of Bulgaria joining the Central Powers, and the cause, therefore, of the overrunning of Serbia, of the maintenance by Greece of her neutrality, of the failure of the Gallipoli expedition and of the prolonging of a great European conflict.

Italy, among the greater Allies, is the one most keenly concerned in the Balkan end of the conflict. Had Italy's voice been heard at the time when the treaty of Bucharest was signed, in 1913, Bulgaria, the nation which had won the war against Turkey for the greater benefit of others and which had lost the succeeding war which she fought with her old allies, would have received better treatment. The Macedonia question, in both its Serbian and Greek ends, would have been more justly decided and Bulgaria would have received more of the precious Turkish tobacco lands and a better outlet to the Aegean Sea.

ITALIAN WATCHFULNESS.

It was the watchfulness of the Italian agents in the Balkans which alone prevented the Allies from being entirely hoodwinked by Greece and Bulgaria. When recently the Bulgarians started to invade Greece it was Italy which had the solution to the mystery of the quiet and orderly surrender of Greek forts to the Bulgarians, and it was Italy which demanded that the Allies take immediate action against Greece.

Italian agents are said to have obtained proof of the existance of agreements between Greece and Bulgaria, whereby the latter, in consideration for assistance to Greece in Albania, was to be allowed peaceful occupation of former Turkish territory, which Greece had obtained through the Bucharest treaty.

The Bulgarian advance on Serres, Drama and Cavallo constitutes in reality not the oriental development of the war of the Teutonic empires against the Allies but merely an incident of the Balkanic troubles, a consequence of the deplorable peace of Bucharest, says the Italian political authority, Signor Tedeschi. In an article in the Tribuna of Rome he appeals to the censor, to allow the facts in the case as he wishes to narrate them to be revealed since accurate information on the matter can have only a beneficent result, and can serve to upset the calculations of German press agencies which attempt to alarm the peoples of the Allied nations with the statement that the Bulgarian and Tentonic operations in the southeast of Europe are a new and serious onslaught against the armed forces of the Allies and comparable with the German assault at Verdun, and with the Austrian attacks in the Trentino.

"This Bulgarian advance," Signor Tedeschi says, "is in a measure a local fact and its interest was regarded as limited to the two parties directly in question until the Allies took action to nullify the arrangement which Greece and Bulgaria had made among themselves.

"In Italy and on our side of it the military experts have been discussing the question as to whether the eventual occupation of the zone of Serres, Drama and Cavallo would constitute a new threat against Salonica. In general they have reached the conclusion that Bulgarian action action against Cavallo would be inspired by a great strategic move which had Salonica as its objective, and that it would be part only of vast simultaneous movements from the direction of Monastir. In reality, however, all the indications heretofore revealed entirely different purposes on the part of the Teutonic powrs.

The best German troops from the Balkanic sector are now in France or in Russia. The Bulgarians always admitted even when their German and Austrian allies were treating them in the most flattering fashion, that the Bulgarian military programme should consider itself as substantially realized with the occupation of Macedonia.

Bulgaria's Aims.

"It is no longer a mystery that, to the most seductive invitations to attacks Salonika months ago when Salonika was not the formidable base it is to-day, the Bulgarian General Staff replied with a positive refusal. The reasons which justified the refusal continued to be equally positive.

"For Bulgaria the vital problem, once she occupied Macedonia, was to succeed in remaining there despite the events of the morrow, whatever they might be. The diplomatic arrangements which Tsar Ferdinand has been meditating in order to succeed in this purpose will be efficacious only if Bulgaria has pledges in hand with which she can negotiate and soldiers to give weight to her end of the argument. There is no motive of any mysterious kind why Bulgaria should not deviate from the constant purpose she has had in aiming exclusively at Bulgaria's interest.

"But there is another side of the problem to be considered. The military critics, even though they admit that the Bulgarian advance on Cavallo does not include the purpose of an offensive on Salonika, still seem to think that this operation may be determined by a purpose of preventing an allied offensive through the Balkans toward the plains of Adrianople or Philippoli.

"Without knowing the special intention of the French general Sarrail, who is in command of the allied forces at Salonika, it is of course impossible to make any positive statement in this regard. Common good sense, however, would indicate that if the Allies really proposed an attack toward the chief cities of Bulgaria they would have begun by landing their expeditionary force at Kavala, which is the indispensable base for the direct line through which such an attack must be made. Salonika, on the other hand, may always be considered as a formidable thorn in the side of the Bulgarian enemy. A permanent war like menace, its function in the general economy of the war is already indicated by the very numerous forces which it keeps in activity all around it. Constituting a concrete demonstration of power and of warlike activity on the part of the Allies from the political point of view, the Salonika camp has been the most efficacious restraining force for all those Balkanic factors which would line up against them if General Sarrail and his army were elsewhere.

The Kavala Question.

"With regard to the future, and considering that the German assertion that while Verdun is the right wing of a great Teutonic fighting force and the north of Italy its centre, the forces of the King of Bulgaria constitute the left wing is not to be taken too seriously, it may be said that the Allies regard the Greco-Bulgarian problem as a distinctively eastern European one which affects Italy more than any of the other leading Powers. The Kavala question is likely to loom up as one of the complicated ones of coming months and possibly years.

"At Kavala, before the war of 1912, there lived very many Turks, many Greeks and some Bulgarians. The Turkish problem was quickly solved. Not a great many of the Sultan's subjects survived the triumphal entry of the Bulgarian chiefs into Kavala, and still fewer of them were left when King Constantine had himself photographed in a memorable attitude on the ruins of the seaport won to Greece. After that photograph was taken the Bulgarians also disappeared from the city. In the country, however, many thousands of Turks remained and really constituted the basis of the population. They adapted themselves quietly to their new rulers, happy only if their masters would allow them to live and work in peace.

"The zone of Serres, Drama and Kaval was acrimoniously contested by Greece and Bulgaria at the conference of Bucharest. The good offices of the German Emperor were used in favour of his Greece relative, and the sentimental affection of France for Greece also aided in having the rich gift given to the latter country. Venizelos himself declared on that occasion that the gift was a unique one.

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away,—are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead—and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT NOW ADVOCATED THAT GIVES FINE RESULTS.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only make matters worse. The best advice we can give any sickly woman is to test out the following treatment.

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run-down and in need of a strengthening, building-up medicine.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By perfecting assimilation, Ferrozone supplies nutrition—this gives strength, vim, stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance — not a person who is weak, nervous, or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-Builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself—sold everywhere in 50 cent boxes, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Don't fail to spend this evening at Sacred Heart Social. Supper, Music and various attractions.

OUTINGS WITH THE OUTFITTERS

[1] A Group of Guides. [2] Tieing the Diamond Hitch. [3] Where the Camp Fire Blazes. [4] Camping at foot of Mt. Assiniboine. [5] Lake Louise

WHO and what is an Outfitter? The real genuine article is a mountain man: guide, philosopher, friend, cook, lumber jack, bridge-builder, broncho buster, hunter—all found under the one suit of clothes.

He is a comparatively new type in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, representing a new profession. You'll find him at every C.P.R. tourist point in the mountains, at your service for a modest fee just to keep the pot boiling. You can buy more good fellowship and more undiluted happiness and health in this way than in any other yet invented. I know, for I've tried it out many a time.

May I introduce you to a sample Outfitter, at Field, say, or it might as easily be Glacier or Lake Louise or Banff. A gang of tenderfeet have arranged for a trip through the Yoho Valley. The Imperial Limited having dumped us on the platform, dunnage bags and all, it does not take long for Mr. Outfitter to give us welcome, with a grip of the hand that says: "I'll see you through." From across the Kicking Horse River comes a procession of ponies—our cavalcade no less, with a couple of trusties to assist the boss. So we are sorted out to our mounts, as we eye each other with mutual suspicion. I don't like the look in the eye of Nebuchanezar (Neb. for short), but we hit it off fairly well on the trail. So we're off, single file, a truly wonderful procession of assorted humans. Isn't it jolly just to be in God's garden in the open air, to have all creation to wander in, to be hitting the trail to Wonderlands beyond, while giant peaks, like Stephen and Cathedral, Field and Burgess, look down upon us midgets from their towering peaks.

But it is of the Outfitter I want to write. It is worth the whole price of admission to watch him do things and handle situations, to corral a wandering horse, and quiet a refractory one, to help the girl from Chicago and the matron from Montreal, and the male tenderfeet from elsewheres in dismounting and mounting, and in guiding their mounts through turbulent streams and tangley woods.

No less adaptive are they in the camp. They can handle axe or gun as adeptly as the reins of a broncho. They can fell a tree across a brawling stream with unerring accuracy, or cut a way through a maze of underbrush or Devil's Clubs.

So the tents were well pitched and ready, with the nicest of beds made of odorous branches. All one had to do was to spread his blankets, make a human roll of himself and then journey to Slumber Land, regardless of disturbing gophers or porcupines. But it is as a cook that the Outfitter shines most brightly. The elaborate many-coursed meal at a C.P.R. hotel tasted no better—and they taste well—than the four-course meal Bill served at a quick lunch speed, with unlimited reserves in the end of his little cookery tent. Everything from mush to bannock and tea was on tap, at and in between meals and at bed time.

And then the happy times around the camp fire revealed the Outfitter in a new role—that of a story-teller of rare quality, a raconteur, too. Indeed the trail trip as a whole showed Bill up to be a Gentleman, a Benefactor, and a Philanthropist. So there!

DOCTORS AT LOSS TO DEFINE BLINDNESS

A definition of blindness is not so easy to formulate as one would suppose, inasmuch as the medical profession seems to be more or less puzzled over it. It is obvious from the comments made by the editor of the New York Medical Journal under the caption, "What Is Blindness?" that the physicians are by no means certain just what conditions should be embraced under this term.

"The average practitioner," he writes, "even the average layman, would be astonished to learn that he cannot define blindness offhand; yet there was once a notable discussion on the point at a meeting of the ophthalmological section of the Royal Society of Medicine, (Proceedings January, 1915). Harold Grimsdale, admitting that total blindness was easily defined, offered several definitions of simple blindness with a view of guiding legislation on the subject.

"Was a child blind who could not read an ordinary textbook? In some trades vision of 6-12 was as good as 6-6, but a watchmaker should not only have 6-6, but the power of accommodation as well; hence few watchmakers remained in the trade after the age of fifty years.

"Grimsdale submitted a definition of a blind child as one whose corrected vision was less than 6-60, but he thought there should be special schools for those whose vision was not more than 6-24; as to adults, he would accept any one with corrected vision of less than 3-60 as eligible for a pension. Between these limits, however, there was work for specialists in individual cases.

"William C. Rockliffe would divide the so-called blind of all sues into. 1. blind; two, partially blind or with defective vision; and include as blind, a. those with no perception of light; b. those unable to differentiate; and, c, those able to differentiate, but at a less distance than three feet; as partially blind, those able to differentiate beyond three feet, but with less acuity of vision than 6-60.

"Marcus MacGillivray divided so-called blind people into three classes: 1. Totally blind, those who do not possess any perception of light. 2. Practically blind, those who possess perception of light, but are unable to take part in any industrial occupation owing to marked impairment of vision. 3. Partially blind, those whose vision is such as to preclude them from obtaining employment in an ordinary workshop, but also such as to disqualify them for admission to an institution for the blind on equal terms with those totally or practically blind. With slight verbal changes these divisions applied also to children.

"N Bishop Harman was opposed to an exact definition of blindness because the clever word jugglers of Parliament could fall foul of it, and would cite cases well known to themselves which would have to be excluded from the embrace of this 'unconscionable definite.' He would have each adult case examined individually by two qualified practitioners personally acquainted with the sufferer. As to children, the present definition of blindness, sanctioned as it was by custom, was sufficient.

"F. Richardson Cross cited the practice of census takers in the United States, who entered as 'blind' people who could not read a book even with the aid of glasses, although actually they might have some power of sight. The danger of definition was that, if the State gave aid to the blind, many people who desired to live easily without work would make a claim for assistance, while the independent, spirited workman would accept any position rather than go to an institution.

"W. T. Holmes Spicer hoped that a good definition would be found, one for the benefit of ophthalmological experts, however, and not for lay members of a county council.

"The President of the section, Priestley Smith, reminded his colleagues that their opinion had not yet been asked, but he hoped that the authorities would appeal to them rather than to some individual and permit them to send an authorized representative—Mr. Grimsdale for example—in whom they all had perfect confidence.

"We note, therefore, that both in Great Britain and in the United States the word 'blind' does not always mean what it seems to mean; a more or less useful eye, with good perception of light, may be classified as blind."

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

RED CROSS WANTS ADDRESSES AND NAMES OF PRISONERS IN GERMANY

The Red Cross desires to obtain a complete list of Peterborough soldiers who are prisoners in Germany. It is their aim to have parcels of food and other comforts sent regularly to every man from this city who has fallen into the Germans' hands, and they therefore appeal to the relatives of the men to supply their names, number, rank and the German camp at which they are interned. Will the relatives or friends of local prisoners kindly supply this information to Mrs. T. F. Matthews or leave it at the Examiner Office. When it is remembered that the prisoners in Germany are to a considerable extent dependent upon the parcels they receive, there should be no delay in immediately forwarding the desired information.

Nine Special Trains Will Bring Crowds For The 12th

An idea of the traffic the G.T.R. will carry into and out of Peterborough to-morrow is conveyed by the following schedule of arrivals and departures:

7.55 a.m., regular from Lindsay.
8.00 a.m., regular from Campbellford.
8.10 a.m., regular from Port Hope.
8.30 a.m., special from Campbellford; departs at 7 p.m.
8.35 a.m., special from Cobourg; departs at 6.30 p.m.
9.50 a.m., regular from Lakefield.
10.15 a.m., special from Fenelon Falls; departs at 5.50 p.m.
10.20 a.m., special from Franklin; departs at 4.35.
10.45 a.m., special from Lindsay; departs at 4.30 p.m.
11.05 a.m., special from Raven Lake; departs at 5 p.m., going through to Coboconk.
11.40 a.m., regular from Lindsay.
12.10 p.m., regular from Port Hope.

C. P. R. SPECIALS

In addition to the regular morning trains the C.P.R. has the following specials:

9.00 a.m., from Sulphide, Tweed, Havelock, etc.
10 a.m., from Burkelon, Pontypool, Cavanville.
10.20 a.m., from Lindsay, via Port McNicholl line.

Beware of Fake Baking Powder Tests

"THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute quantities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

"FIRST WIN, THEN TALK" EDICT NOT ACCEPPTED

BERLIN, July 11.—The recent appeal of the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, in the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung for less discussion and criticism and more concentration on the war, or, briefly "first win, then talk," has unloosed a flood of discussion for and against the Chancellor.

The Conservatives declare that the Chancellor is demanding the nation's blind confidence without giving the people an insight into his plans, and criticize "the paralyzing silence" of Wilhelmstrasse. They assert that the nation is still without an adequate definition of the great purpose of the war.

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg now returns to the charge in the Nord Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, denying that he is asking for any such blind confidence. He refers to his speeches in the Reichstag, in which he outlined the aims of the war. In this connection, the Chantellor asks: "Is it not a great purpose to free from foreign control the gates of approach into the heart of Germany?"

REFLECTIONS OF AN OLD TIMER

Early this morning have nothing in particular to do and attracted by the sunny atmosphere I strolled down to the George street wharf and watched one of our passenger steamers steaming up and starting on its long hike up the Kawartha lakes and the winding Otonabee to Lindsay. It is remarkable how the tastes and inclinations of the local excursionist have changed in the past ten of fifteen years. Years ago when the old Wolfe street wharf was in its glory, nothing would satisfy the tourist and holidayer but a trip down the Otonabee to Jubilee. The dinner basket was packed and labelled "Jubilee" or some other point down stream. In those days the old Calcutt Line of Steamer carried down crowds the like of which are not seen or heard of to-day.

Those were the palmy days along the old Otonabee, the golden age of Peterborough's picnic history. Those times are past, however.

The trend of traffic of late years has been up stream and the Kawartha Lakes have usurped the Otonabee in the affections of the tourist. Stoney Lake has now a summer population which Rice Lake could never boast of and the water route connecting Peterborough with her little sister Lindsay has also been a great factor in the popularity of the Kawartha system of Lakes. The Railway accommodation offered to the Stoney Lake visitor is also a strong incentive for the tourist to seek the Northern Lake with the many islands in preference to the big inland lake to the south.

The familiar taunts of yesterday are the desert wastes of to-day and spots down the river and along Rice Lake which were once frequented by joyous picnickers have long since given way to the tall grass and the "no trespassing" signs.

Norwood once a real live little borough has now settled down to rural repose and Idyll Wyld once the delight of the excursionists and upon which many a steamer load of holidayers have lounged is now private property.

It was even thus and summer resorts like every fad must naturally be expected to come and go and to rise and fall in the fickle estimation of the pleasure seeking public. These reflections must constitute the sole solace of the old timer as he sails down the beautiful Otonabee these bright sunny days of early summer and cogitates on the glory of the past.

"What has been and might have been,
And Who was changed and who was dead."

their own party. The Liberals did not make the slightest attempt to win over this vote. The Globe is informed on the best of authority that they did not have a single canvasser in Ellice or in any other German-speaking community.

As for Ellice, specifically motioned by the Conservative candidate, to-day the largest Liberal majorities were secured in the two polls where English-speaking voters predominate. Moreover, in contrast to the Liberals declining to appeal to any prejudices, the Conservative forces were augmented for the contest by Messrs. John Bennewiss, M.P.P. for South Perth, and Henry Eilber, M.P.P. for South Huron though where or how they worked the Liberals do not know.

REACTION ON LOYALTY CRY.

The only visible effect of the Conservative loyalty cry was a reaction. In their campagin material they informed the electorate that the election of the Liberal would mean a slam at the British cause. They especially lauded Sir Sam Hughes; so Sir Sam may take some of the blame today, especially as the soldier vote went largely against him.

PROHIBITION CRY ALSO.

Prohibition was the Conservatives' only other cry. True, Hon. I. B. Lucas stated at the first meeting that bilingualism was to be the issue, and he only issue. But the party failed in that deception of the public, and abandoned the bilingual cry. So it was they fell back upon prohibition, imagining that the Liberals of temperace principles could forget their stand in 1914. The Liberals had even more recent reasons to remember the Conservatives and what they intended to do for temperance in Stratford The seven members of the City Council who tried to block the local option by-law in this city this very year were seven Conservatives who have been talking prohibition during the past few days.

CONSERVATIVES STAYED AT HOME.

On the other hand, Mr. Hay made himself very clear as to his attitude which was that he stood absolutely on Mr. Rowell's platform. The result was that, while Mr. Hay polled the normal Liberal vote in Stratford today, enough Conservatives stayed at home to allow their party to be badly beaten. In 1908 the Liberal candidate Mr. Hay, polled 1,587 votes, in 1911 Mr. Brown 1,214, and in 1914 Mr. Robertson 1,074. To-day Mr. Hay polled 1,226, so that it is evident he got just about the normal Liberal vote, though the Conservatives polled so many less that the net result was a gain of 744 for the Liberals.

NORMAL LIBERAL VOTE TOLD.

In fact the getting out of the normal Liberal vote had perhaps as much to do with the actual winning of the contest as anything else. The Coservatives relied upon the Cabinet Ministers and assistant orators of the Government, whose reputation was at stake, but the rank and file disgusted with the pretence of such an Administration, were loath to organize, though the party managers did everything possible in every section to inspire them. On the other hand, the Liberals were behind Mr. Hay to a man, and the slogan of "Hay day, July the tenth," was a rallying cry that aroused real zeal among the party.

Capt. McClellan At Borden Camp

He Points Out the Defects or Oversights Committed by Col. Low

The correspondent of the Toronto Star included the following illuminating paragraph in his news letter yesterday—"A feature in connection with this camp is the superintendent of the grounds, Capt. J. H. McClellan, to whom all the troubles in connection with the grounds are sold. He rides around all day in a buggy and visits the units, finding out where improvements can be made in the accommodation."

The public has had the impression that Col. Low and his staff had established at Camp Borden a military camp that was perfection itself. Even Toronto supply houses failed to meet the exacting demands of the administrators. Notwithstanding all the thoroughness with which this camp was planned and built, Capt McClellan, driving around "all day" in his buggy, sort of a fifth wheel to it, finds room for improvement thus performing the impossible, or at least gilding gold, and at the same time Capt. Harris receives a mere gold wash of ten dollars a day.

DREW TO MENARD WHARVES

Civic Carter Swears He Carted Materials to the Work

EVIDENCE OF MORNING MUCH LIKE THAT ALREADY OFFERED.

MONTREAL, July 11.—Mr. Albaid Germain, K.C., counsel for the Menard family in the Bordeaux ward sewer investigation, now proceeding before Mr. Justice Panneton, took advantage of the cross-examination of a witness to declare that the whole affair is a "tissue of lies and calumnies" against Alderman Menard. Mr. Justice Panneton ordered him to proceed with the cross-examination of his witness. Mr. German's declaration came as a diversion in the otherwise dull proceedings this morning.

Two witnesses were in the witness box to-day, the first Emmanuel Picard, a city carter, and the second, J. B. Decelles, a city accountant, who checked the disappearance of material during the construction of the Bordeaux sewers.

Picard explained how he had been employed on the Salaberry street work and how he had carted materials to the Menard wharf.

Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city, inquired: "According to the general information to whom does the Bordeaux wharves belong"

Mr. Germain objected to this question, but Mr. Geoffrion said it was a question which facilitated his argument, and was associated with the agreement of sale entered into by Ald. Menard and his brother, Pierre, the postman, who was now according to Ald. Menard, the owner. The question was allowed, and witness replied that the general impression was that the biggest wharf, the left going down to the river, belonged to Ald. Menard.

Witness said he had transported earth and stone to the land of Aldas and Gedeon Menard, relatives of Ald. Menard, and he spoke of carting material from the sewer trenches in Valmont street to Aldas Menard's property. He said he used to make ten or twelve trips a day.

Mr. Geoffrion asked witness if he had seen any drunkenness on the Bordeaux work, but he could not give any positive information on this point.

Picard was closely cross-examined by Mr. Germain. He admitted that he was one of those who signed the request for an investigation, and later a Mr. Eugene Picard, signed the affidavit.

It ranspired that there are three Eugene Picards figuring in the case and there was much laughter in the court when it was explained that one was Eugene Picard "pere", the second one was Eugene Picard "fils," and the third one Eugene Picard "jeune fils." Eugene Picard, Jr., is the father of the present witness.

Witness admitted, too, that he had carted earth to his own place, four or five loads during the year, he said, but each time he insisted it was under the eyes of his foreman. He said he always had the permission of his foreman, who once told him that if he wanted any advantage he had to ask Alderman Menard.

He also admitted that he had taken bundles of wood belonging to the city with, in each case, he said, he had the foreman's permission. His foreman at one time was Armand Major, and at another time was Antoine Desiauriers.

Mr. J. B. Decelles, city accountant, was next put into the witness box, and he was being examined at the adjournment. He produced the books of the city respecting the materials used on the building of the Bordeaux sewers, and bore out the testimony of City Engineer Mercier.

The investigation is proceeding.

Chief Thompson Attends Convention

Chief of Police Thompson has returned to the city and resumed his duties at Police Headquarters, after attending the Twelfth Annual Convention of the Chiefs of Police of the Dominion, held at Kenora, New Ontario. Chief Thompson reports this year's convention to be the most successful one held yet, both in point of attendance of Chiefs of Police and in regard to the excellence of the papers which were read relating to police duties. The local Chief of Police read a paper on "Juvenile Crime," which paper had been read at the International Convention in Toronto two years ago, but which the Convention requested to be read again owing to the subject of juvenile crime having been previously treated by the local Chief.

President—Supt. Rogers, Provincial Police, Toronto.

Vice-President—Chief Ridout, of Monkton, N.B.

Chiefs Thompson, of this city, Newton of Belleville, and McLellan of Vancouver received nominations to the Vice-Presidency, but owing to Ontario, being represented in the Presidency, all retired in favour of Chief Ridout, of Monkton.

RUNAWAY "NIPPED IN THE BUD"

What came close to being a runaway was narrowly averted at the corner of Hunter and George Streets this morning when one of the horses of the Dominion Express Company broke its hame-strap and was just off to a mad tear down the main thoroughfare when two or three strong hands who saw the mishap to the steed's harness sprang on to and stopped the animal before it started on its mad career.

LAWN SOCIAL AT GILMOUR CHURCH

A strawberry festival at Gilmour Memorial church last night under the auspices of the Young Men's and Ladies' classes attracted a large attendance from the surrounding countryside. Peterborough, Bridgenorth, Selwyn, Omemee, and other centres were well represented and the concession lines converged for the occasion at the church lawn. The Salvation Army band rendered a fine programme of music and vocal soles by Miss Lillian Eastwood and Mr. Asa Huycke were much enjoyed. Appropriate speeches were delivered by Rev. Mr. McKee of Bridgenorth, Rev. Mr. Roberts of Indian River and Reeve McKee of Smith. A recitation by Master Jackson was cleverly done.

The supply of strawberries and cream was more than ample and every one enjoyed the refreshments.

Dinner and Supper At Temple on 12th

The Temple Band will be serving hot dinners at the Temple on Simcoe Street from 10 to 2 o'clock, and, tea from 4.30 to 7 o'clock to-morrow for the accommodation of the crowd who will be in the city. They expect to feed at least 500. Those who patronize the Army Band at their dinner and tea will have a chance to have a good "wash up" and sit down and rest themselves in the big room especially provided for the purpose. Send your friends along to meals. They will be treated right.

To the Editor Examiner:

Dear Editor,—I wonder if our "City Fathers" have dust in their eyes, that they cannot see the need of oil on Water street, north of Smith.

Now there is fifty per cent. more traffic on this part than from Smith St., south not even mentioning the Street Car Service.

I think it well to make the suggestion that those in power who cannot see into the needs of all its citizens, be sent to the front and their positions left open for ones more capable of seeing, that though the oil supply be short the Otonabee river still has its usual volume of water.

Allies Are Making Progress On Both Sides of The Somme

British Extend Their Line Northward From Hardecourt While French Press Closer to Peronne Capturing German Trenches Near Barlanx and Taking 950 Prisoners Erench Also Gain Ground in New Attack in Champagne District.

GERMAN SUB. CARRIES NO ARMS

LONDON, July 10.—Anglo-French armies pressed forward on both sides of the River Somme in severe fighting last night, despite determined German attempts to stem the great offensive.

The German War Office admitted several reverses to-day at the hands of British and French forces.

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 10.—French troops pressed closer to the railway town of Peronne, the immediate objective of their great offensive, in furious fighting south of the Somme last night, capturing a German line of trenches in the region of Barleux, southwest of Peronne.

At the same time the French broke out with an attack in the Champagne region, capturing German trenches west of Butte Le Mesnill on a five hundred yard front, after three attacks.

The French now threaten in their next thrust on the south bank of the Somme to squeeze the Germans out of all their positions west of the river in the bend of the Somme.

The Germans already have withdrawn their heavy guns to the east bank of the river.

The historic city of Peronne is now at the mercy of the French guns. French lines are now drawn so close that not only long range pieces, but small field guns are emplaced within easy range of the Peronne railway station.

From a rise of ground near Barleux, French officers can look down upon the town from across the river and watch movements of German troops.

During the first eight days of the great Allied offensive, the French have advanced on a 15 kilometre front "west ten miles" to a depth of from three to five miles, it was stated semi-officially to-day.

The War Office reported to-day minor activities at several other places on the French front. In the Argonne a French reconnaissance cleaned up a German trench.

British Extend Line Northward

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—The British force which captured the southern end of Trones Wood north of Hardecourt in Saturday afternoon's fighting has extended its position northward, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon.

For forty-eight hours heavy fighting has been going on in the woods. A German counter attack was repulsed wtih heavy enemy losses.

British troops captured several hundred more prisoners on the Somme front in this morning's fighting. On the British front farther north the Germans bombarded British positions for three hours in the region of Hooge. In this region British troops made three successful raids on German front line trenches.

BERLIN, July 10.—British troops have penetrated the Trones Woods, and the French the villages of La Maisonette, Barleux and Recogquerez, it was officially admitted to-day.

Hard hand-to-hand fighting is going on without cessation in the village of Ovillers north of the Somme.

Threatens Action Against Deutchstand

Examiner Special:

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., July 10.—Legal action, possibly the seizure of the U-boat "Deutschland," at Baltimore, is threatened by Simon Lake, the inventor of the submersible boat, if the German underwater merchantman uses devices which he has patented in the United States.

Lake, with two attorneys, was to leave here late to-day for Baltimore to inspect the vessel.

"If the boat has any of my patent devices on it—and I have every reason to believe it has—I will sue out a libel," Lake asserted.

Submarine Has No Guns on Board

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The German super-submersible Deutschland is not a warship. She is not even an armed merchantman. She has no guns or armament of any kind aboard her. This was the report made to the Treasury Department shortly before noon by custom officials who boarded the submarine at Baltimore. The State Department immediately was informed of the ship's status by Secretary McAdoo. The report while preliminary is considered definitely to establish the Deutschland's status, and her right to dock in United States' ports.

BAKING DEMONSTRATION

Most women are, and all women should be interested in any movement that has in view the betterment of humanity. It is now an established fact that the matter of purity of good products has much to do with physical conditions. The proper mixing and baking of food stuff is likewise important. The women of Peterborough are afforded an unusual opportunity during the present week and no one should fail to take advantage of the pure food demonstrations at E. F. Mason's store.

The demonstration is conducted under the personal supervision of Mrs. Clarry Hunt, the famous food expert, from Australia. On Tuesday, July 11th, Mrs. Hunt will demonstrate ribbon cake and baking powder buns. On Wednesday, chocolate cake and orange fritters. On Thursday, Almond cake and cocoanut rocks. On Friday, Layer cake and Tea Biscuits. On Saturday, Strawberry shortcake and Banana fritters.

Mrs. Hunt uses Magic Baking Powder exclusively.

57TH BAND.

The full band of the 57th Band will play at the Sacred Heart Church social on Tuesday evening, July 11. The band will hold a rehearsal to-night at the Conservatory at eight o'clock sharp and every member is asked to be on hand sharp on time.

GIANT SUBMARINE ARRIVES SAFELY IN U. S. WATERS

Undersea Boat is Claimed to be a Submarine Merchantment and Carries a Large Cargo of Dye Stuffs.

MESSAGE FROM KAISER

BALTIMORE, July 9.—The world's first submarine merchantman, the German underwater liner Deutschland, anchored below Baltimore to-night, after voyaging safely across the Atlantic, passing the allied blockading squadrons and eluding enemy cruisers watching for her off the American Coast. She carries mail and a cargo of 750 tons of costly chemicals and dyestuffs, and a message from Emperor William to President Wilson, and is to carry back home a cargo of nickel and crude rubber, sorely needed by the German army.

No torpedo tubes are visible. She is capable of submerging in less than two minutes. On the surface of the water the submarine has a speed of from two to three knots an hour more than the average merchant steamer.

Fifteen days out from Bremerhaven to Baltimore, the submarine reached safety between the Virginia Capes at 1.45 o'clock this morning.

Three hours later the big submarine started up the bay under her own power with the German merchant flag flying, convoyed by the Timmons. She was making more than 12 knots, and could have docked in Baltimore to-night, but arrangements had been made for receiving her with formal ceremonies to-morrow, and her captain was ordered to wait in the lower harbour. He and his crew of 29 men remained aboard their craft.

LOCAL CUSTOMS NOT NOTIFIED.

Regarding his vessel as a merchant man, subject to no unusual restrictions, the skipper, whose name is said to be Captain Kairig, went up the Chesapeake without waiting to notify local Customs and quarantine authorities of his presence. He was five hours away before Norman Hamilton, collector of Norfolk-Newport News, heard the news, and started on his trail aboad the coastguard cutter Onondaga. At last reports to-night the cutter had not approached the submarine, and it is understood that she merely was ordered out to keep the strange craft under surveilence as a neutrality precaution.

Little was known here to-night about what happened during the epoch-making cruise across the ocean None of the submarine's crew had landed, and the agents of her owners had received only meagre reports.

The boat is consigned to A. Schumacher and Company, local agents of the North-German Lloyd Line, and her cargo to the Eastern Forwarding Company, a concern said to have been organized within the past few

ANOTHER PETERBORO SOLDIER HAS MADE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Another Peterborough name has been added to the long list of those who have made the supreme sacrifice for the Empire. In Saturday night's official list appears the name of Lance-Corp. Robert Gifford ,who is officially reported killed in action. Lance-Corp.. Gifford enlisted here with the 21st Battalion and went overseas with that unit. Before the war he was employed with the Canadian General Electric Company, formerly residing on Lafayette avenue. His brother, Pte. Victor Gifford, enlisted here with the 2nd Battalion, First Contingent, and was wounded once, but is now back on the firing line.

Mr. Wm. Henry has received the following letter from Pte. Harold Losey, who was in the same battalion as Mr. Henry's son, Harold, recently reported killed in action:

Belgium, June 23, 1916.

Dear Mr. Henry,—As a friend of Harold's, I thought it was my duty to write you a few lines to let you know that I am very sorry that he was killed in action, and to let you know that he did not suffer any, as he was killed instantly. He was buried with a calm and peaceful look on his face as if he was asleep. Harold was a brave man, and we were very fond of each other. I always looked upon him almost as a brother, and you can believe me Mr. Henry you have my deepest sympathy in your loss. He was a great favourite among the boys of his company. In your sorrow you can always hold the thought that he died a brave soldier. I know this is a very blunt letter, but I hope you will pardon my way of speaking as I am a very poor hand at writing letters at any time.

Well as I have told you about all, I will close.

Good-bye, your friend,

Harold Losey.

I think we might well be proud of the boys that enlisted in Peterborough, for they certainly hold a pretty large percentage of the non-commissioned officers' ranks of the 59th Battalion, C.E.F. I might also say that we have two officers, who also hail from the Electric City Captain M. H. Park and Lieut. G. K. Rackham, both being well liked in the Battalion, as well as efficient officers.

The following is the list of men who enlisted in Peterborough to serve with the 59th Battalion, C.E.F., and who have since risen to the rank as set opposite their names:

Bandmaster Peryer, W. H.
Armourer Sgt. Hart, F.T.
Sergt. Brown, J. J. W.
Sergt. Chambers, G.
Sergt. Harris, W. J.
Sergt. Clayton, H.
Sergt. Charles, W. J.
Sergt. High, A.
Sergt Kelly, Hy.
Lance-Corp. Booth, C.
Corp. Dunkley, W.
Corp. Wilford, H.
Corp. Payne, E. W.
Corp. Young, W.
Corp. Lutkin, W.
Corp. MacKenzie, A.
Lance-Corp. Lashbrook, C. H.
Lance-Corp. Robinson, F. W.
Lance-Corp. Gibson, E.
Lance-Corp. Boylett, W. T.

The Kingston Whig says: —

Sergt. G. F. Toone, 93rd Battalion, will soon go overseas, where he will make a total of six brothers of the one family all in uniform and at the front. This splendid record was only made after a great deal of personal sacrifice on the part of the 93rd sergeant. He was conducting three grocery stores in Peterboro, but the call to duty made him throw up everything to get into uniform. He sold out two of his stores, and keeping only one at 639 George street, Peterboro, he enlisted under Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnston in the 93rd Battalion, joining that wonderful organization and body of men that he has brought together. His business experience enabled Sergt. Toone to be chosen for the orderly room, where he is now very busily engaged in keeping the records of the unit.

It is worthy of note that Mrs. Toone has three brothers also in uniform.

The 93rd battalion will be leaving immediately for the front, and Barriefield will lose one of the finest units of infantry that has been brought into the camp since the war broke out.

Lieut.-Col .T. J. Johnston, commanding the 93rd battalion, is to a great extent responsible for the splendid progress that has been made, and great credit for its splendid organization should be given to him. When he was authorised some six months ago to raise a battalion for overseas service from the city and county of Peterboro, he started using a long military experience as a foundation. His staff of officers was carefully chosen, and the N. C. O's had to prove

Cross The Stokhod River and the Capture of Kovel is Only a Matter of Days— Rapid Advance Has Almost Paralyzed German Forces.

PTE. ERIC STUART,
With the 93rd Battalion. Pte. Stuart's brother, Corp. Hubert Stuart, died of wounds a short time ago.

EIGHT VILLAGES TAKEN

LONDON, July 9.—The Russians offensive on the lower Stokhod River is developing with a rapidity and strength which has almost paralyzed the German armies. Before the Teuton forces can recover from the shock of one assault General Brussiloff sweeps forward again with his forces intact. Yesterday the Austro-German forces were compelled to abandon their lines along the Styr and to take up less easily defended positions on the Stokhod.

Admission of the withdrawal of the Austro-German lines along the Styr River was made in the official statement issued in Vienna to-day. The Austrian forces were ordered to retreat, according to this statement, because their advanced lines were exposed to a double flanking movement from "hostile forces which have increased from threefold to fivefold superiority."

EIGHT VILLAGES TAKEN.

No less than eight important villages along both sides of the railway from Sarny to Kovel were captured by the swiftly-moving Russian armies, and more than 2,000 prisoners were bagged.

The fall of strategic positions north and south of the railway paved the way for a cavalry rush in the centre which swept everything before it and made the Russians masters of the whole triangle comprising Kolki, Olafalowka and Manevitchie.

To-day the irresistible advance of the Russians forced them across the stream at one vital point and enveloped two more villages south of the Sarny-Kovel railway. The Teutons to-night are in disorderly flight along the whole front in this centre, and the Russians are moving forward from a point only 24 miles from Kovel.

THREATENED FROM TWO SIDES

The crossing by the Russians of the Stokhod River near Ugli and Janovka, which are reported in flames, seriously threatens the Austro-German forces from two sides. Ugli is about half-way between the two railways running into Kovel from Rovno and Sarny. The Teutonic salient going its way into the front at the centre exposes both groups to a flank attack, and opens the way for the capture by the Muscovite armies of the life-lines of the enemy.

Two day's fighting between the Styr and the Stokhod has resulted in the capture of 12,000 unwounded men.

To-night's Russian communique reports the enemy forces in this region retiring in great disorder, and adds that the Russians have occupied Hulevichi, which is about 24 miles to the east of Kovel, while apparently the Russians are already across the Stokhod River somewhere in the region of Janovka.

German possession of Berestechko and Kovel are absolutely essential if she is to retain her hold over the invaded parts of Poland and Lithuania, but it is considered likely that it is only a matter of a few days before the Russians will be in possession of Kovel, which would compel von Lansingen's retirement from the Lutsk salient.

German official and unofficial despatches reflect anxiety over the Russian advances as being greater than over the Anglo-French offensive, which the German military critics contend will not interfere with the operations against Verdun. Major Moraht and other German writers express surprise at the extent and persistence of the Russian offensive and the endless resources of ammunition.

BIG REVIEW AT CAMP BORDEN WILL BE SPECTACULAR

REHEARSAL TO-DAY

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 10. — All roads lead to the ceremonial grounds at Camp Borden to-day. The 32,000 officers and men lined up on the parade grounds for the first full dress rehearsal at 9.15 a.m. and this afternoon at 2 o'clock another practice was held. To-day is a brilliant day at Camp Borden. The temperature at 9 o'clock was 82 in the shade, and the mercury is still rising. Judging by to-day's rehearsal, to-morrow's military spectacle will be a brilliant one from every standpoint. There will be present Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia; Brigadier-General W. A. Logie, six colonels, 10 brigade commanders, forty lieutenant-colonels, 80 majors, 150 captains, over six hundred lieutenants, 35 bands, and 31,000 N.C.O.'s and men. Last night and this morning postal corps handled 75,000 letters and cards mailed yesterday by soldiers to their relatives and friends.

Are Wounded And Prisoners

Three More Peterboro Boys Turn Up in German Hands

News that three more Peterborough boys who have been officially reported missing are prisoners in Germany, reached their relatives to-day. All three, Ptes. Geo. R. Butcher, A. E. Bartley and Ernest Crofts, are members of the Mounted Rifles and all three are wounded as well as prisoners. The news was particularly gratifying to the parents of Pte. Butcher as his name had appeared in the official list as killed.

REPORT WAS INCORRECT

Pte. Max Breckenridge Not Killed in Action.

The report that Pte. Max Breckenridge, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion, had been killed in action, was an error, as word has been received from Pte. Breckenridge himself in a letter written June 19th that he was in good health and had just come out of the trenches. This news will cause joy in many circles here and in the district.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

The enterprise of promoting and protecting the public health, as represented by efficient sanitation, seems to have languished with the oncome of hot weather, and to be in a state of suspended animation. There are so many things outside of specific undertakings that affect sanitation and the public health that their discovery should result from a larger official study of the many civic conditions and problems that are associated with civic sanitation and the public health. A correspondent refers to the building by-law in a way that shows how many sides of effect there are upon sanitation. The man who cleans our streets, and lanes, the sewer contractor, the builder, the plumber, the man who keeps down the microbe-laden street dust with doses of oil—all these and others not mentioned have their share of responsibility for contributing to the conditions that underlie efficient civic sanitation—a dominating element in presereving and promoting the public health.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS.

Peterborough's experience with supervised playgrounds brief and limited as it has been, is no exception to the successful experience met wherever such grounds have been established and conducted. As will be seen by an excellent contributed article on another page, the fact is evident that supervised playgrounds have come to stay. They meet a decidedly important need in a decidedly important way. However, the general public and many to whom the matter more directly appeals, have not the knowledge of, and cannot be expected to take the most intelligent and helpful interest in the work. Those who want to know and should know what part supervised playgrounds play in the scheme of social and civic life in the summer should, by personal visit and observation, make themselves better acquainted with their working and results. They will then be prepared to give them their moral and material support with better heart and better results. Nothing but praise is due the public spirited and self-sacrificing ladies, who are spending the days of the heated term, when nearly all the world is seeking rest and recreation, in the strenuous work of play—providing facilities for play for those whose only playground, otherwise, would be the dusty and dangerous streets — dangerous both physically and morally.

SWIMMING.

It appears that the play-grounds enterprise is going forward swimmingly — adequate provision for every kind of play a boy needs is provided, except swimming. True, there is an arrangement for swimming at the Y. M. C. A., in connection with the play grounds, but that does not at all fill the bill. The average boy, especially the boy too big for playgrounds, longs for the open waters; the noble river flowing through the city is an almost irresistible temptation.

It is unfortunate that there is no provision made for setting apart and devoting to bathing certain parts of the river from north to south—providing for some regulation with safety appliances provided and some sort of supervision. Now, the boy is confronted on these broiling hot days with the German principle of prohibition, which plasters the German Empire with the word "verboten"—forbidden; now, if boys seek to enjoy an open swim in the river at any conveniently accessible point within the corporation limits he has a vigilant policeman "shooing" him off with a club. It would be wise to have some bathing and swimming facilities provided at proper points on the river front for boys and girls who are too large to be satisfied with the cut-and-dried facilities represented by supervised play grounds, which, admirable as they are, cannot meet the demands for adult or semi-adult recreation, acquatic or otherwise. A swimming tank at the Y. M. C. A. is all right in the winter, when no other is available, but it doesn't fill the bill in summer, when the wide-open river invites to the big, free splash and the tasty swim.

The authorities might arrange to put bigger boys and girls "in the swim" for better reasons than recreation and refreshment. The learning of the art of swimming should be encouraged. Summer is the best time to learn it, and summer is the time when our waters are more abundantly frequented, and the incidental dangers of accident — which knowledge of swimming can nullify—are consequently increased.

GOOD BEGINNING OF THE WEEK.

The despatches this morning begin the week with cheerful and important news of allied progress on the western front, and no relaxation of the Russian thrust. The Italians are more than holding their own. At Saloniki the allied forces are ready to strike with victorious effect. That they are not already fighting is explained by the fact that the great war council of the allies has not yet fixed the favourable hour. The war is going the right direction, with the allies closing in all round and narrowing the ring of steel and fire that is enclosing the Teutons, with an irresistible push behind— abundance of reserves, mountains of munitions, and forests, not mere parks, of big guns. So far the allied forces have been chiefly sowing the seed—preparing for real work, and everything indicates that the harvest is ripe for reaping and that the reaping has begun. Russia, with its quarter of a million of Austrian and German prisoners has its barns bursting. The losses in the last Russian drive and the slaughter around Verdun, where for months the Germans have been knocking their heads against the wall, amount to more than half a million men—more troops, perhaps, than were ever engaged on both sides or all sides, in any past war, except that of 1870-1. This colossal loss would not be so bad, if it had been the price of victory, but when it is the price of defeat; of loss of position; of loss of guns and munitions; of loss of prestige and loss of prospect of success, it represents a staggering blow to the German cause. To rightly appreciate the relative position of the two great contending forces, it is only necessary to imagine the conditions reversed—Britain and the allies in the same desperate condition as the Germans and Austrians, and the latter occupying the dominant driving force and fact of the Entente allies. Then we should have real cause for despair. But the sun of the allies is on their side of the hedge; the prospects of triumph are bright, even roseate. If we keep up the drive, maintain the push as we are both prepared and determined to do, the ultimate victory is coming every day nearer. But while we can hope we must be prepared to face a stern fight yet. The German powers are strong, their forty years of preparation for war is not yet exhausted, and their dying struggle may be violent and comparatively prolonged. Hunters of big game say that their quarry is most dangerous when brought to bay — figuratively fighting in the last ditch, as we have reason to feel our enemies are doing.

Bullet Faster Than Its Sound

There are a lot of interesting facts surrounding the subject of the flight of rifle bullets. For instance, high power rifle bullets travel much faster than does sound, and consequently in modern warfare if a man is shot and killed by a bullet from a rifle a couple of hundred yards away, as the Irishman says, "He don't hear the shot until after he is dead."

It is also true that it is impossible to make a high power rifle silent. You can put a silencer on it and some noise is cut down—in fact, all the noise caused by the explosion of the gases as they leave the mumle of the rifle, but there is still left a whip-like cracking noise caused by the flight of the bullet. It is a whip-like cracking because mechanically it is produced in the same way. As the bullet travels along at high speed, it goes so fast the air does not have time to fly in behind it and there is a space back of the bullet of about one inch or two inches in which a high vacuum obtains and the noise is caused by the sudden collapse of this vacuum; in other words by the air rushing in and closing up.

This noise is irregular and is not a steady noise because of variations in the density of the air through which the bullet travels, and also because of the many echoes which are produced.

The fastest railroad train goes from New York to San Francisco in about four and one-half days. If our government Springfield rifle were fired in the right direction and the wind resistance did not slow the bullet down or gravity pull it down to the earth, it would take one hour and twenty minutes to get from New York to San Francisco, which makes the railroad train look like a piker.

Reasons Why Nobody Loves A German

The poor unfortunate Hun is fretting and whining because nobody loves him; and it seems to be a mystery to him why this should be. The late Field Marshal Von der Goltz wrote an article in the Deutsche Revue, in which he said: "Germany to-day is wrestling with almost the entire world." It is quite true that nobody loves a German, and also that "Germany to-day is wrestling with almost the entire world." But the coincidence does not seem to afford to the unhappy German any explanation of the mystery of his own unpopularity. He says to himself, and incidentally to the world: "I am amiable, kultured, beautiful. I have fascinating manners. Like the much-advertised dog, 'I will eat anything, and am specially fond of women and children.' If I hustle women off the sidewalk it is so as to give them more room in the gutter. If I kill Belgian or English children it is to save them from a world of temptation, especially the temptation not to be German. If they have been good they will be German in the next world, and if they have been bad it doesn't matter what they are. Yet with all these charms nobody loves me." It never occurs to the modest Teuton that the mere fact of almost the whole world being against him shows that there is another side to the question of German superiority.

A much easier problem for him to solve to his own infinite satisfaction is the explanation of Germany's pre-eminent greatness and strength. Von der Goltz had the audacity to say: "Next to personalities it is moral ideas which make a nation great and strong." Here he wrote truer than he knew; as he would have known had he lived until to-day. The want of moral principle has been the ruin of Germany. Nevertheless, he asks: "And what idea holds as commanding a place in Prussian and modern German history in general as the idea of duty? The first Hohenzollern termed himself 'God's vice-regent on the throne,' and that conception is peculiar to all the Hohenzollerns." It isn't; it is common to all the vulgar and brutal tyrants who wear crowns. They all reign by divine right. It is an atrocious blasphemy to associate the foul murders of Belgium, France, the East Coast of England and the Irish Sea with any vice-regent of God.

Already we have seen success of German arms quoted as a demonstration of the correctness of the principle of Germanism, and as a proof of the divine right of the Hohenzollerns to rule the world. That militarism is still part, and the chief part, of the religion of Germany is shown by this bumptious article of the late Field Marshal's. He says: "A dreamy recluse may be forgiven for raving about 'eternal peace.' One who lives in the world of reality knows that wars are and always will be indispensable in the life of a nation. It is a virtue, therefore, for a people to feel pleasure in martial deeds and a soldier's life." This after all the horrors of the last two years! If Von der Goltz had wanted to inspire the Allies with a stern determination to kill and bury German militarism, even if they have to kill and bury every German to bring that about, he could not have written a stronger argument.—Montreal Herald.

A COLONIAL IN LONDON

As the devout Arab goes to Mecca, so does the Colonial come to London. They come to pay homage to a city and to its ghosts of the past. Far away in the distant parts of the globe they dream of London, and their dreams are strange ones. Their picture is a mixture of Dickens and Pepys, of the "Spectator" and the "Tattler." Added to this is the stalwart figure of the London policeman, and in the background a Phil May coster girl's ostrich feathers wave coquettishly.

I have seen London twice, and I have spent months attempting to sort out and pigeon hole impressions that crowd each other so close that they are little better than the far-away conception gleaned from Pepys and Dickens. The first time I saw London was on a bright June day, gay with flowers, flags and bunting for the coronation of King George, quite different from the foggy, rainy city I had heard about. This time I came on a dull day, with the spires and domes showing up uncertainly through the soft rain—the London I had heard so much about, and not unpleasant either.

I passed through Whitehall and Westminster, and I looked out at the greater sooted, grimy Palace, and the great Abbey, feeling that none of it was new to me. Later I visited these places again, and my first thoughts were confirmed. I felt I had always known London. The people here in England do not know all the world of meaning in the word heredity. It seems to them almost inconceivable that a person can come from an oversea Dominion to this great city and automatically into the places his forefathers filled. But it is so.

I had thought to see St. Paul's great pile gleaming in the sun in all the splendour of white stonework and masonry. Instead, I saw it closed round on all sides by buildings, and it was befouled and sooted and grimed from smoke and fogs. Then I knew that therein lay its beauty. Wren had no hand in all this. In those great stone columns and massive cornices the dirt and smoke of centuries have worked a miracle of light and shade. Reliefs are made to stand out amazingly, the great flat walls are softened and marbled in greys and blacks. In places in striking contrast, the rain has washed the stones and kept them white.

The most impressive thing to the Colonial, whose country is in the making and practically new is the ancient history which ensbrouds London—to touch an altar rail that was set in the stone floor six centuries ago; to kneel at a shrine where the Templars prayed; to walk on a terrace where Raleigh smoked tobacco from his own Virginia. The Far East loses much of this fascination, for its history is so ancient that you cannot re-people it to suit yourself.

It is not the great Abbey that you marvel at, but the part it has taken in the lives of the English people. Think of the raw stone for the arch under the chisel of the carver, and the spire still masked in scaffolding to which figures in mediaeval costume carry these carven blocks to set them in their places. Think of Westminster with its tonsured monks and its cowled novices. Think of that high window in Whitehall on that day when a king stepped from it to the scaffold above the silent, awed crowd. Always it is the same. In Holyrood, in Edinburgh, a little wainscotted room would have no meaning to one who did not know the story of Rizzio. When that is told the past returns. It is the same in London.

What matters if you watch the two-pences ticking up on a taxi clock as you go to the Tower? When you enter St. John's Chapel there, all the present is blotted out by the mist of years, and you see in the half light the kneeling figure of the conqueror in mail, and white surtout, praying for this realm, and the accents of others in the chapel seem to be the voices of the Norman priests droning their credos and their paters. One almost smells the incense from the swinging censors.

The sound of mellow bells steals through the narrow windows, and outside you hear the footsteps of armed men, the stamp of caparisoned war-horses as the conqueror's knights gather to offer thanks for past victory or pray for the success of fresh ventures. What does it matter that the benches are unoccupied and the altar bare of vessels of silver and gold? In the still hours of the night all these ghosts return, and there is the slow chant of voices, the splash of holy water as the stone stoop is filled, the rustle of the vellum leaves of the ponderous missals and the tinkle of coins into the alms boxes.

This is London, a city of ghosts, that will stay for all time.

What Goes in the Missionary Box.—

"Whatever are you doing, Molly?" asked mother, as she entered the nursery. For her five-year old daughter was busily stuffing broken toys, headless dolls, ragged clothes, and other odds and ends in an old leather bag. "Oh, mother, can't you see?" cried Molly. "I'm packing a missionary box, just like the ladies do. And it's all right," she added proudly, "I haven't put in a single thing that's any good."

Shag Shaughnessy Up Against a Millionaire Combination

Salary Lid is Removed in Inter-State and Ottawa Boy Has a Battle to Keep Up Near Top—Season is Run Off on Two Schedules.

The first half of the Inter-State Baseball League will be completed on July 12th. There is a bare chance of Shag Shaughnessy's Warren aggregation beating Ridgeway to the wire, but it is somewhat remote as Ridgeway is four full games in front to date. The second half will be inaugurated on 13th July, and the winners of each end of the schedule will collide in a "little world's series" at the close of the season in September for the league pennant. This system has been adopted by the Central, Virginia, and several other minor leagues.

At Warren, Shaughnessy is up against a pretty strong combination, and that he is up so high in the race is a remarkable tribute to his managerial prowess and good ball playing. The Ridgeway and St. Mary's clubs, which are first and third respectively, are run by millionaire sportsmen and have brought in the best minor league talent obtainable to produce winners. On account of the bad weather encountered last month, the league lifted the player and salary limit and as a result Ridgeway is carrying 20 men and St. Mary's 18 at the present time. Warren, Erie, Bradford and the other towns cannot afford the pace and must be content to trail the high salaried clubs. Throughout the circuit the newspaper critics pay great tribute to Shaughnessy for having a cheap club up in second place. An Olean, N.Y., organ says the ex-Ottawa boy is a regular" big league pilot," and out of his place in the minors.

Bobby Roberts is pitching great ball for Warren and in his last four games has allowed only 15 hits. Dunlop, whom London sent to Cleveland a couple of years ago, is playing a wonderful game at short. Shag changed his style of hitting and he is now clouting over .300. Shaughnessy himself is having a good year with the stick, and up to last Tuesday was stinging the pill at a .325 lick. Dolan is hitting about the same.

Dick Cotter, the former Philadelphia and Chicago National catcher, is doing the backstopping for Warren. Both Smykal and Powers are playing a good fielding game and hitting fair. Warren is drawing better crowds than any town in the league. At Ridgeway and St. Mary's the owners don't give a whoop for the crowds. Their one big object is to win. Some of their men are drawing down as high as $325 a month.

Fred Herbert has rounded to form, and has been pitching gilt-edged ball for Toronto of late. Failure to hit behind him has cost him several well-twirled contests.

Latest statistics show Earle Neale is hitting for .282 with the Cincinnati Reds in 56 games. The ex-London boy is sure delivering.

WITNESSES TELL HOW GUNNER ELLIOT MET HIS DEATH

Interesting Evidence Offered at the Investigation Into the Shooting of Peterboro Boy by a Sentry at Drydock Barracks on Thursday Night Last—Dying Declaration of Gunner Elliott Produced

The evidence offered at the investigation into the shooting of Gunner Russell Elliott at Kingston on Thursday night, was of a very interesting nature. As announced Saturday, the Coroner's jury exonerated Sentry West, who fired the fatal shot.

Gunner Ernest Powell of the 74th Battery, was the first witness, called. He said that on Thursday night, in company with the deceased, Gunner Elliott, and Gunner Howden, he had paid a visit to Lake Ontario Park. They returned to the city about 11 o'clock, and after having a lunch at a Chinese restaurant, proceeded on their way to the barracks.

"I was in the lead as we approached the guard," said the witness. "The guard said to me, 'Who goes there?' I said, 'Friend.' Then the guard said, 'Advance friend, and be identified.' I advanced and he (West) recognized me. After I had passed inside I heard West open the bolt of his gun. I waited for Gunner Howden, and when he came up we went on. I did not know what was going to happen. I heard a gun go off, I turned around, and I saw Elliott fall. He was in front of the gate, and had his hand to his side. I heard him say, 'Oh, oh!'"

The Coroner asked the witness if he had heard any disturbances. He replied that he had not. Witness heard the sentry ask Elliott to advance and give the password. The electric light was burning at the street entrance to the barracks. It was 11.45 o'clock when the shooting took place.

To Mr. Rigney witness said that he was the first man to enter into the barracks. Howden followed him, and he heard him challenged. Elliott came third, and he also heard him challenged.

Thought Guard Was Teasing.

Gunner Ivan E. Howden followed with his story, and he corroborated the evidence given by the previous witness regarding the movements of Elliott the night before.

"I heard the guard open the bolt of his gun, but walked on," added the witness.

"What did you think when you heard the guard open the bolt of his gun?" asked the coroner.

"I just thought that he was teasing him.'

"Did you expect that there would be any firing?"

"No, I did not."

"I heard the shot fired. I was about five feet away from the barracks at the time I saw Elliott fall. I did not hear him say anything. I did not feel like going back to him, I guess I did not have the courage."

The coroner asked witness if he or Elliott or Powell had been drinking

"No, sir," said the witness.

"Had you any liquor to drink?"

"No, we did not have any."

"Did you hear Elliott say that he was going to raise a row with the guard?"

"No, I did not."

"Did you hear Elliott make any remarks about the guard—that he was going to fool him?"

"No I did not."

"Was Elliott in the habit of raising a row with the guards?"

"No, sir, he was not."

Witness also told the coroner that Elliott was a quiet man, and that he had his pass in his hand when he was about to go into barracks."

Gunner Powell was recalled, and he also swore that he and his two companions had not been drinking.

Witness was asked by the coroner regarding the instructions given to guards. Did they understand that they had the power to shoot, or were the guards merely regarded as figureheads. Witness said that the guards were given to understand they had the power to shoot. It was the duty of every man to advance and produce his pass when challenged by the guard.

Bullet Split in Two Places.

Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardiner was called. He made a post-mortem examination on the body of Gunner Elliott, and presented a written report to the coroner. The direct cause of death had been due to hemorrhage and shock.

A strange fact was revealed in his evidence, when it was shown that the bullet fired at Elliott had been split in two pieces before entering the body. One piece entered his forearm and the other pierced his left side. The two pieces of bullet were produced and viewed by the jurymen.

Col. Gardiner said that the bullet might have been split into three pieces, as there was two openings in the man's stomach.

"I want to say that Gunner Elliott was absolutely sober," added the witness. "There were no signs of liquor whatever in the body.

Ordered to Shoot at Ground.

Gunner E. H Chesney said he was sergeant of the guard on Thursday night. He was in the guard house when he heard a shot fired. He immediately turned out the guard on hearing the shot fired. He saw Gunner Elliott lying on the ground. There was quite a bright light from the street lamp at the time. Elliott was lying about eight or ten feet from where the sentry was standing. Elliott did not say anything to him.

Witness was questioned closely by the Coroner as to what he did, but he frankly admitted that he did not make any investigation as to the cause of the shooting.

"Did the shooting strike you as very ordinary.

"I thought it very unusual."

Witness added that when he got to Elliott he found that other soldiers had been caring for him. Asked as to the instructions given guards, witness said that they were ordered to shoot at the ground when a man failed to obey orders and produce their pass.

Capt. Arthur J. Latornell said that he had been acting commander of the batteries at the Cereal Company's building. He was not present at the time of the shooting. He was questioned regarding the instructions given to guards. He said that they were all instructed to shoot at the ground in such a case as this.

Gave Important Evidence.

Capt. McManus, an infantry instructor, gave very important evidence.

"As an instructor, you would be well posted on the duties of a sentry," said the Coroner. "What are the duties of a sentry?"

"The duties of a sentry as I understand them are very strict," said the witness, who added that a sentry on giving a challenge three times, and feeling that the party was not a bona fide party, he should take no chances. It must be remembered that the country was at war.

"As far as I know, if he is not satisfied, he has the power to fire."

"If he has time to summon the guard should he fire first and then summon the guard?"

"No, I would not say that. It all depends on what orders he has been given. I do not think the average sentry would shoot to kill. As a soldier I think this man was carrying out orders."

"Are the duties of a sentry more strict in war time than in times of peace?"

"Yes, sir, they are."

Produced Dying Declaration.

Col. Gardiner was at this stage recalled, and presented to the Coroner the dying declaration of Gunner Elliott as already given.

The Coroner pointed out that the evidence of a dying man could be taken as sworn evidence.

Col. Gardiner said that he had taken the statement from Gunner Elliott when he was in a very low condition. The patient rallied a little later, and then the witness read the statement over to him, and as a justice of the peace he had administered the oath.

RIFLE WAS PRODUCED

Gunner Elliott's rifle was produced and officers questioned by the Coroner stated that each sentry was given five rounds of ammunition. The rifle was not loaded, the ammunition being kept in the sentry's bandolier.

Capt. McManus was recalled, and was questioned about the splitting in two of the bullet. He said that the bullet might have been split in three pieces. As an expert, he would say that the bullet struck something before it entered Elliott's body. It might have struck the ground.

Col. Gardiner said that a piece of the bullet struck Elliott's arm, but the member was not fractured.

The fact that the bullet must have struck the ground first established the fact that Gunner West did not point his rifle directly at Gunner Elliott.

Lieut. Russell Williams, of the 73rd Battery, was called to give evidence regarding the inspection he made of the sentries.

ANOTHER SENTRY'S EVIDENCE

Gunner Francis Wilman, of the 75th Battery, who went on duty on what is known as beat No. 2 at 11.30 o'clock the night of the shooting gave evidence.

"I was at the far end of my beat," he said. "I heard West shout, 'Who goes there' I heard the answer, 'friend', and heard the sentry say, 'Advance and be recognized.' I saw a man holding a pass in his left hand. I could not hear the exact words that passed between this man and the sentry, but I do know that the sentry told the man to come up with his pass. The man replied, stating that if he wanted the pass to come down for it. I watched for about half a minute, and I heard the sentry ask the man if he was coming with his pass. The man replied, stating that he did not have to come down with it, or words to that effect. Then I heard the sentry shout, 'Are you coming with that pass?' The man said 'No'. Then the sentry said 'You won't: won't you?' Then I saw the sentry bring his rifle up pretty near to his shoulder and fire. The sentry was about seven yards from the man when he fired."

TWO BROTHERS IN KHAKI.

The two brothers of Gunner Elliott were not in attendance at the inquest, but while the members of the jury were considering their verdict they waited anxiously outside. They are Lance-Corporal Lewis H. Elliott, and Pte. E. Gordon Ross Elliott, of the 93rd Battalion, now encamped at Barriefield Camp preparing to leave for overseas shortly. They corroborated the evidence of Gunner Powell, who said he thought the deceased had had ten months' training previous to coming to Kingston. The elder brother stated that his late brother had been at Camp Sewell, and had undergone military training there. They stated that their brother had only enlisted three weeks ago, and was preparing to take the rank of Saddler-sergeant as soon as the horses arrived at the barracks and that he was twenty-six years of age.

Coroner Mundell, before giving the case over to the jury, charged very strongly against Gunner West, stating that from the evidence it was to his mind a clear case of manslaughter. He held that Gunner West was not justified in shooting as he did. In discharging West, he stated that the jury had found that he was not responsible, but stated that he hoped that the case would be a warning in the future to guards that although armed with rifles, they should not use them in this way.

Gunner Elliott's dying declaration was as follows:

"I, Russell Elliott, certify that the following is a true statement of the shooting accident: The guard was up to the end of the line about 25 or 30 feet away and I was opposite the gate when challenged. I showed him my pass. He told me to come to where he was. I told him to come to me. I won't go, and he shot me. Guard was not pacing his beat but was standing at the far end when he challenged. He said he would learn me not to fool with the guard, that it served me right. After being halted, held up pass and told him to come and get it. Believing this to be a conscientious statement and knowing that I am going to die."

The statement was taken by Lt.-Col. Gardiner as a Justice of the Peace, and witnessed by Dr. Bogart.

"Do you ever worry, old man?"

"Never."

"How do you work it?"

"In the daytime I am too busy and at night I am too sleepy."

La Tena's Animal Shows Make a Hit

La Tena's big wild animal show which arrived in this city at 4.30 o'clock this mornin ggives its first performance at the Fair Grounds this afternoon at 2 o'clock and proved a big success in the line of show entertainments. The show is bright and clean and overflowing with genuine arts of worth-while quality and was pleasing to young and old alike, with its excellent programme of novel numbers, more than one of which would have done credit to a much more pretentious show. Everything about the show was clean and well regulated, the costuming and staging of the various acts was beyond reproach and the entire outfit proved one of quality and considerable merit.

Both in the quality of the programme and in the show, La Tena's shows proved a genuine credit to the show business as a whole.

From the opening parade to the final number there was not a dull moment for somewhere, either in the ring, on the stage or within the big steel animal arena, an act worthy of notice was in progress. A feature that proved well worth the price of admission alone was provided by Picard's seals, an aggregation of trained animals that would be hard to equal anywhere. They play ball, play in a band and one old fellow actually succeeds in walking a tight rope unaided. In vaudeville, Picard's seals would be termed a big time act; as an attraction the number has few equals.

Other animal acts worthy of more than passing notice were Archie Dunlap and his performing elephants, Johanning's bears and last, but by not means least, Florine's lions. The programme also included a very clever troupe of wire walkers who did many novel tricks and a gifted family of contortionists besides a number of aerial performers of merit. Trained dogs, a small army of clowns and a host of other attractions added the necessary variety and all in all it was a very fine entertainment.

Congress of Clowns.

There is a congress of merry old clowns and many laugh provoking stunts have been prepared to excite the risibilities of the most sedate.

JAPAN'S FIRST GLASS.

That observation car would have done credit to any railroad in the world. A Japanese fellow-passenger, an official in the Japanese Ministry of Communication, was amused at our expressions of delight.

"Of course this is all very recent," he explained. "Five years ago we had nothing like this. Forty-five years ago there was not a single car nor a single mile of track in the whole of Japan. "Why," he laughed, "I can remember the first jerky little trains that were run on the first line to be opened—the one between Tokio and Yokohama. Glass was a new thing to the Japanese, and there were a great many windows broken and heads bumped those first few weeks. Passengers persisted in trying to put out their heads without first raising the windows. Finally the glass smashing became so expensive, and there were so many complaints over bruised and cut heads, that the company was forced to paint a white bar on every window to teach passengers the nature of glass."

Which story we could appreciate, for we had already noticed in the corner of a railroad yard a little old car with white bars painted across the windows. Some of these cars, our companions told us, are still used as third-class conveyances on newly opened branch lines—the people do not quite understand glass. — Christian Herald.

A Special Gossard Corset for Tennis

TENNIS is no longer a young girl's game. Women of every age and figure play this lively and fascinating game. Some of the best tennis players enjoy the game more and are able to play longer, because they wear this newest Special Gossard.

It conforms to the rules of the game, and will go through the most trying set without making you conscious of it being there with you, to keep you cool and your body supported.

The elastics are full of live rubber---the material, an open mesh, is flexible; so are the bones.

The bust line is not high, and no amount of exercise will cause the Corset to slip-up on your body---a most uncomfortable sensation.

Tennis is popular this season, and the women who wear this Corset will enjoy every set played. It is ideal for this sport. Your size will be sent you or you may be fitted by our expert Corsetiere to the model which suits you best.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE POPULAR WITH CHILDREN

Are the play grounds popular with the children? Well, on the hottest day last week there were over two hundred children playing games, using the swings and just being happy and contented generally at the King Edward play grounds from nine oclock in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon. And some of them didn't want to stop to go home for dinner. The same report may also be made of the Central play grounds, although because of the less crowded neighbourhood the attendance there was about 150 a day.

And not only the older children like the play grounds, but as many as eight mothers with their babies have been present at one time—the wee tots to play in the sand while the mothers became acquainted with the supervisors and watched the other children at their play.

At the Central school Miss Littlefield has already begun her folk dancing classes, which are proving most popular with the girls.

The swimming classes for the boys are already under way, Mr. Gilbert having a class of twenty-five boys at the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool on Mondays and Thursdays at 11 o'clock, and Mr. Tillotson having his classes on Tuesdays and Fridays at the same hour.

With such a successful beginning there is no doubt that the play grounds in Peterborough have come to stay. Surely the ladies of the committee who went out in the face of opposition even from their own ranks, to sell carnations and to collect rags, and the men of the Association who are now trying to increase the Association membership, have their reward in the knowledge that many little children are going to have a safer and happier summer in the Peterborough play grounds.

No Danger Done in Aeroplane Raids

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—No one was injured and no damage done excepting that windows were smashed in two raids on the coast of England by German aeroplanes yesterday, the War Office announced to-day. The first raider yesterday morning was chased away before he could drop bombs. The second German plane that appeared off the coast before midnight, dropped seven explosive bombs and escaped.

Asquith Introduces Home Rule Parliament

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—Premier Asquith this afternoon formally proposed in the Commons the plan for an Irish Home Rule Parliament framed by David Lloyd George, stating that it had met with the approval of Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond, leaders of opposing Irish factions.

German Sub. Captain Boasts of His Trip

Examiner Special:

BALTIMORE, Maryland, July 10.—In a formal statement at noon today Captain Paul Koonig, commander of the giant submarine Deutschland, declared the vessel which arrived in Baltimore to-day will be followed soon by several others. The first of them, he said, would be the "Bremen." He said he had no trouble eluding British warships.

Supplementing a written statement the captain this afternoon told how his vessel had lain at the bottom of the English Channel one whole night, how he and his crew played the gramophone beneath te waves, and how they had lived on champagne and the best of foods, how they had openly sailed 3,800 miles, submerging only a few times for a few hours, and doing only ninety miles under the surface during the entire trip.

Great Britain to Make Quick Move

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng. (Special Cable), July 10.—Although granting great admiration for skill, German promoters and sailors who succeeded in submarining from Germany to Baltimore, the British people believe its chief value is its advertisement of German enterprise.

"The power that smashed Germany's submarine warfare, and placed one hundred fighting submarines hors de combat, can be relied on to speedily cripple submarine merchantmen activtiies," said one high naval authority to-day. "While these vessels may be able to make one trip, possibly two or three, they cannot long elude the vigilance and resourcefulness of the British navy."

In the lobbies of the Commons this afternoon members of the Government said this new move of Germany would be met in a swift and effective manner.

It is recalled that British submarines have frequently made trans-Atlantic trips under own power.

Dr. D. S. Abbott, Pure Food and Drug Commissioner for Texas, condemns the use of egg albumen in Baking Powder.

Interstate Grocer, St. Louis, Jan. 24, 1914.

"Albumen is not a necessary constituent of baking powder," states Dr. Abbott in discussing his decision. "Its use in baking powder is to produce a foam when water is added, for the purpose of deceiving the consumer with respect to its quality. In this respect albumen serves a fraudulent purpose."

According to the Department's statement, albumen in powder forms a slight membrane over the mixture made when water is added to the powder, and, as the gas is generated from the powder, it is held beneath the membrane, thereby causing the mixture to rise readily, whereas there may be less gas really generated from the powder than is generated in other brands of powder where the egg albumen is not used. Because of the very small quantity that is used, it serves as no healthy ingredient, and hence the department has forbidden its use.

More Trouble Ahead For Elmer Hicks

PORT HOPE, July 10.—Difficulties are increasing for Elmer Hicks, who deserted from a Barriefield battalion and accompanied by a young Kingston girl, went into the United States, where they were arrested and later confined in Canton jail.

The American police have found that Hicks is suspected of abandoning a young girl in Depeyster, N.Y., some time ago. It appears that they had been living together as man and wife, and that the woman has a young child. Both mother and child are now being cared for by the Town Council of Depeyster. A warrant charging Hicks with the earlier offence was sworn out after news was received at Depeyster of his arrest by the immigration officials and will be served after the federal investigation is concluded. In the meantime both Hicks and Miss Hawkins will remain locked up in Canton jail.

Baby Enters World Under Sad Auspicices

KINGSTON, July 10.—A four months old baby, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead, are serving terms in the Portsmouth Penitentiary was removed from the institution to a local institution and will be taken care of until such times as the parents have been liberated. The case is a pitiful one. The father and mother were sent to the penitentiary last February to serve long sentences for cruelty to one of their children and while in the institution the mother gave birth to another child.

Miss Alice Hardwicke has received the following letter from her brother, Pte. J. F. Hardwicke, 27th Canadian Battalion, and now in hospital in England.

Dear Sister,—A few lines to let you know that I am improving and able to be around on my feet a little, although I have got greatly weakened by having been in bed for over two weeks. I have had no word from Charlie and won't have now for three weeks, as the mail is all stopped for that time, commencing to-day, so it looks good to us. Our armies have been preparing so long for the offensive and the time must be close at hand. Too long have we played with Mr. Fritz; his punishment is past due, and the sins he has to account for are many ("legion"). We as Canadian have suffered very heavily at his hands. Our fairest and best of our young manhood have given their life's blood on those crimson fields of Belgium, many a mother's, many a widow's, many a sweetheart's, and thousands of fatherless one's hearts are sore to-day in our fair Canadian homes, looking for the one who hagone never to return. All these things has Mr. Boch got to account for, and he knows no braver men, heroes they all are, who fought him back time after time in the memorable two weeks of this month. We made him pay a dear price for his attack, but we lost some of our best in doing so. Canada should be proud of her boys. They upheld the honour of their native land. Experienced officers say, "They never saw troops advance to attack as coolly under a terrific rain of shells' as did our Canadian boys at Ypres. Well, the British Tommies are always glad to work with us and the Jocks and us have always been fast friends, as we have been in a few mixups together, always coming out on top.

You will have read the account of what happened in that eventful two weeks in the Ypes salient. I have seen no account myself, but I have seen days in the midst of it before they got me, and it was simply hell, with all Satan's and Kaiser Bill's (they have formed a joint stock company with the Bulgar and Josef, with the Sultan for the goat) cunning devilish devices mixed up, "sausages, whizzbangs, rum ajrs, coal boxes." We actually thought sometimes he was throwing locomotives at us. We got all the French did not get at Verdun, put we stuck; what we lost we took back with heavy interest. They have to hand it to the boys, and I am proud to have been with them, and it's no idle boast.

But then the other side is the tragedy. So many of the pals you knew, the boys who chummed with you, who fell at your side, not a murmur or complaint. Their memories will not be forgotten. May their souls rest in peace, as their bones will never have peace in Belgium clay until this mighty struggle is over and victory is perched on the united flags of the allies.

I have a few lines which suggested themselves to me as I think of the many wooden crosses with R.I.P. on them, looking so solitary in all the turmoil of battle:

"Somewhere in France" there is a nameless grave,
Where sleeps some mother's son amid the brave.
A cross with letters twain doth mark
the place,
And they the hand of Time shall soon
efface.
No storied urn, nor animated bust
Shall hold this humble, friendless soldier's dust,
For him no cheering crowd, no pealing bell,
But he will reck not, and shall sleep
as well.
No volley shall be fired, no Last Post sound:
But yet his last long sleep shall be profound.
And holy is this spot as though he lay
Amid the mighty in the Abbey, grey,
Only one of the "rank and file," but he heard the call,
And for his country he loved so well
He gave his all.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW

The Editor of Examiner:

Dear Sir,—After perusing the building by-law of the City of Peterborough one is struck by the wisdom of the Council who appointed the City Engineer as Building Inspector without an increase in salary. For to my mind the building by-law is an absolute joke, it is narrow in scope and weak in administration and confines its very limited operations to the fire limits. One would imagine that fire was the only thing that the citizens need be protected against.

The by-law contains little or nothing of any value from a hygienic viewpoint and is therefore unworthy of a city of the size and importance as Peterborough. It contains no provision for enforced sewer and W.C. connections, even when the sewer is on the street, hence the trouble and expense to a great extent of accrude and insanitary method of collecting night soil.

It makes no provision for floor space, air space or window space and there is no provision for ventilation of any description such as a movable top sash in windows. There is none for the erection or drainage of stable or any to prevent the erection of rear dwellings. There is no supervision of interior alterations in dwellings or of rooms over stores so to insure the safety of the buildings or the health of the occupants, except that which protects the external walls. Mr. Editor it would require to much of your valuable space to adequately criticise Peterborough's mythical building by-law, but enough has been said to prove conclusively that Peterborough is in need of a real live building by-law for regulating the erection and to provide for the safety of all buildings and the health of its occupants.

Yours for a healthy as well as a beautiful city.

A. HOPE,
704 George street,
City.

CONSCIENCE IS CLEAR SAYS WEST

Special to the Examiner.

KINGSTON, July 10.—Speaking to his friends, Gunner Joseph West, the Toronto young man who shot Gunner Russell Elliott of Peterborough, last thursday night, when he refused to produce a late pass at the Barracks' gate, said that his conscience was clear in the matter, and that he was free of all blame. He held that he simply did his duty as he saw it.

The Coroner's Jury has exonerated him from all blame.

their worth before being promoted. The men were practically all secured from within the limits of the district and the esprit de corps that has since developed was what the 93rd was built on. Constant hard work was required, but for the name of their home town and county every person worked with a will. The physique of the men required personal attention, and only the best of men were kept on, the slightly unfit ones being gradually weeded out. By using discretion and good judgment the conduct of the men reached an unusually high plane, and to-day there are few marks on the conduct sheets of the 93rd Battalion.

The band, under Bandmaster Hughes, is admitted to be second to none within the camp limits. The machine gun section, signalling section, and all of the various branches, have already reached their maximum efficiency.

This grand organization will soon be going forward to take its next step on the way to the front, and the regret at its loss is now being felt. The camp will to a man regret the leaving of the 93rd for Col. Johnston is taking away one of the finest battalions of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Vote in Perth Will Be Small

STRATFORD, July 10. — Despite strong organizations and efforts of a host of workers for both parties the vote in the city and throughout the county in to-day's North Perth legislative bye-election will not be large. Both parties claim victory.

Ideal weather prevails. No reports have been received of irregularities in connection with the voting.

Big Musical Comedy Coming

This clever comedy, with its jolly tunes, unique dances, and bright lines, kept New York, Boston and Chicago, singing, dancing, and laughing for nearly two years. The cast to be seen at the Grand is headed by Charles McNaughton, who created the leading comedy role in London. He will be remembered here in the original "Spring Maid," "Rose Maid," "Little Miss Fix-It" and "Sweethearts." Other prominent names include Zoe Barnett, Harry MacDonough, Mabel Withee, Roydon Keith, Della Niven, Low Christie, Roy Torrey, Helen Jost, John Paulton and Mark Nescott.

The story of "Nobody Home" tells of Freddy Popple, of Inpleton, England, who comes to New York to visit his brother, Vernon, New York's most famous dancing teacher, and of his winning the love of the prima donna of the Winter Garden, Tony Miller, who has been much sought after by the wealthiest men of the Metropolis. Freddy is a shy whimsical chap of the "Silly-ass" type, very slow and calculating and as played by Charles McNaughton, is one of the most delightful characters of the production.

One of the special added attractions of the piece is the dancing of Sebie Layman and Sylvia Chaulsae, who created nothing less than a sensation in New York last summer, while playing an extended engagement at the "Palace Theatre." The famous Vernon C. Castle is quoted as saying they were "the greatest dancing team in America" and added that the statesmen included Mrs. Castle and himself.

The scenery and stage decorations were planned and designd by Miss Elsie de Wolfe, designer for the smart set of New York. This is Miss Wolfe's first work of the kind and it was done

THE POULTRY ASSOCIATION

Next Meeting Will be Held on Wednesday Night

The Peterborough Poultry Association held their regular meeting on June 14, ex-President Kelly in the chair.

When the regular routine business was finished a number of birds were put on exhibition, the judges being Kenneth Lang and Alec. Elliott (two of the youngest and brightest members in the Association) assisted by some of the more experienced birdmen of the city.

English Game Bantam cock—1st, A. Elliott; 2nd, K. Lang.

English Game Bantam hen—1st A. Elliott.

The next regular meeting will be held in the Labour Hall Wednesday, July 12th, when all the members are expected to be present to receive ex-President Kelly's experience in "Preparing Birds for Exhibition." No memeber of the Association can afford to miss this, as Mr. Kelly has had a long and successful career at the principal exhibitions of Canada.

The meeting will commence sharp at 8 p.m.

DEATH OF A FORMER PROMINENT LOCAL RESIDENT

Mr. George Stethem Passes Away at Fort Francis.

Word has been received of the death of a former well known resident of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Geo. Stethem, who died at Fort Francis, Ont., on Saturday. Mr. Stethem lived in Peterborough for many years and was widely known and highly respected in this district. For a long time he was engaged in the hardware business here, and since going to Fort Francis occupied an important civic position. Major G. A. Stethem of 141st Battalion, is a son of the deceased, while another son has been officially reported missing since early last year, having gone overseas with the first contingent. One daughter, Mrs. Reynolds of Winnipeg, and another, Mrs. Guy, Vancouver, also survive. The funeral, which will be strictly private, will be held here tomorrow.

SEWER COST DROPPED WHEN ENGINEER SAW CEMENT WAS MISS

Mr. Paul Mercer at Civic Probe Swore He Found Three Hundred Ninety-Five Bags Gone From Some Street Works—When Hole Was Plugged Work Was Done at a Much Reduced Cost.

Montreal, July 10.—City Engineer Paul Mercier opened another page in the Bordeaux sewer case when he told the court presided over by Mr. Justice Panneton how cement and other materials belonging to the city for use in the construction of sewers in Bordeaux ward, had disappeared, and how after the leakages had been discovered, the work was continued by the city at a cost which in some cases was one hundred per cent less than what it was before. Mr. Mercier said that he was engineer in chief of the city, and had held that appointment since 1st Jan., 1916. He said that as a result of complaints that had been made respecting the building of sewers in Bordeaux ward, he had been requested by the Board of Control to make a private enquete, and the result of it had been the instituting of the present enquiry. He produced two reports that he had made on the enquiry, one dated the 1st of May, and the second the 15th of May last.

He explained how his department was divided into three services, one for roads, a second for sewers, and a third for aqueducts. An engineer was in each division charged with the construction of sewers, and the engineer in charge of the sewer work now being inquired into at Bordeaux, was Mr. Amireault. The foremen were Wilfrid Menard, brother of the Alderman, and Armand Major, who Ald. Menard the other day testified had been recommended by him.

THE SEWER STATEMENT.

Mr. Aime Geoffrio, K.C., counsel for the city, asked Mr. Mercier fro a statement of the sewer work that had been carried out at Bordeaux during the past two years, and he produced it, with dates and particulars along with the reports of foremen in charge. He said that in the North division there was a big storehouse belonging to the city and in charge of an accountant, Mr. Decelles, who business was to register the requests for material, etc., made by the foreman. The taking away of the material was registered, and when the work was over, and the material was brought back, it was also marked down in the books.

Mr. Geoffrion then questioned as to the quantity of cement took to do a certain amount of and how much was used on the construction work at Bordeaux normally took about one bag of for one yard of work. Mr. said that as soon as he received plaint that everything was not as it should be in the use of for the Bordeaux sewers, he that othe cement should be

"And what was the result?" Mr. Geoffrion.

The result was that cement appeared in the following on work in the following street

On Bois de Boulongue street, of cement were missing.

On Valmont street, 76 bags missing.

On Bourage street, 60 bags accounted for.

On Viel street, 176 bags had peared.

City engineer Mercier said satisfied that the sacks mentio unaccounted for had not been the construction work because had they would have made the too thick, and the results would been bad. He was satisfied, the bags of cement had not turned and not marked

The part of Mr. Mercier's dealing with the suspicion that thing was wrong, and the re of the old foremen by new with the result that the wor carried on by the city at a ably reduced cost, was especially eating.

He said that as soon as the got an inkling of what was the foreman on the Bordeaux work were suspended. One of ponded was Mr. Gordien Menard father of the alderman. Whe foremen were suspended, others their places and the price of the immediately dropped.

LOCAL ORANGE LODGES ATTEND DIVINE WORSHIP

LIST OF LODGES

On Sunday evening, Orangemen to the number of about three hundred attended divine worship in George Street Methodist Church where an interesting discourse was delivered by the Rev. R. G. Peever. The Orangemen assembled at their quarters on Simcoe street and headed by the band of the Salvation Army, marched to the church. The parade was headed by the juvenile lodges, followed by L.O.L. No. 80, L.O.L. No. 1175, L.O.L. No. 50 in charge of the district directors.

The Nassau lodge and visiting members of various district lodges followed next while the Black Preceptory brought up the rear.

Mr. E. F. Reid, County Master and Mr. J. H. Spence, District Master were in charge of the parade. After the service the lodges again reassembled and paraded back to the Orange hall headed by the band. The fine weather brought out a large crowd which congregated along the line of march.

AT THE CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Peever in extending a hearty welcome to the Orangemen made special reference to the junior members of the Order who were well represented. He characterised the Order as the "vigilance committee of Protestantism" and said that the organisation represented liberty of action and thought. His text was taken from Mark 7:6-7. "This people honour eth me with their lips but their heart is far from me."

"Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

The speaker reviewed the history of the Orange Order and its inception. The chief principle, he said, was Christianity. The Order stood for intellectual freedom as well as freedom from domination of any kind. We do not propose to have the church, priest or pastor stand sponsor for man. To Christ and Christ alone we are responsible.

Our weakness attributed to Protestantism is denominationalism. The day may come when this great body of liberty loving worshippers of the Protestant faith will be cemented together in one common bond of unity. It was never intended that we should rend the body of Christ in several parts," said the speaker in conclusion.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

Job didn't get away with all the patience. Moses didn't corner the meekness market, Solomon didn't know it all and, by hokey, Ananias wasn't the only liar.

clared that it would be impossible to attempt a new offensive on a large scale without reinforcements of at least a quarter of a million men.

The Roumanian Government, according to a Berne despatch, has declined an invitation from the German and Austrian Governments to participate in a conference of the Danube powers.

SUCCESS IN GALICIA.

Meanwhile the successes of the Russians in Galicia are preparing the way for a great victory in that sector. Yesterday Gen. Letchitsky captured the important railroad junction of Delatyn, west of Kolomea, and in the same stroke cut off Gen. von Bothmer from his principal base of supplies. A vast amount of booty fell into the Russians' hands with the capture of the city.

In Southern Bukowina the Austrians have rallied and pressed across the Moldava River, according to Vienna.

BOTH ARMIES THREATENED.

A Reuter's despatch from Petrograd says that the Russians have crossed the Stokhod River at Ugli which is approximately half way between the railways running to Kovel from Sarny and Rovno. The despatch adds that inasmuch as the Austro-German forces defending Kovel the chiefly concentrated along these lines, the Russians move in the centre threatens both groups.

"The Russians are masters of the whole triangle comprising Rafalowka, Manevitchie and Kolki, says the despatch.

weeks, especially to handle the business of under-water liners. The latter company has a pier and warehouse, in which are stored the goods to be loaded on the Deutschland for her return trip.

The Deutschland is a new commerce carrier, built in Bremen, and sent here on a purely commercial mission, according to Henry G. Hilken, the senior member of the Schumacher concern. She belongs to the Ozean Rhederei Limited (Ocean Navigation Company, Limited), and was launched at Kiel in March.

DIMENSIONS OF BOAT

The undersea liner, Mr. Hilken understands, is about 315 feet long and thirty feet beam, and is propelled by two great Deisel oil engines. She is as large, if not larger, than any of the German naval submarines, and carried 750 tons deadweight or cargo. As to details of her construction, Mr. Hilken said he was lacking in information.

Mr. Hilken is an American and his firm has been in business here operating ships under the American flag since 1824.

To whom the Deutschland's cargo is consigned Mr. Hilken said he did not know, but he believed it was going to a number of concerns badly in need of dyestuffs.

When she will return, whether it is planned to have her make regular trans-Atlantic trips, Mr. Hilken refused to discuss.

"This project was conceived," he said, "by German commercial interests who wanted to reopen trade with the United States. We need some of Germany's commodities and Germany needs some of ours. It is a purely commercial proposition and that is all there is to it."

Six months ago came first reports that Germany was preparing to put into the trans-Atlantic trade a line of submarines. London cable reports told of the organization of a company to inaugurate such a service, and English experts were quoted as saying they felt no surprise at the announcement of the plans.

RECORD CROWD IS EXPECTED

Arrangements are practically completed for the celebration of the glorious twelveth of July. To-day a merry-go-round is being erected on the market square and judging by the number of refreshment booths that are being constructed a large crowd is anticipated. With fair weather the crowd may easily reach ten or twelve thousand people. Ample accommodation has been provided in anticipation of a record breaking gathering. The churches throughout the city have arranged to serve meals.

HOLIDAY SEASON HARD ON BLACKLISTERS

The holiday season is apparently a source of temptation for the blacklister and, at this morning's session of the Police Court, another local man was assessed ten dollars for being under the influence of liquor whilst on the index. The prisoner had procured two bottles of the forbidden nectar from one of Lindsay's hostelries.

A porter from a local hotel appeared after a week's remand on the charge of breaking into his proprietor's bar and stealing liquor. The prisoner elected to be tried summarily and put in a plea of not guilty. Mr. Ruddy who appeared for the accused was not ready to go on with the case, and the case will be tried on Thursday. Application for bail was made by the prisoner's counsel.

FIRST MEETING OF THE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE

The Board of Agriculture of West Peterborough as the Farmers' Institute will be known henceforth, held a meeting in the Council chamber on Saturday afternoon to complete the election of officers postponed from the annual meeting at R. N. Scott's farm a few weeks ago. The new Board is as follows:

President—Mr. J. A. McGregor.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Clayton Telford.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Wilbert Rosebrough.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. A. B. Mann.
Auditors—Mr. John Reid Hand Mr. Jos. Barnard.

This constituted practically the entire business considered and the new Board is well prepared to continue the work of the Farmers' Institute.

Upset on Stoney Lake With a Can of Cream and Didn't Loose Single Dr

Upsets at Stoney Lake are part of the programme, so is the regular duty of going after milk. But when a canoe overturns, including a can of cream and not a drop of it is lost, then you have something of an anomaly in milk delivery. The lake was rather rough yesterday when Miss Vera Stock, daughter of Mr. Harry Stock, of Juniper, and Master Jim Pogue, son of Rev. Robt. Pogue, were returning from McCracken's with the day's supply of cream. The youngsters were apparently both amphibious, for their canoe overturned the first they thought of was the cream, was immediately secured and brought home like the message to Garcia. water was no strange element to young people. Jack Hunter put from McCrackens in his launch help them and other persons in were near at hand. It isn't quite whether the young folk were saved, but the main fact is that paddled home in their canoe brought all the cream.

WEDDING BELLS

FITZGERALD—BLAIR.

The wedding took place at Goderich, Ont., on Saturday, July 1st of Miss Cora Blair to Mr. Melville Alexander Fitzgerald. Rev. J. E. Ford officiated.

BEECH—LAWRENCE.

Mr. W. J. Beech of the Globe Tailoring Co., who have a branch at 430 George street, Peterborough was quietly married to Miss R. M. Lawrence of Newport, Mon., England at the home of the Rev. R. B. Cochrane, 44 Albany Road, Toronto on July 3rd, 1916. The bride who sailed from England on June 23rd on the S.S. Grampian (Allan Line) arrived in Quebec, July 1st and Toronto, July 3rd a.m. and the ceremony took place at 9 p.m.. Mr. Charles Gray Keary, Toronto and Miss Myrtle Holland, Toronto acted as groomsman and bridesmaid. Mr. Louis Green (Globe Tailoring Co) also attended. After the ceremony the couple left for a short trip to Niagara, etc.

There were many handsome presents from England, particularly from Newport, Mon., where both bride and groom are well known, the bride being associated with Emmanuel Congregational church for a number of years. Needless to say the bride brings with her the best wishes of her many friends from the Old Land and that their future happiness may be attained will be the wish of the many Peterborough friends of the bridegroom.

Last Minute War Dispatches

LONDON, July 10—

"The Present war, the Prime Minister said, was one dominating factor compelling acquiescence in proposals."

He pointed out that the plan of settlement would be in effect only until a year after the end of the war, when it could be extended or rejected by parliament.

BERLIN, July 10—

The War Office also admitted that the French have obtained lodgement in the village of Biaches, about a mile from Perrone.

LOST IN JUNGLE.

Intense excitement prevailed in the west end of the town on Saturday, when a little girl of five years old, the daughter of a resident of Homewood avenue, disappeared from her home. After several hours' search by an organized posse of men and dogs she was finally located near daylight on Sunday morning in the thick jungle of burdock and other weeds on Hunter street west, near Walton. The parents were naturally overjoyed to recover their lost darling. This should be a warning to other parents, as this spot is particularly dangerous, being the haunt of ferocious wild animals of all kinds.

C.P.R. STATION CHANGES.

Recent changes at the C.P.R. station include the painting of the station building and others in that group, also the platform railing. The immense water tower has been raized and in the meantime the C.P.R. trains are watering from a George Street hydrant near the railway crossing. This was obtained under an agreement with the Water Commission.

Illuminaied Balloons At Sacred Heart Social

A feature of the lawn social at the Church of the Sacred Heart grounds to-morrow afternoon and evening will be the ascension of three or four balloons, the biggest one at ten o'clock. The first will be sent away about 8.30 as a diversion during the supper hour. The balloonists will be Messrs. Will. Grady and Gene Hurtubise, both of whom promise to suspend another bright star or two in the constellation of Ursa Major, following which Mr. Hurtubise will reach up and hand the great bear an original Hurtubise "bear hug." At that if the "Bear" swings a few feet lower to-morrow night "Gene" ought to catch him without unduly stretching himself, and rescue his paper twinklers.

New York Stock Market

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 10.—Weak spots appeared in a quiet market during the morning and only in very few cases was there any upward movement. U. S. steel fell off slightly, following an announcement of decrease in unfilled orders. Willy's Overlad sold up nearly a point while Motor shares were generally declining.

DOUBTS REPORT OF HIS SON'S DEATH

And Letter From Private Max Breckenridge Increases the Uncertainty

The family and friends of Private Max Breckenridge have refused to believe the unofficial report of his death as currently circulated, and from uncertain and decidedly dubitable sources. As far as can be learned, his father has received no report from the Record Office, and it is a strange fact that the first word he received is said to have been from neighbours. A letter dated June 22nd was received from Private Breckenridge this morning by one of his Peterborough friends. He was safe and sound upto that date, and there is nothing authentic regarding him since that time. Hence, his father to-day decided to regard his son as safe, believing that the news recently reported was only unreliable rumour. The citizens generally will join in the wish and prayer that Private Breckenridge is unwounded and safe.

GERMANS ARE EVACUATING THE CITY OF PERONNE

The Italians Have Made A Number of Important Gains

Russians Continue To Drive Back Enemy Along The Entire Front

Berlin Marvels at Stream of Men and Munitions Adversary on the East is Directing at Teutonic Line---Right Wing of General Brusiloff's Armies Drives Back Enemy from the Styr to the Stokhod Line of Fortifications and Advances Fifteen Miles, Following Them Beyond the River in Swift Pursuit North of Lutsk.

MANY PRISONERS CAPTURED

PETROGRAD, July 11.—(Official)—Russians have crossed the Stockhod River at many points, and are closely pursuing the enemy south of Polessi.

The eyes of the Germans are turned to-day toward the eastern rather than the western front. The weight of the first onslaught in the west is believed to have been fully estimated, and in spite of whatever surprises British strategy still may have in store, public and expert opinion here is confident of the outcome. It is believed that the Sixth army and reserves have the situation well in hand on the Somme front and that nothing can interfere with the progress of the Verdun campaign. In the east, however, a great general offensive has burst forth all along the line from Riga to Roumania. Wave after wave of Russian flesh and steel is rolling against the Teuton dyke which stretches across the Russian provinces. Thrust follows thrust in constant succession, and no sooner do the Germans succeed in walling the advance at one threatened point than another menaces.

The most striking results thus far manifested have been in the leadership and distribution of the forces of the Central Powers rather than in the actual movement of the contending armies. With the exception of General Pflanzer, commanding a small group at the extreme southern end of the line, the Austro-Hungarian units are everywhere interlarded by Germans, who have furnished reserves to bolster up particularly threatened points.

At the very outset the German leaders have been astonished at the recuperative powers of the Russians and their freely flowing reservoirs of both men and munitions. Time after time it seemed as if the Russians must be nearing their last resources in shells and reserves. Time and again correspondents at Austrian headquarters reported that the Russian troops were losing their vim and striking power, only to chronicle a day or two later a new onslaught with fresh troops, freely supported by artillery.

Despite the Russian gains, however, which, when marked on the map of the eastern front make a comparatively small showing for such a colossal expenditure of blood and iron, no uneasiness is manifested here. The general offensive on all fronts simultaneously has compelled the Germans to discontinue their favourite railroad strategy, but the strategic defence, which the Germans have deliberately chosen on the eastern and general western fronts, has so far proved adequate to hold up the Allies' offensive and has not interfered with the continuance of the German assault against Verdun. To such an extent is this true that the Germans still retain the strategic initiative and show no indication of relaxing their grip on the great French fortress.

Coop and Lent's Circus Will Exhibit at Peterboro

Thursday, July 20, Peterborough will be the Mecca for thousands of visitors from the surrounding country for the "Coop and Lent" All New United Monster Shows, will exhibit there on that date.

These exhibitions are completely new this year and no other organization that has ever been seen hereabouts covers so broad and comprehensive a field of up-to-date Circus diversions.

The large and varied performances naturally demand an arena of vast dimensions, utilizing three rings, two stages and a spacious hippodrome track, and obviously the features to fittingly fill so extensive an area can only be those that are big in action and necessitating large numbers and groups of participats. There are oriental and European novelty acts of wonderful daring and skill and the equestrian acts for outshine anything hitherto presented together under canvas.

The racing contests evoke tumultuous enthusiasm and, collectively, the performance, the Menagerie, the Aviary and Field Museum, etc., are said to be unexcelled in originality, quality and quantity.

"Is that youthful looking man really your father?"

"Why yes," replied the debutante, as the Birmingham Age-Herald relates it. "He doesn't look as old as the man who had the last dance with you." "Mercy, no! That was grandfather."

LLOYD GEORGE, THE NEW MINISTER OF WAR.

ANOTHER WINTER TRENCH WARFARE

NEW YORK, July 8.—Miss Carita Spencer, National Chairman of the Surgical dressing Committee of the National Civic Federation, has returned after spending four months in the European war zone, investigating the manner in which the dressing have been distributed to the Allies by the International Committee, of which Mrs. Mary Willard Hatch is Chairman. She is the first American woman to visit the western fronts of the British, French, Belgian, and Italian armies, and in addition interviewed the Queen of Belgium at La Panne and Pope Benedict in the Vatican.

While many of the officials she met hoped that peace would be brought about this year, the prevailing opinion, Miss Spencer said, was that the troops would spend another Winter in the trenches.

"The morale of the allied armies," she continued, "was excellent, and when I left the war zone three weeks ago the troops were ready, both physically and mentally, for the big offensive movement which they had been expecting since the middle of May.

"The British, Belgian, Italian, and French soldiers are all fine types of fighting men and impress the observer in their different ways, but the vivacity and magnetism of the poilu stands out above it all. France has been desolated by this war but she has found her soul and a new nation will be developed afterward.

The Queen of Belgium received me in the kindest manner, and I was practically the guest of the Government in Belgium for two weeks. I obtained a private audience with the Pope through Monsignor Samperre, and was treated most courteously at the Vatican. Pope Benedict shook hands with me in a simple, democratic manner and discussed the work that was being done by the various American organizations in the war in which he expressed his great interest. He hoped that peace would come to Europe soon.

"Our surgical dressings," Miss Spencer went on to say, "are being distributed to 600 hospitals in France and Belgium from the bureau in Paris to which they are sent direct from New York at the rate of 250,000 a month. Not only the chief surgeons in France, but also a number of Colonels, Majors and Captains have written to the Paris bureau to thank our organization.

"During my wanderings, I was frequently within sound of the booming of the big guns, and one morning, near Ypres, when I was at breakfast in a charcoal cellar, a piece of a shell penetrated the wall of my bedroom and struck the cot on which I had been sleeping. When I went up to the room the piece of steel was imbedded in the wooden floor, and I dug it out with an axe to bring home with me as a souvenir.

"The most interesting section of the war zone I visited was the Italian front in the Dolomite region, where the line consists of 600 kilometers of what is really a mountain chain. The way in which the Italians managed to drag their artillery up these almost perpendicular peaks is wonderful."

TORONTO WOMAN STRICKEN AT PICNIC

ST. CATHARINES, July 10.—Stricken with apoplexy while attending the Sunday school picnic of the Olivet Baptist Church, of Toronto, at Port Dalhousie, on Friday, Mrs. Charlotte Richards was brought to the home of her brother, Abraham Pinkey, this city, and she passed away this morning. The remains will be taken to-morrow to Toronto, where four small children survive. The deceased woman's husband is at present at the battle front in Belgium with the 75th Battalion, C.E.F.

Tanga is the terminus of the new railway built by the Germans.

ITALIANS CONTINUE ADVANCE.

ROME, July 11.—Italians have made important gains in the Adigo Valley.

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

Liberal Was Elected By a Large Majority

North Perth Picks Out a Seat in the Liberal Side of the Ontario Legislature — Majority Over Six Hundred

Special to the Examiner:

STRATFORD, July 11. — North Perth has turned over to the Liberal side of the Provincial Legislature. All the big towns in the constituency returned large majorities for F. W. Hay, the Liberal candidate in the bye-election that was accounted for yesterday. The latest figures give Hay a majority of 627 over Makin, the Conservative candidate.

Trouble at Borden Camp

Special to The Examiner:

CAMP BORDEN, July 11.—Alleging discomforts in the new camp and angered by being moved from old quarters, some of the troops caused trouble, which was soon quelled and the adjustment of all misunderstandings made.

The Unjust Volunteer System

In a small way the nation has seen the working out of the volunteer system again. Circumstances more kind to it could not be imagined. The emergency was hardly larger than could be met by the adventurous men of the country if they had been available as soldiers. It has required thus far only the mobilization of the larger part of the national guard and the recruiting of the various regiments to their war strength.

That has been all thus far necessary and it was all that was necessary to show the vounteer system up as an iniquitous fraud. Can any able bodied man, fit for military service find for himself any satisfactory reason why he is going about his normal pursuits when some one of his acquaintance is engaged in the abnormal business of soldiering?

Does Brown, who is going about his affairs without a change of habit, think that Smith, who has changed all of his violently, is working for Smith or for the whole nation? And what has the nation done particularly for Smith that he should be singled out for unusual service in return and have his reasonable expectations and civil pursuits knocked to pieces?

If the nation has particularly favoured Smith during times of peace, by some concession or grant, then Smith is only meeting an obligation, but Brown knows that Smith has had nothing more from the government than he has had, and Brown can ask himself a hundred times why Smith should serve and not he and he will not find an answer satisfactory to him.

Brown, being an honest man, there upon concedes that universal service is the only just service, and later he will find that it is the only efficient one. Probably 50 per cent. of the men now mustered into the federal service from state service have no business being in the federal service at their time of life and in their condition of life.

It is important to the nation that they, having established themselves in civil life and being parts of the nation as a going concern, should be kept undisturbed so long as possible.

If we were organized sensibly under universal service, war with Mexico would call upon part of the men of the nation, but it would call them fairly and would find them trained. It is probable that the men actually in training would be more than enough. It is probable that for Mexico the reserve organizations of men in civil life would not be needed.

In a greater danger civil life would have to be disturbed, but again the call would be fairly made and the men would be found efficient. The nation would treat its citizens fairly. When it permits ten men to avoid doing what it gets one man to do, the people are treated unfairly, and when it expects one man to try to do something for which he has been imperfectly trained and equipped it does another injustice.

If square dealing and efficiency mean anything to the American people, the American people will be for compulsory military service.—Chicago Tribune.

CROPS ARE GOOD ALL OVER WEST

A telegraphich report uniformly optimistic in tone on the condition of growing crops, and embracing the northern, central and southern divisions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, has been received. This report is confirmed by wired advices from the Department of Agriculture for the provinces concerned.

The report points out that the weather prevailing over the western country from the eastern boundary of Manitoba to the Rockies is generally so favourable that the principal crops are making splendid progress. There are indications that in a few low-lying sections the grain has not yet entirely recovered from the backward early conditions. The details follow.

Milk bottles should be filled with cold water the instant the milk is taken out, then they wash easily.

Eskimos Ravaged By Tuberculosis

The need for medical missionaries in Alaska has been emphasized in the most striking manner by a special correspondent of the Medical Record, who has recently completed a sanitary survey of St. Michael Island. His purpose was to find out the extent to which native children were infected with tuberculosis, and he concluded that about 75 per cent. of the population was so affected. His report presented a picture of living conditions that would appear almost incredible to dwellers in civilized communities.

"In the ravages of the 'great white plague,'" he wrote, "the Eskimo has not been overlooked. Just how or when this disease was introduced into Alaska no one knows, but it is obvious how its spread, increasing mortality and morbidity are continued. There are various reports on the tuberculous percentage among the natives, and these reports seem to have been formulated by writers other than medical men. This disease is so common in Alaska that every white man or white woman and most of the natives themselves think first of tuberculosis as the cause of all ailments, whether external or internal. The general opinion is that about 75 per cent. of the natives are suffering from tuberculosis.

"With this is view the writer made a tuberculosis survey of the native children of St. Michael Island. This survey was conducted as follows:

"1. Sanitary survey of the native villages so as to obtain an insight into their mode of living, food, percentage air space per individual, number of children under 15 years of age, sewerage, and garbage disposal.

"2. Physical examination of as many children below the age of 15 as possible.

"3. Testing these same children by the von Pirjuet tuberculous reaction.

"4. Sputum examination.

"5. Making developmental measurements.

Eskimo Living Conditions.

"Sanitary Survey.—A person who has never visited an Eskimo village and has never come intimately in contact with the natives in their natural state has not the slightest conception of the most insanitary surroundings they maintain. The villages from which these conclusions are drawn are considered among the cleanest and most up-to-date villages in North-Western Alaska. The houses are usually one room with a storm door entrance, low ceiling and about fifteen feet square, made of plank, logs, grass and scraps of tin—in fact, anything that will keep the little heat they have within the building and keep out the cold. Every possible crack is closed so as to keep them warm, and no attempt whatsoever made at ventilation.

"In this little house will live the entire family, and at times other families. In one house of the St. Michael village, nineteen persons live continually, and sometimes have visitors. The average cubic air space is about 200 cubic feet per person. The native also stores all of his belongings, except dogs, in his house; so we also find poorly tanned and foul smelling furs, seal oil, and fish that have been caught possibly many months before and in a decomposing state, a few dirty vessels of one kind and another, such tools or implements as they make their catch with, and sometimes a stove.

"The door into the house is usually covered by a piece of canvas, bagging or a skin so as to aid in keeping out the draughts. Any form of table, chair, or bed is an unusual article. In fact, in some of the villages the natives sleep seated on the floor with their backs against the wall. At one time the distinguishing feature between the Eskimo Indian and a citizen (in the legal sense), was based upon whether or not he ate off a table or on the floor.

WATER SCARCE AND LITTLE USED.

"Water is very scarce, particularly so in Winter, as everything is frozen and all water is obtained by melting ice. Considering the above, we can readily understand that the Eskimos rarely, and in some cases never, bathe. They also rub themselves with seal oil, and when you enter one of these houses you encounter an odor incomparable in intensity and offensiveness with any thing that the writer ever before came into contact wit. They sometimes catch fish in Summer and bury it in the ground, (possibly to keep the flies away;) then will exhume this decomposed mass in Winter and eat it as such, or perhaps cook it for themselves or their dogs. Should you enter this house now, the intensity of the smell will stifle you, but the native is placidly enjoying the aroma of these viands.

"All waste is thrown out of the door, but as the natives eat all of the seal oil and the entire flesh there is but little refuse from this source. Is it surprising that communicable diseases spread among these people and that tuberculosis is threatening to destroy the Eskimo? It is only a question of time!

"Some tuberculosis investigators have said that once we contract this disease the lesion remains, although at times in an inactive or walled off condition, the patient presenting no symptoms. Having this in mind it was thought best to examine the children. There are two schools at St. Michael, one called the 'native school' which pure-breed natives attend and the other the 'white school' where there are a few children with Eskimo blood. The results of physical examination, tuberculin reaction, and sputum examinations are collectively tabulated as below.

	White School 8 children	Native School 26 children
Positive.	62.5 per cent.	61.5 per cent.
Negative.	12.5 per cent	23.0 per cent.
Suspicious	25.0 per cent	15.5 per cent

"On further examination fully one-half of the suspicious cases would prove to be tuberculosis.

SOME PARENTS OBJECTED.

"This is a small number from which to draw conclusions, and it is not intended to state that 61.5 per cent. of the native Eskimo children of Alaska under the age of 15 years are suffering from active tuberculosis lesions, but it does furnish an insight into the high percentage of tuberculosis in the natives, even at an early age and in one of Northwestern Alaska's best villages.

"During this survey there was occasion to examine eleven adults who were complaining of pain in their chests. All eleven showed advanced tuberculosis. These same adults are living in the above-described houses with their children, brothers and sisters. In all there are 27 houses in the village with 107 persons, 46 of whom are children under the age of 15 years. It was impossible to examine more than twenty-six of them, as the parents objected in the remaining cases, and antagonism was avoided wherever possible.

"The twenty-six children were all children from the native school, between the ages of 4 1-2 and 14 years. Besides the 107 persons referred to above, there are ten others who live in the village occasionally and a large number of others who live in other villages but visit here at St. Michael, living in the native village during their sojourn.

"Although the percentage of positive cases from the white school was highest than from the native school the physical signs were far more marked in the latter, and there was a greater percentage of advanced tuberculosis in the native school. These eight mixed-breed children from the white school live under much better sanitary conditions. In fact all of them are at present living under conditions approximating those of white people; none of them live in the native village. These children intermingle to a certain extent, and most of them had lived under conditions, during a portion of their lives, simulating Eskimo habits. Even the white man, in general, lives under poor sanitary surroundings at St. Michael.

FIELD FOR MEDICAL MISSIONARIES.

"It is stated that the Eskimo, as a rule, has little or no appreciation but the writer believes he appreciates medical attention when approached in the proper manner. He is a man that one cannot force into doing things and to attempt to compel him to clean house (in the white man's sense), or to discard food that a civilized man would not eat, will soon gain his ill-will and distrust. The field for medical and surgical work on the Alaskan native is untouched. It is a field where medical missionaries can reap great harvests. The United States Bureau of Education has a small medical appropriation annually, but it is far too little, and only a very small percentage of the natives can receive much benefit from it.

"There are a few hospitals scattered over this enormous country and a few doctors here and there. They are undoubtedly doing valuable work, but there are too few of them. If the churches, religious societies, and benevolent organizations in general of that rich and wonderful country of ours—the United States of America—would turn only a part of their attention to Alaska and render financial aid, these poor and wretched natives, many of whom are without clothes, and hungry to-day, could be elevated mentally and physically to a much better position."

THE CURIOUS WILL OF AN INSANE MAN

The curious will of an insane man made when he was poor and near death has come to our notice, says "Commerce and Finance," New York. The old man had no property but he realized the true values of life and these he sought to pass on to posterity in his will. The document was composed by Williston Fish, now a lawyer in Chicago, and is beautiful for its thought. For childhood, for lovers, and for old age he left every joy. The optimism and wholesome spirit of the document warrant its being reprinted here, although its economic significance is rather remote. It reads:

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory, make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order to justify as may be to distribute my interets in the world among succeeding men.

That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property being inconsiderable and of no account I make no disposal of in this my will.

My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted all else in the world I now devise and bequeath—

Item: I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments and I charge said parents to use them justly and generously, as the needs of their children may require.

Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the fields, and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks, and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows that dip therein, and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night and the moon and the trail of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subject nevertheless to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.

Item: I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played; all pleasant waters where one may swim; all snow-clad hills where one may coast, and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate; to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods and their appurtenances, the squirrels and birds, the echoes and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance and without any incumbrance of care.

Item: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need; as the stars of the sky; the red roses by the wall; the bloom of the hawthorn; the sweet strains of music and aught else by which they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

Item: To young men jointly, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry, and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undaunted confidence in their own strength though they are rude; I give them the power to make lasting friendships, and of possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses, to sing with lusty voices.

Item: And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave memory, and I bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live over the old days again, freely and fully, without tithe or diminution.

Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

FRENCH-CANADIANS IN ARMS IN FRANCE

The bringing of the old songs of France back to life by the marching French-Canadians, the spontaneous welcomes, the rejoicing of officers at seeing King Arthur's country, are pictured in a narrative of the Canadian Eyewitness. Sir Max Aitken writes:

Of all peoples the French are the most susceptible to the appeal of the historic. One can imagine with what feelings they learned that two thousand French-Canadians had landed with the 1st Canadian Division at St. Nazaire—one company of the 14th Battalion was entirely composed of French-Canadians—and as the new arrivals started on their slow journey to the front, the air rang with the old chansons which three centuries before had come out of their own France. These songs had been forgotten in the land of their origin, but still lived in the New France. Very strange must have been the meeting between these two branches of a race sundered so long by the seas and time.

Welcome Home!

"The population," writes a French-Canadian officer, "applauded us, people rushed to the doors of their houses to offer us fruits and wine; at stopping places, French soldiers brought us coffee and rum; joy and gaiety reigned everywhere. Gradually it dawned on these people that among the strange soldiers from across the ocean were men speaking their mother tongue; not the French perhaps of modern Brittany and Normandy, but French none the less."

One must picture the joyous effort to find the common idiom and accent, the older country casting back in memory across the years to the point where the two streams of speech have divided; the younger nation of the older speech, casting forward to catch the new French which had sprung up since the division. The scene is one for the painter or the novelist more than for the Record Officer, but this wonderful journey, ending in lovers' meetings, must leave an ineffaceable imprint on the memories of both England and France.

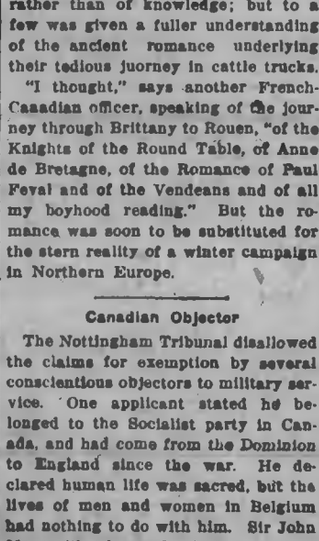
Romance in Cattle Cars

Dramatic moments are few in modern war, but this was one of them, a fitting pendant to that other scene a few years back, when the joint memorial to Wolfe and Montcalm was unveiled on the high plain above Quebec. To most, this mutual recognition must have been an affair of instinct rather than of knowledge; but to a few was given a fuller understanding of the ancient romance underlying their tedious journey in cattle trucks.

"I thought," says another French-Canadian officer, speaking of the journey through Brittany to Rouen, "of the Knights of the Round Table, of Anne de Bretagne, of the Romance of Paul Feval and of the Vendeans and of all my boyhood reading." But the romance was soon to be substituted for the stern reality of a winter campaign in Northern Europe.

Canadian Objector

The Nottingham Tribunal disallowed the claims for exemption by several conscientious objectors to military service. One applicant stated he belonged to the Socialist party in Canada, and had come from the Dominion to England since the war. He declared human life was sacred, but the lives of men and women in Belgium had nothing to do with him. Sir John Macgrath observed what a contrast there was between applicant and other Canadians. Another member of the tribunal declared that applicant would no thave dared to say what he did in the presence of other Canadians fighting for the Empire.



"Uncle Sam will be too weak to manage with arms."—A significant Japanese comment on United States preparedness, from Yorodzu, Tokyo.

In most cases it is better to keep that honest opinion a profound secret.

FINE TRIBUTE FROM SMITH-DORRIEN—Sir Henry Pellatt has received a glowing tribute to the worth of the Canadians and to the late General Mercer from Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, special A.D.C. to the King. Above is a fas-simile of part of the letter. In a later letter he said: "How grandly Canadians have done in this war, and how proud you must be of them. I was fortunate enough to be commanding in the Ypres area when they saved the whole situation during the great gas attack of April 22nd last year."

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS AND HOW OFTEN PREVENTED

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere; large size, containing two months' treatment, costs $1.00, small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.

UNIVERSITY'S HEROES

Lieut. the Hon. William Alastair Damer Parnell, of Arts '17, and Science '18, of McGill, who served with the Grenadier Guards in France, has been awarded the Military Cross for distinguished conduct in making a raid on the trenches of the enemy. Lieut. Parnell came to McGill from Rugby in the fall of 1913, and entered the class of Arts '17, at the commencement of the session of 1914-15 he became a member of the class of Science '18. On the death in action of his brother, Sir Henry Blight Fortescue Parnell, he returned to England and took out a commission in his brother's regiment. He was born in 1894, and is the son of the late fourth Baron Congleton, major-general in the army, who served in the Crimea after the fall of Sebastopol, and during the campaign against the Zulus. Lieut. Parnell was the fourth McGill man to be awarded the Military Cross, the other three recipients being Capt. Human Lightstone, of Med. '10; Capt. D. M. Mathieson, of Science '07; and Lieut. Evan B. Hugh-Jones, of Science '13.

Blacks Gave Biplanes

Through the Overseas Club sixty-eight biplanes have been presented to the Royal Flying Corps. One of these was bought by the chiefs and people of Eastern Krobo, Gold Coast, another by the chiefs and people of the New Juaben Settlement, third by the people of Saran, while the Oahene chiefs and people of Kwahu, Gold Coast Colony, raised the funds for a fourth.

CHEAP PATRIOTS THESE

Some Londoners Took Advantage of Car Conductors

War time labor problems have produced a new race of dodgers, who do not pay their street car fares. So large has become their number that the London County Council are taking special steps to deal with the matter. On some of the more crowded routes extra conductors are to be introduced during the busy hours. The second official will take on half the work, and then leave the car to perform a similar service in another. It had been found that taking advantage of the many new conductors certain systems are regularly worked by fare evaders, who pay a half-penny or a penny and remain in the car for a long journey, trusting that they would not be noticed in the crowd.

Generals' Nicknames

Lord Kitchener is known in the army as "Hawkeye," although to the outside world he is usually known as "K. of K." Lord Charles Beresford is "Buck-'em-up," the late General Gatesacre was always called "Backacher," General Hutton is "Curly Hutton," while the late Lord Roberts was not only "Bobs," but was also familiarly called "Little Freddy."

Tricks of Hun Lie Factory

"A Neutral" says this and "A Neutral" says that. This is one of the Hun tricks in disseminating lies. The latest of these is that the Kaiser disapproves of the Zeppelin raids on Great Britain. If so, why has he decorated some members of the crews with his beastly Iron Cross?—Kingston Standard.

McCuaigs of Montreal

Mr. C. J. McCuaig, of Montreal, has good reason to be proud of his three sons, who went overseas with the first of the units of the Fifth Royal Highlanders organized—the 13th Battalion, the fighting unit, the memory of which will never die in the mind of Montreal and the Empire. One son, Major D. R. McCuaig, won the Distinguished Service Order for bravery. He is, unfortunately, a prisoner of war in Germany at Hanover, and was seriously wounded before surrender. Another son has been wounded. He left as a lieutenant and adjutant of the 13th Battalion, and became Major G. Eric McCuaig, second in command of his regiment. The other son, Captain Clarence N. McCuaig, left a lieutenant and won promotion on the battlefield

HOW THE BRITISH CENSOR WORKS

Joseph W. Grigg, a representative of the New York World, was recently allowed to see how the British censors examine the mail for Europe from America in the ships landing at British ports. His report is extremely interesting. Writing from London, he says:

"The opportunity has been given me as a representative of the New York World, to accompany through the British postal censorship a consignment of more than 200 sacks of mail from the United States to Continental points. It is the first time during the war that such a facility has been granted to any correspondent. And not only am I able to give the experience of this particular consignment of mail, which was landed at Falmouth from the Holland-America liner New Amsterdam, but the latitude afforded me to witness the working of the whole postal censorship gives me the opportunity to describe it as well.

The liner New Amsterdam had just dropped anchor in Falmouth Harbor as we came alongside in a steam drifter. The boarding party included officers who were to examine the papers of 240 passengers landing in England and as many more destined for Holland of other Continental points. There were a police representative and two women; the women it was explained, were to make any searches among the women passengers that might be thought to be necessary, which is contrary to the German reports that men search women passengers. One of these women, the daughter of a very well known titled person in London, and formerly a nurse in South Africa, does this work voluntarily. Then there was the officer in charge of unloading the mail.

The British officers paid their respects to the Dutch officers and the respective duties of the former began. I paired off with the one in charge of the mail.

CENSORED IN LONDON.

The hatchway of the hold where the mail was carried had already been opened. The officer got his men ready on the drifter, and in conjunction with the Dutch crew, the unloading proceeded without delay. This officer explained to me that every sack of mail has to be accounted for by him in a sworn statement. Every letter taken from passengers must likewise be kept account of in another report.

In less than an hour the 202 sacks were aboard the drifter and we had started for the docks, where they were to be loaded into railroad vans by means of a steam crane. In an hour and a half they were ready to be forwarded to London, 291 miles away, but had to wait the departure of a train several hours later. "All roads lead to London" is true of the mail censorship with the one exception of terminal mail—from the United States or vice versa. In such instances they are censored at Liverpool.

The mail officer showed me some of the consignments that had been handled by him in recent months. Thus, on January 5, 1916, the New Amsterdam had brought over from New York a total of 1629 bags, the biggest single consignment to be landed at Falmouth during the war.

Other big mails include the consignment on the liner Rotterdam in February, 1435; Ryndam, 997. To South America from Holland: Zeelandia, 1419; Gelria, 845.

But my narrative concerns principally the 202 sacks of mail on the New Amsterdam. They reached London between three and four o'clock in the morning on June 8 and were immediately taken in post office vans to the big structure in Carey street, where headquarters of the postal censorship of Great Britain is installed.

1500 CENSORS WORK FAST.

At 9.30 that morning 1500 censors, men and women—a larger proportion of the former—began the actual work of censoring these bags from the New Amsterdam. At three o'clock the next afternoon I saw these bags of mail being loaded into vans at the General Post Office, from which place they were being taken to the Holborn railroad station on their way to Gravesend, and thence by boat to Holland, two days ahead of the New Amsterdam.

To sum up the case for the censorship as presented to me by its highest officials; there are several outstanding features. Here is an institution that has come with the war and without a precedent, so far as Great Britain is concerned. Its cost is approximately $3,750,000 a year, including the Liverpool branch. There were delays of from ten days to three weeks in the early days in handling certain consignments of mail, a delay frankly admitted to me by its officers, but they assert that this is no longer possible. Like any other business, it has acquired efficiency with age. It has also acquired two set rules: First, a time limit of two days on all outward mails—that is from Europe to the United States; second, a time limit of four days on inward mails—that is from the United States to Europe—the delay in the latter class being occasioned by the greater vigilance which must be shown the mails coming this way.

As illustrating the efficiency now in handling mails as compared with six months ago, the case of the steamship United States, from Sweden to the United States, touching at Kirkwall, on June 6, was cited. These included 56 bags of ordinary mails and 20 bags of registered. They were brought to London, from Kirkwall censored, and placed on a vessel sailing to New York from Liverpool within 36 hours, or half a day inside the time allowance. Six months ago it would have taken, it was admitted to me, fully ten days. There were practically 4,000 letters in each bag.

FOOD FROM NEEDY POLAND.

British Contend Notice Shows Germans Seek Fruit There.

London newspapers reprint the following official notice, recently made public in Germany, with comment that this disproves the German assertion that food is not being taken from starving Poland.

"A rich harvest of fruit is expected in the areas of Russia which are under Marshal von Hindenburg, and all measures have been taken in the administrative districts to make full use of this fruit harvest. A part of the fruit will probably be used in the area of occupation itself, while a great part of the fruit of all kinds will be taken away into Germany and used there. There will, therefore, be a valuable addition to the food supply of our people. The fruit is to be delivered in waggons in the chief market centres of Germany."

BY UNIQUE OPERATION

PARIS, July 5.—The most remarkable of all operations for wounds received in war was performed recently at the Grand Palais in Paris by Professor Laurent of Brussels University.

Corporal Rousselet had lost part of his thighbone. Amputation had been decided when Private Hilliette was brought to the hospital and his leg removed.

Dr. Laurent grafted the bony offshoots of Tilliette's stump on Rousselet's thighbone, the two soldiers remaining linked together for a week When the two were separated Rousselet's thighbone was restored and the leg was saved.

BRITAIN AFTER WAR

Will Government Control of Great Factories Continue?

At the end of this war Great Britain will find herself with this great national factory, this great national organization of labor, planned, indeed, primarily to make war material, but convertible with the utmost ease to the purposes of automobile manufacture, to transit reconstruction, to electrical engineering, and endless such uses. Either the state must go on with this production, as it can do, straight off from the signing of peace, converting with a minimum of friction, taking on its soldiers as they are discharged from the army as employes with a minimum waste of time and a minimum of social disorder and a maximum advantage in the resumption of foreign trade, or there will be a dangerous break-up of the national factory system, a time of extreme chaos and bitter unemployment until capital accumulates for new developments. I believe that out of the ruins of the nineteenth century system of private capitalism that this war has smashed for ever, there will arise, there does even now arise, in this strange scaffolding of national munition factories and hastily nationalized public services, the framework of a new economic and social order based upon national ownership and national service.—H. G. Wells.

THE ONE UNIVERSAL MAN OF THE WAR IS MARCONI

His Wireless Has Played Tremendous Part in the Struggle—England Nearly Got a German System Instead of His.

The astonishing part which Signor Marconi and his wireless system have played in this war to our advantage, and how nearly the British came to replacing Marconi by a German, is told in two remarkable interviews by Harold Begbie in the London Daily Chronicle.

Mr. Begbie saw Signor Marconi in London, and writes:

"Here is the one universal man of this world-war.

"It is odd to look at him, smoke with him, and laugh with him, reflecting that a thought of his brain is spun like a spider's web all over the bloody battlefields of Europe, all over the seas of the world, and high above the clouds. His invention, you feel, should belong to some legendary hero. It is too immense a thing for a man still living, and a young man—a young man who has moods of frivolity, who loves to laugh, and who is perfectly simple, modest and unassuming.

"He is at once a young, old man, and an old young man. He is young as youth in his moments of gaiety; and in his thought, when he is serious and reflective, he looks far older than his middle age. His face lights up at times with an almost boyish delight in a piece of fun; but it becomes at other times more than serious and more than grave, it becomes clouded and suffering and sorrowful. Few men are so many men. He loves horses and music. He loves fun and science. He is interested in literature and politics. He is fond of motoring and is somewhat of a mystic. He said to me:

"'I often think that D'Annunzio came pretty near the truth when he suggested that wireless is something of a symbol for religion. We send our thoughts through silence to one who is invisible. And a good deal of the process is still a mystery. In any case the universe is mysterious enough and the more I investigate the more I wonder.'"

The story concerning Marconi which it is well to remember in the present, is thus told by Mr. Begbie:

"If those people who raised a vulgar and disgraceful hullabaloo about the Marconi contract a few years ago had got their way—that is to say, if the government and the working classes of the country had not stood firm as a rock in the midst of a maelstrom of aristocratic and middle-class scandal, Germany might by now be the mistress of the world.

"For the great competitor of our English Marconi was a Germany company: and I can assure you that it was actually on the cards that this German company might have been brought over to London to drive Marconi out of the national business.

"Every responsible person in the Marconi Company is now a member of the British Secret Service. They know things of the highest importance. They hear every hour of the day things which must be divulged to no one. And who is there among the slanderers to raise a voice, even a whisper, in condemnation of these loyal subjects?

"Such is the initial romance of the Wireless War. We might have been in German hands for a weapon which is essential to national safety.

"And now to the war itself. If I might tell you all I know about this matter, and I know only a very little, you would be astonished and amazed; but at least I can tell you enough to show you, if you have not thought about the matter before, how romantically the invention of Marconi is interwoven into all this grim business of mutilation and slaughter on the earth," adds M. Begbie.

THE INVISIBLE BATTLE IN FLAT FLANDERS

H. Warner-Allen, official British press representative with the French army, writes: It is no easy matter in the flat plains of Flanders to reach the advanced lines. The smallest eminence gives so wide a view that the enemy's look-outs can, on a clear day, spot a motor car many miles away, and the German gunners are generally ready to welcome such a tourist. However, there is much mist in Flanders, and under its cover it is possible to reach without danger points where, in sunshine, one would surely have been bombarded. There is a certain village at an important cross-roads. Here the visitor can gather a very fair idea of the famous Flanders mud. Every cavity and depression was full of water thinly frozen over on the day I visited the lines, and one could only marvel at the magnificent patience and endurance of the men who stood for days up to the knees in what was practically a freezing mixture.

Wonderful Barbed Wire

Nowhere along the line is war more invisible than in Flanders. A misty, grey line of trees, a ruined farmhouse, a stake or two with tangled barbed wire—that is all there is to show where the enemy is lying. As for our own defences on close inspection they prove most encouraging. A master mind has been at work, taking advantage of every little hill and depression in the monotonous plain. Is there a spot where barbed wire entaglements can lie concealed from the enemy's artillery, to prove at the moment of the assault a fatal obstacle? There you will find neat rows of stakes intertwined with that deadly barrier which has done so much to change the whole system of warfare.

Occasionally the bare expanse is broken by a good-sized wood. In such flat country the cover given by trees is invaluable. Indeed, the undergrowth of a coppice is a far more powerful defence than the strongest wall of a medieval castle. Such a wood may hold a regiment, a brigade, a division—a veritable army, and its resistance could only be overcome at terrible cost.

Picturesque

To the stranger the only gay thing about the country is the windmills. Right up within the zone of fire they continue to throw up their arms with extravagant gestures to the skies, working away steadily at their daily task, despite the invader, with true Belgian persistence and obstinacy. Some of them have been mutilated by the enemy's shell, and one I saw had only a single sail aloft, which still stood upright as though defying the Germans a few hundred yards away.

In this land of dikes and canals perhaps the most interesting features are the formidable barricades which prevent the flood water from reaching the sea, and maintain the unudations which guard the line. They are such barriers as had elsewhere along the front been raised to hold back the barbarians—thousands of sandbags neatly piled one on the other, and in time of frost, when the tide is low, covered with an armor of ice. Against such tremendous obstacles no bombardment can be effective. A lucky shell may displace a score or two of sandbags, but they can be replaced without delay and the whole barrier is only the stronger.

Caring For the Wounded

Some miles behind the firing line I visited a hospital built at the cost of the wife of a British officer. Here the men who require immediate attention are nursed until they are able to be sent to the base hospitals. The doctor in charge considered that the position of his hospital ideal since, thanks to motor ambulances, the wounded could be brought down with a minimum of delay and at the same time it was far enough away to give perfect tranquility to the patients and to allow the surgeons to operate without the nerve-racking disturbance of big shells bursting near. He told us that during the early part of the war he had a mortality of between 20 and 25 per cent.

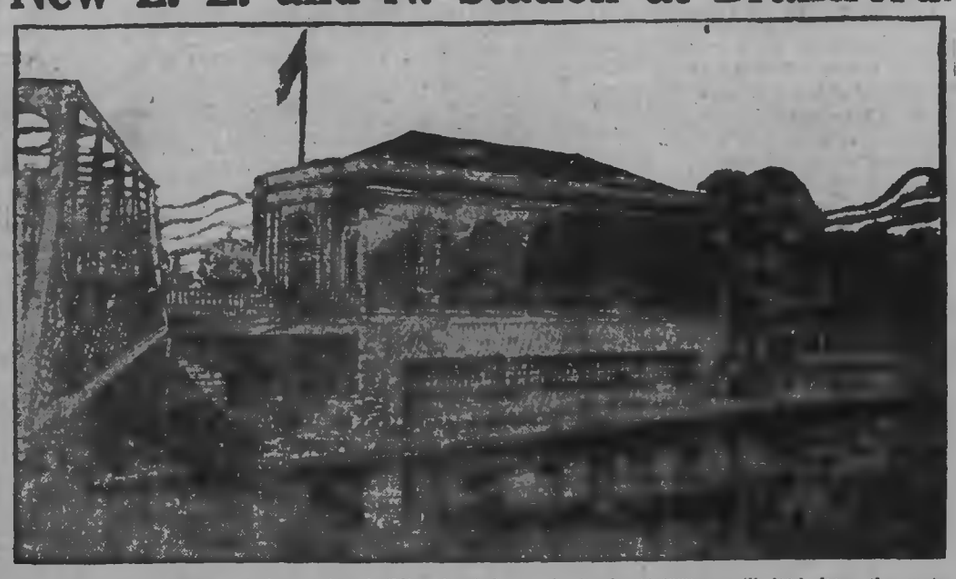
At that time he was in charge of a mobile field ambulance, and it was no small gratification to him that now, during trench warfare, he had been able to reduce the mortality to less than 6 per cent. "Yet," he said, "in trench warfare wounds are really more serious than they are in war in the open. The wounds made by grenades and trench mortars are particularly deadly, as the projectiles touch the ground before hitting the man, and therefore infect the wound."

In Flanders, as everywhere else on the French front, the doctors are loud in their praise of the stoical heroism of the French wounded, and of that indomitable French gaiety which nothing can quail either in the field or in the hospital.

No Room For Deserters

The Swiss troops on all their frontiers have been instructed to permit no deserters to pass in the future, no matter from which country they come. This step was taken to avoid diplomatic complications. The Italian government some time ago demanded the extradition of a number of soldiers who had deserted from their regiments and sought an asylum on Swiss soil. The request could not be granted under the Swiss laws, and the controversy between Italy and Switzerland became somewhat heated. The Italian government gracefully withdrew it's demand.

New L. E. and N. Station at Brantford.



The Lake Erie and Northern Railway, a subsidiary of the C.P.R., and the Brantford and Hamilton Railway, a subsidiary of the Dominion Power and Transmission Co., entered into an agreement recently to build a joint station in Brantford, Ont., and, as already stated in Canadian Railway and Marine World, the contract for its erection was let to Schultz Bros. Co., contingent on satisfactory arrangements being made with the city council and subject to the Board of Railway Commissioners' approval.

The plans as shown in the accompanying illustration provide for a one story building, located over the tracks at the southwest corner of Colburn and Water Streets, with 38 ft. frontage on Colburn St., and 76 on Water St., and tracks to pass beneath the main floor of the building, with platforms, express and baggage accommodation at the lower level. The design is New England, Colonial style; red brick, with limestone trimmings and green slate roof. The main floor, at street level, with entrance from Colburn St., is to contain a main waiting room 35 x 50 ft., women's retiring room and lavatory, men's lavatory, and ticket and telegraph offices. Two stairways will lead from the main floor to the track platforms. Baggage and express rooms and steam heating equipment will be located in a separate extension 14 x 76 ft. on the lower or track level. This extension will abut the retaining wall of Water St., and will be accessible for teams at the lower end of the street. The interior of the building will be finished in Canada ash; the walls and ceilings of main waiting room to be plastered and finished with plastered corrolin. The floors will be concrete. The lavatories will have a marble wainscot 6½ ft. high.

With Cities Like Graveyards Huns Struggling On

PETROGRAD, July 10. — The "Russkoe Slovo" publishes an account as to conditions in Germany from a neutral who has just returned from a business trip through Germany and Austria to Moscow.

Having confirmed the statements made by other travellers of the terrible ordeal which the travellers have to undergo on the frontier, he goes on to describe Bremen:

Bremen is the home of the North German Lloyd. Here are situated its head offices, chief warehouses, workshops, and numerous institutions which are connected with this great shipping company. Now this beautiful town is dead. It is like a vast churchyard.

To see how the Germans amused themselves during the war, I selected the most fashionable music hall of the town.

What surprised me most was the complete disappearnce of actresses from the programme. It appeared that women are now prohibited from acting in the music halls. All turns therefore are performed by men. They are very bad.

Panis, Circenses, Etc.

And it seems that no one goes to German music halls to amuse himself but solely to have alcoholic refreshments. I have never seen such drunkenness as I saw during my short stay in Breman. In peace time, to, one might meet in Germany, people who were tipsy, or sometimes noisy, but never dead drunk. Now I saw some officers of high rank making their appearance in public dead drunk. The streets in the evening are full of drunken people.

The best place at which to dine in Bremen has always been the "Rathauskeller." I went there to see how the Germans fare. I got fish, meat, vegetables, potatoes, even a roll, small and stale, reminding one of malt bread. But the prices had increased enormously. For a Wienerschnitzel one has to pay 3 marks 75 pfennigs, which is more than double the pre-war price.

The war bread seems humanly uneatable, but perhaps it is good for horses. It smells like hay or grass. It is being baked most abominably, perhaps not without a purpose.

So far as concerns the general economic situation the war has left undeniable traces everywhere. Not only must Germany carry on the war and find gigantic sums to cover war expenses, but she is already now spending much money for alleviating the results of the war after peace is concluded. It is a mystery where she gets the money, for money is being spent most lavisvhly.

Horses for Future Use.

For instance, Germany, foreseeing that after the war there will be a tremendous lack of horses both for the army and general work, is already buying up horses everywhere she can get them. She completely disregards the fact that from neutral countries their export is impossible. I have witnessed how this business is transacted in Holland. Probably in other neutral countries it is done in the same way.

The Germans pay without bargaining, and then make an agreement with the owner of the horse. He is to receive certain upkeep money, and must keep the horse in good order; he also has the right to use it until the date when it will be possible to deliver it to Germany. At the time of my stay in Holland already almost one-half of all the available horses had been in that way sold to Germany.

The same if not greater energy is displayed by Germans in buying up foodstuffs and other goods. They are buying in Holland enermous quantities of coffee, cocoa, rice, groats, leather and machinery. This is stocked. As according to Dutch law such goods cannot be exported, and, on the other hand, their owner, if of foreign origin, has no right to keep them in stock more than three months, the Germans have hired in various parts of Holland, big warehouses, and after the expiration of the term of three months, simply move the goods from one storing place to another. According to my information the quantity of goods thus stored by the Germans is enormous.

It is certainly impossible to ascertain even approximately what Germany is spending for that purpose. But it is evident that after the war she will have enough horses and goods to go on with, while the neutral countries will lack both.

Von Sherlock Homz.

On my return during the search and interrogation at Bentheim I was suddenly told that I was an Englishman and that my passport was false.

"What is the reason of this accusation?" I asked.

"Well, didn't you have whiskey and soda in the car this morning? Whiskey and soda are taken in the morning only by Englishmen."

On my journey back I arrived in Berlin at Easter. This weather was excellent. The streets were full of people. But at Friedrichstrasse station I found only five old motor-cars and a few old-fashioned cabs drawn by old horses. Motor-buses have stopped running and are replaced by horse trams.

I have a great number of friends in Berlin, and I have seen many of them and had long talks. I was most definitely informed that all disorders which had taken place in Berlin on account of dearness of food have been up to now dealt with without firing on the people, but disorders of the same kind in Leipzig and Dresden have resulted in a great number of killed and wounded amongst the rioters.

All are anxiously waiting for peace, but it was emphasized by everybody with whom I had an opportunity of speaking, that as long as the military power is as strong as it is now all talk of a speedy peace will be in vain.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Pretty Hands Are Attractive.

To be sure that your hands and nails are well kept you must push the cuticle, very gently, every day. Do this with a blunt edge of an orangewood stick. If the cuticle is stubborn, you should apply cold cream or vaseline to it every night. The hands may be kept white by the use of this lotion. Put into a bottle two ounces of glycerine, 2 ounces of water, 4 tablespoons of lemon juice and a few drops of carbolic acid. Shake well. After washing and drying the hands rub a little of the mixture into them. Slices of freshly cut cucumber rubbed over the hands will tend to whiten the skin.

The skin of the hands, like that of the face withers because of inadequate circulation. Renew the circulation by exercises of the hands, round and round upon the wrists. Drop them as though they were heavy weights from the shoulders. Raise and lower them rapidly from the wrists. Hands are overworked. We give them too much work to do by making meaningless gestures. Don't gesticulate much. But when you do let every gesture mean something. Let the gestures be free and large, from the shoulders, not from the elbows.

Not to Blame if They Forgot.—To the average Scottish church goer the minister who reads his sermon is a weak sort of preacher. In a Highland village the minister was always offending in this respect. At last a deputation of his congregation waited on him to point out that they would prefer him to preach without reading every word from a manuscript. "Ah, my friends," he said sadly, "I must apologize; but I have a bad memory. If I had not it in writing I should forget what I have to say." "Weel, meenister," was the spokesman's soothing answer, "if ye canna remember yer ain discourses ye canna blame us gin we forget them."

Beatrice Redpath

ALTHOUGH Canada is still too young a nation to have a literature distinctively Canadian, she is producing to-day writers of such merit as to attract the attention of the outside world. In poetry, particularly, she has begun to blaze her own trail, such writers as Bliss Carman and C.G.D. Roberts having won recognition from all who know true inspiration. Different from these and yet even more thoroughly Canadian, for she has remained true to Montreal, is Beatrice Redpath, whose recently published volume of verse "Drawn Shutters," was described in T. P. O'Connor's well-known literary review as "coming like sunshine amid clouds, themselves noble and impressive." The poems of Mrs. Redpath are typical of the quiet dignity of Mount Royal with its stately trees, below which the world lies spread in a mysterious beauty. No name is better known in Montreal than that of Redpath, but the author of "Drawn Shutters" was born to the name of Peterson, daughter of Alexander Peterson, C.E., engineer of the C.P.R. bridge built across the St. Lawrence at Lachine in 1886, and Chief Engineer of the C.P.R. when the Ste. Annes and Vaudreuil bridges were built and the great railway bridge at Sault Ste. Marie. "One of the best railway engineers in the world," said the "New York Times" of her father. "One of the truest poets of our time," might well be said of Beatrice Redpath.

A New Sort of Ham—Two Scotswomen met in a country road near P—. One of them was carrying a queer-looking parcel, and the other asked what was in it. "Oh, it's just some ham," was the reply. "I always buy my ham from Mr. Sandy's shop in P—. My husband is rather particular and he likes Sandy's ham." The other Scotswomen said her husband was rather particular also, and she thought she might try some of the same ham. So she went off to Sandy's shop in P—. "I want some ham," she said. "What kind of ham?" the shopman asked her. "Oh, the same kind of ham that Mrs. So-and-so gets." Sandy smiled quietly, and, leaning over the counter, he whispered, "Where's your bottle?"

God Only Knew—The practical teacher taught natural history from everyday illustrations and comparisons. "Take a bear," he said. "Look at his fur." The boys had no bear to take, but they had a picture of one, and they looked at it. "His fur," the teacher went on, "is the bear's overcoat, the same as your big coats are your overcoats." "He can't take it off, though, same as we can ours said one contentious youngster. "That is true" said the teacher. "The bear cannot take off his overcoat. But why can't he take it off?" Every boy thought hard. "I think," said the contentious youth, finally, "that it is because nobody but God knows where the buttons are."—R. M.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Those who like variety will welcome this blouse, with the back extending over the front shoulders to form a fancy yoke, the fronts of the garment being gathered to it. Lace edging plays an important part in contributing an exquisite collar; the square vest effect to the fronts is unique with edging, mitred to match the collar. A double row of buttons further decorates the waist and indicates where the closing is made, and the cuffs on three-quarter sleeves show the collar treatment has been repeated. The pattern provides for long sleeves, if they are preferred. It is not necessary to give their cuffs the effect shown on the short sleeve cuff.

This pattern may be had in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. To reproduce in size 36 will require 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, 2⅝ yards of edging 4½ inches wide, or, without the edging and collar and cuff portions mitred, 2⅜ yards will be plenty.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cts to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Cantalmaisson Captured And British Make Further Progress

TEUTONS ASK BULGARS FOR HELP

LONDON, July 11.—British troops last night carried by storm the village of Contalmaison, northeast of Albert, about which violent fighting has raged since the opening of the Allied offensive. General Haig in announcing the victory reported that many German prisoners were taken.

Further east we stormed several lines of enemy trenches in Mametz Wood, added General Haig. The greater part of the wood is now in our possession.

Heavy fighting continues in Trones Wood, north of Hardecourt.

In the fighting of the last two days the French took 1,000 prisoners.

Ask Ferdinand To Come to Their Aid

Examiner Special:

ROME, July 11.—Kaiser Wilhelm and Emperor Franz Josef have sent an urgent request to Czar Ferdinand that he despatch Bulgarian troops to the Galician and Trentino fronts to help check Russian and Italian offensives, says a Swiss despatch. Ferdinand is considering it.

The Austrian losses in the recent offensive on the Trentino front and the Italian counter-offensive have totalled 150,000 men it is estimated here. The Italians already have won back nearly all the territory occupied by the Austrians in their drive through. The concentration of 2,000 guns of heavy calibre has impeded their advance.

Attacks Repulsed is Berlins Statement

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 11.—The repulse of strong British attacks on both sides of the Bapaume-Albert highway, between the Ancre and the Somme, was reported by the War Office this afternoon.

Twenty-Two Villages Have Fallen to Allies

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 11.—Twenty-two villages, all fortified to the highest degree of which the Germans are capable, have been captured by the Anglo-French armies since the great offensive of the Somme began ten days ago.

Peronne, lying barely a mile across the Somme from the French advanced lines, and the next importantp rize toward which the French are advancing, lies almost within grasp of General Foch's army.

Despatches from headquarters to-day showed that the village of Biaches, one-mile from Peronne, was captured by the French in the same dashing spirit that drove the enemy out of Dompierre, Hardecourt, and other strongly fortified points.

Dompierre with its entire first line German positions was taken in fifty minutes, and Hardecourt in only thirty-five minutes. The Germans resisted more stubbornly at Biaches, but within less than two hours the village and all its strong defensive fortifications were in the hands of the French.

German troops launched a powerful attack against the French works northeast of Verdun at four o'clock this morning after intense bombardment extending from Fleury to Chenois Wood.

East of Chenois Wood and in Fumin Wood the Germans occupied our advanced trenches, but were later thrown out by counter-attacks, the War Office stated to-day. Everywhere else the attack was checked by curtain fire.

The War Office admitted that German troops entered 200 yards of French trenches in Lorraine, east of Reillon.

Nickel for Deutchsland Bought in Market

Examiner Special:

BALTIMORE, Md., July 11.—Nickel to be shipped on the Deutschland "was bought in the open market without any restrictions" as to export, Manager Hilken said to-day. He refused to name the seller, though he indicated that it came from a source other than the International Nickel Co.

At any rate, he said, there would be no complications over the complaint.

The International Nickel Co. is the concern which gets its nickel from Ontario mines.

Britain and France Are Taking Steps

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Great Britain and France have decided to do everything in their power to prevent the United States recognizing the super-submarine Deutschland as a ship of commerce, and to prevent operation of a line of submarine freight carriers proposed by the North German Lloyd Steamship Co. This was admitted at the Embassies of the two governments here to-day.

It is pointed out that such vessels, although the Deutschland may be unarmed, are potentially warships.

Claims British Patrol Boats Were Sunk

BERLIN, July 11.—At least four and possibly five armored British patrol boats hunting submarines in the Adriatic were destroyed by Austrian cruiser Novara in an engagement off Otranto Road the Austrian Admiralty claimed to-day. All were destroyed by artillery fire. Of the crews the Novara could rescue only nine British sailors.

EVERYTHING IS IN READINESS FOR THE CELEBRATION

A BIG EVENT

Given fair weather, Mr. E. Reid, County Master of the Orange Order, will to-morrow be called upon to marshall one of the largest parades that has ever been held in Peterborough. This year, lodges will be seen here that have journeyed from a much greater distance than is usually the case. At least ten thousand Orangemen will participate in the festivities, while an equal number of visitors may be expected to be on hand to witness the celebration of the 226th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

Every effort has been put forth to handle the large crowd that will visit the city. Refreshment booths are being erected at convenient points, while extra staffs have been engaged to look after the crowds in the regular places of business.

The Orangemen upon arrival in the city will congregate at Central Park, from which point the big parade is scheduled to start shortly after dinner. It will take anywhere from two to three hours for the parade to pass a given point, so that the afternoon will be pretty well over before the Orangemen find their way back to Central Park, where a number of speeches will be delivered by local speakers.

BAKING DEMONSTRATION

Most women are, and all women should be interested in any movement that has in view the betterment of humanity. It is now an established fact that the matter of purity of good products has much to do with physical conditions. The proper mixing and baking of food stuff is likewise important. The women of Peterborough are afforded an unusual opportunity during the present week and no one should fail to take advantage of the pure food demonstrations at E. F. Mason's store.

The demonstration is conducted under the personal supervision of Mrs. Clarry Hunt, the famous food expert, from Australia. On Tuesday, July 11th, Mrs. Hunt will demonstrate ribbon cake and baking powder buns. On Wednesday, chocolate cake and orange fritters. On Thursday, Almond cake and cocoanut rocks. On Friday, Layer cake and Tea Biscuits. On Saturday, Strawberry shortcake and Banana fritters.

Mrs. Hunt uses Magic Baking Powder exclusively.

Come to Sacred Heart Social this evening. You will enjoy a good Supper and meet all your friends. Band in attendance.

DID NOT ENLIST TO PARADE FOR SAM HUGHES SAY SOLDIERS

That is the Slogan Around Borden Camp To-day---Last Night's Disturbances Were on a Large Scale---93rd Band Gives Concert in Kingston To-night---Orders and General Military News.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 11.—"We enlisted to fight Germans, not to eat black dust and parade for Sam Hughes."

You hear this all over camp this morning, especially among the West Ontario battalions, who were brought here from their own camp, and were the chief disturbers in riots last night.

Sir Sam Hughes arrived at Camp Borden at six o'clock this morning accompanied by a big staff. The Minister's private secretaries were also with him as well as many newspaper men from Ottawa and Montreal.

General Logie and staff met the party at the station.

"Don't talk about that," said the Minister quietly, when asked about the riots of last night. He would not say anything more about it.

A conference is being held this morning between the officers commanding Western Ontario battalions, Sir Sam Hughes and General Logie and his staff. There are sounds from the lines of London units which show that the trouble is not over. The conference may determine many things.

It is possible that the review may not take place at all. Workmen are repairing the extensive damage done to the administration building this morning.

Story of the Riot.

Camp Borden, Ont., July 10.—"Sand and Sam Hughes" sums up a riot which broke out here this evening among the London soldiers who had been brought to this camp against their will. Before the trouble subsided several rifle shots were fired, the headquarters was besieged and windows broken.

The immediate cause of the riot was the rushing of preparations for the big review of Sir Sam Hughes to-morrow. For the last week the ceremonial area upon which the review is to be held has been the scene of prodigious stumping, and for the past three days the men have been put through tedious rehearsals in the broiling sun, on a dusty plain, for no other purpose than to present a big eyefull of khaki for the Minister of Militia on Pine Plains.

Outbreak of the Trouble.

The trouble had been brewing since the return from the rehearsal at 2.30 and there was evidently some organization of a demonstration in force at headquarters. A reporter was returning from the station, when loud cries could be heard in the distance from the lines of the London battalions. About two thousand men formed up in a straggling way on Hughes avenue, led by men waving great sticks, and howling. Most of them had a stick, and all were shouting. Among the shouts could be heard such things as "Do we like this hole?" "No." "We can't get a wash." "We want wet canteens." "We want to go back to London." "We won't sleep and live in dust for twenty-four hours."

Col. Osborne's Efforts to Calm Men.

When the parade arrived near headquarters, Col. Mewburn and Col. Osborne appeared on the scene, and things looked dangerous. Sticks were flung at the officers. Lieut.-Col. Osborne was lifted up, and he tried to reason with the mob. The men cheered him. He told them that he had been working hard for weeks to make the camp comfortable, and if they would be patient things would soon be all right. The crowd was unconvinced and howled the Colonel down.

"We want to get out of here," shouted one man, and the whole lot went mad. "We enlisted to fight the Germans, not to eat dust!" shouted another, and they all moved off to the Headquarters building.

Here was enacted an indescribable scene. The front of the south verandah was a mass of writhing and howling men, black with dust. They climbed on the room and mounted the railway cars nearby. Officers and N.C.O.'s tried in vain for a hearing.

A good proportion of these men were from London, and they kept repeating their request to return to that city.

Gen. Logie Meets Them.

At last Brig.-Gen. Logie appeared, with a list of complaints that had been handed to him on behalf of the men. The first, he said, was that they had not been allowed water bottles on the parade rehearsal. He promised that they should have the bottles to-morrow.

"We don't want them! There'll be no parade to-morrow! We don't want to see Sam!"

"Next," said the General, "is the kick on the camp."

"That's the big kick," cried one man, and there was an uproar."

"We want to go back to London or send us overseas. We might as well die there as choke here with the dust."

"I cannot send you back, or overseas. That is for the Government," said the General.

"Sam Hughes!" was the unanimous cry, and the General could not go on. Every mention of the Government or the Minister of Militia only added powder to the fire. Cries of "Graft!" were continuous.

Riotous Proceedings.

The officers then left and held a conference. The shouting continued, windows were broken, and doors burst open at Headquarters. A band was brought up and this soothed slightly the savage breasts of the men. Tents were pulled down, and when the noise subsided many of the men went to their lines. About three hundred loitered threateningly, and the more pugnacious of them tried to force the rest for a charge. Rifles and bayonets were visible in the dark, and eight shots were fired from the lines of the 140th (London) Battalion, where the men were lined up. The eight cartridges were evidently blank. The 170th (Toronto) Battalion were called out with bayonets fixed, and

BIG VICTORY FOR THE LIBERAL CAUSE

PTE. ROBERT H. SANDYS— Of the 93rd Battalion, brother of Mrs. James Head, Montreal House, who came from Pomeroy, Ohio, U.S.A., to enlist and protect his sisters, who are all residents of Canada. He has been a resident of the U. S. A. for over 24 years and is also a citizen of the U. S. A. This ought to be some encouragemnt to the young men of Canada to protect their sisters.

Conservative Majority of 1117 Has Been Changed Into a Liberal Majority of 627—Great Rejoicing at the Result.

LOYALTY CRY FAILED

STRATFORD, July 10.—One more Provincial bye-election has gone Liberal. North Perth to-day elected Mr. F. Wellington Hay of Listowel by a majority of 627, reversing a Conservative majority of only two years ago of 1,117. The contest rivalled that of Peel, the Ontario Government making a desperate effort to save itself from the defeat that it felt would be meted out to it. The Prime Minister, Cabinet Ministers and members of the Legislature joined in defence, but from the day of the Conservative convention the Government was doomed, and the vote shows decline of confidence in the Administration. The Conservatives cannot blame their caddidate, as Mr. John A. Makins is a well-known farmer of North Easthope, who has proved his popularity there by being elected Reeve in a Liberal township.

Mr. Makins himself does not suggest that it was too big a task to support a moribund Government, but says he realized from the first that he was in a losing fight.

MR. MAKINS EXPLAINS.

To the Globe to-night he said:

"The result of the election of to-day was from a combination of the liquor interests and the temperance Liberals, coupled with the vote of the pro-Germans in the riding."

Asked if the Germans in this county were not loyal subjects, Mr. Makins replied that the result of the election did not prove this. He charged the Liberals with having canvassed the Township of Ellice with the appeal to the Germans that he as a member of the County Council had been too generous in voting money for field kitchens and machine guns.

LOYALTY CRY FAILED.

This loyalty cry of the Conservatives did not succeed. In the city of Stratford, where the population is only 10 per cent. of German origin, the Liberals made their greatest gain. In 1914 the Conservative candidate, Mr. James W. Torrance, who was responsible for the present bye-election by retiring to accept a Government position, was given a majority of 638. Mr. Hay had a majority to-day of 106.

Even in the normally Conservative township of Elma, where there is but a very small percentage of German-born, and where the Conservatives played their loyalty card the strongest, their appeal to prejudice did not gain them anything, for the Liberals there made a gain of 67.

LIBERALS LET GERMANS ALONE.

There was some gain amongst the Germans, no doubt as the result of Conservative efforts to engender hatred, but in these cases the Conservatives drove them away from

THE BIG REVIEW AT BORDEN CAMP WAS CARRIED OUT

Although Several of the Western Ontario Battalions Marched Out Sullenly and Another Riot is Threatened by Some of the Men To-Night.

SARCASTIC MUSIC

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 11. — Despite last night's rioting, the big review of thirty thousand troops before Sir Sam Hughes took place today as scheduled, except that some features were slightly curtailed.

With the exception of a few of the ring leaders, the rioters unit all turned out.

The weather was again hot and several of the Western Ontario units marched out sullenly.

Some of the men threaten another riot to-night, even if to-day passes without trouble, and some say they will march out of camp to-night.

Sir Sam formally opened the rifle ranges to-day, firing three shots while he lay down on the turf.

The big review was over shortly after 1 o'clock. The London battalions were about 300 men short on parade.

The spectators cheered the Western Ontario battalions lustily to encourage them on the march. Sir Sam sat on his horse, and his "well done boys, very good boys" could be heard repeatedly. The ambulance waggons were busy taking in those exhausted.

Sir Sam is expected to leave camp at three o'clock. Over 100 soldiers slept on verandahs in Barrie last night and have not returned to camp.

At a conference of the officers of London units and Sir Sam and Gen. Logie this morning, it is understood that no action of any kind was taken. Sir Sam addressed the officers of units before the parade. He complimented the officers on their work and spoke of the hardships the troops underwent in France. While Sir Sam was speaking one battalion band commenced to play "How Dry I Am" and another band played "Home Sweet Home" and derisive shouts from some almost drowned the voice of Sir Sam. Outside of this the parade passed off as a great military spectacle.

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1916

YES.

The Ottawa Journal thus remarks and inquires:

A French-Canadian in Chicago has eight sons enlisted to serve in Mexico. Is there anything in environment as regards patriotism?

Yes, there is a good deal in environment, and centre, too. In Canada we have the adverse influence of Nationalism expended upon the people of Quebec, an influence radiating from the Cabinet centre that holds three Nationalists — men who hold that it is no part of Canadian patriotism to fight for the defence of the Empire in part composed of Canada. Then another emanation from a centre is the indifference of the Dominion Government in the matter of recruiting—rfusig in practice to give official countenance and leading to the work of saving the Empire as represented by recruiting; and neglecting to apply what those who have a knowledge of, and take an interest in, recruiting, think is necessary—substitution of system and the adoption of some form of official registration from the hap-hazard methods that have prevaied and still prevail.

REST AND RELIGION.

The population is thinning out during the heated season, though the warmth of the weather cannot be said to cause many removals from the city. The churches are an index of what is going on. The congregations are notably smaller. Of course all the absences from the Sunday services are not due to absences from the city. The motor car is responsible for some of the vacancies in the pews and under circumstances which may not be justifiable. There are so many opportunities for joy rides during the week and during the long evenings now that the Sunday diversions will not be excusable.

The average man wants rest more than diversion. His muscles may be sore from hard work. His brain may be tired from worry and over-use. His heart may ache from a burden for which there is no balm during the stress of business engagements. He wants, or needs, to get away from the tumult and the strain and find refreshment in profound rest. The sequestered spot for this is not a thousand miles away, to reach which money and time must be spent. It can be had in a hundred places in and about the city. It may be found in the privacy of one's garden, under the shade of his own trees, and with the bloom and perfume of the flowers to soothe and satisfy. But man, busy man—and woman, busy woman—must rest somewhere, and preferably during the summer season.

The preacher who struck upon this thought yesterday struck a sympathetic chord. There were some empty pews before him, and this suggested that those who usually occupied them were off to the woods and the waters, and, amid the attractiveness of nature, recuperating, and gathering fresh strength to return to business and the activities of the hour. These were absent from their accustomed places, but on the wonders of creation they had occasion to ponder, with thoughts rising to the Creator of all things, and with a desire to offer Him gratitude and praise. Worship need not necessarily stop when one seeks the quiet of some retreat. Rest and worship are in a sense inseparably connected and they enter largely in the happy life of the individual.—Kingston Whig.

THE SUBMARINE CARGO BOAT

The German submarine Deutschland has arrived in an American port with a small but valuable cargo.

The Germans show a fine aptitude for timing their acts well. The news of the safe passage of this boat will cheer Germany when she badly needs cheering, for her affairs are in a critical state. But the journey of this submarine is more an advertisement than anything else.

Nobody has doubted that a submarine could cross the ocean, and Britain could have sent one to Halifax or New York any time during the six months since the German intention of doing so was announced. Perhaps it would have been good business to have done so, and no doubt it would have been done if Britain had possessed a publicity department and if she attached as much importance to advertising as do the Germans and Americans. But John Bull rather makes a merit of the fact that he "doesn't advertise."

Britain does not need to avoid the surface of the sea in shipping goods across the ocean. When the Germans hail with delight the success of this underwater boat they admit completely the hollowness of their claim that they accomplished anything in the battle of Jutland. The German ship must still keep off the surface of the seas. This vessel, being able to grope its way through the depths—coming up for air now and then, but ready to sink in two minutes if a British flag is seen anywhere along the horizon—was able to elude capture and reach the American coast. But it may have less luck in returning, and it is the cargo it will try to carry back that Britain will most desire to intercept.—Toronto Star.

THE RESULT IN NORTH PERTH.

Mr. Wellington Hay's signal victory in North Perth proves that on its general record the Hearst Government has ceased to hold the confidence of the people of Ontario. The constituency, in both Provincial and Dominion contests, is normally Conservative by about 300 majority. It went Liberal in the Federal election of 1908 by 41, but in the Provincial election of the same year, when Mr. Hay was the Liberal candidate against Mr. Torrance, the sitting member, the Conservative majority was 266. This was increased in 1911 to 372 and in 1914 to 1,117, when a third candidate intervened, and Liberals lost heavily on the prohibition issue.

What has brought about the extraordinary change during the past two years? The apologists for the Hearst Government declare that the action of the Government in passing a temporary prohibitory law has alienated anti-prohibition Conservatives and brought no compensating support from friends of prohibition who formerly voted Liberal. The obvious answer to this explanation is that Liberals could hardly be expected to vote against their own leader and their own candidate, whose policy is that of permanent abolition of the bar, in favour of the candidate of a party which only a few months ago was in close alliance with the liquor interests and which may be again when the question of the repeal of the temporary prohibitory law comes before the electors three years hence. There has been no "betrayal" of the Hearst Government by Liberal temperance electors, because they never agreed either explicitly or implicitly to support the candidates of the Government. Mr. Hay and those who assisted him in North Perth have stated plainly that the liquor interests have nothing to hope for from him, and that he stands squarely on the Rowell platform of the permanent closing of the saloon in Ontario. In face of this declaration, a circular letter issued by Mr. G. A. Warburton of the Committee of One Hundred to the electors of North Perth on the eve of the election betrays a very curious twist of judgment. Speaking, not for the committee, which refused to interfere between the parties in a case where both candidates were acceptable to temperance electors, but for himself, Mr. Warburton said:

"I have been credibly informed that the liquor interests of Ontario have determined to beat the Conservative candidate in the North Perth bye-election. Those who know Mr. Rowell are sure that he would not be a party to any alliance with the liquor interests, but if I lived in North Perth I would try to discover whether it is true that the liquor vote is going to the Liberal candidate. If I found it to be so, or believed it to be so, I would vote for the Conservative candidate. Apparently both candidates are personally admirable men and both are in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act. But the situation seems to be this: The liquor interests are out to hit the Government, and especially the Premier, as hard a blow as they can. They are using the Liberal party and its candidate as a club, whether with the consent of that party or not, hardly seems to be to matter much."

The temperance electors of North Perth refused to be led away by Mr. Warburton's sophistry. They knew that Mr. Hay was as good a temperance man as Mr. Makins, that Mr. Rowell was an even more tried and tested temperance reformer than Premier Hearst, and they decided that it would be a most unjust proceeding to vote against the candidate of the Liberal party, which had done the hard pioneering work for prohibitory legislation, and to cast their votes for the candidate of the party which had taken the issue up when the state of public opinion was such that it was no longer possible to ignore it.

Mr. Hay's election is no more a triumph for the liquor interests than Mr. Makins' election would have been a triumph for prohibition. The truth is that Ontario is tiring of the sort of Government that is provided from Queen's Park, and is turning toward Mr. Rowell as the ablest man in the public life of the Province. Ever since the death of Sir James Whitney this tendency has been marked. No other meaning could be read into the bye-election of 1914 in West Hamilton, when a Conservative majority of 1,411 in June was reduced to 36 in November. In Dundas, when a successor to Sir James was elected, the Conservative majority of 673 shrank to 62.

In Peel, where Mr. Fallis' horse-trading methods alienated hundreds of Conservative electors, a Conservative majority of 697 in June, 1914, was changed to a Liberal majority of 305 in February, 1916. North Perth is but another example of a tendency that was clearly marked long before any breach occurred between the liquor interests and the Governments and when the reason advanced by Conservatives for the turnover in North Perth was not operative. Ontario, by these remarkable reversals of majorities, is trying to wake the Seven Sleepers of Queen's Park.

A FRENCH SOLDIER'S DIARY

(Copied From a Letter From the Front.)

Mobilized at the beginning of the war, he laid down his pen and went off with many of his comrades of the press to fight for his country. In an engagement in Lorraine he was badly wounded and invalided out of the army. During his convalescence he collected his campaigning souvenirs, and these he has now published in the form of a very readable soldier's diary.

Here are some extracts:

Company parade on the Aisne The Lieutenant speaks:

"It is not your officer, but your comrade who has summoned you to meet him. Above the gratto lie four Englishmen who were killed last month. I know that on 'All Saints' day you would not have their graves appears to be abandoned. Get some wreaths and flowers, and we will take them to those who died in defending our soil."

The men filed off in silence and disappeared in the wood. In an hour they returned with several beautiful wreaths of ivy and holly. In a garden the Germans had forgotten to devastate, they had found chrysanthemums. And the tombs, marked only by the crosses round which the day before shells had been bursting, were transformed into graves as pretty as in a country cemetery. The section shouldered arms and the entire company ranged itself on the crest. The ceremony was a simple one. Our lieutenant paid a tribute to our unknown brothers who had fallen in France.

We cried, "Vive l'Angleterre!" The picket presented arms, and then each one returned to his post. The dead who lie there are: Lieut. B. MacGuire, and Soldiers H. C. Doxer, R. Byrne and Ford, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

Varlet, the cook, went down to the village to make soup. He took with him the two dishes and the section's kettle. An instant later he returned furious and dishevelled, with empty hands. "Well, then, what about the soup?" Varlet shouted. "D—— the soup! You'll have to tighten your belts this time. A Jack Johnson has fallen on the kitchen,' Varlet relates how he heard the whistling of the shell and knew that it was for him. He had only time to throw himself on the ground and dive into a dog kennel. "When the explosion came," he explained, "I was only half way into the kennel. The dog prevented me from going farther. Good-bye to our dinner, good-bye to the plates and the mess kettle.

Crossing Paris before the battle of the Marne. As we marched through the streets in company formation, our rifles on our shoulders, on our way to Gare St. Lazare, the men hailed the taxi chauffeurs, "Hey, chauffeur! Will you take a message to my wife or mother or sister? Such and such a street and such a number. Bring you as quick as you can to Gare St. Lazare." "Right you are!"

And the chauffeur was off. Half an hour later he brought back all the family, and more than once while they were embracing and caressing one another he discreetly withdrew, without his fare.

Encamped in an abandoned saw mill. While we were doing ourselves very well at dinner there was a knock at the door. A straggler had lost his way and was in search of food and shelter. We asked him to join us. When he saw the table his face broke into one large smile.

"I'm in luck," he said.

The Lieutenant filled up his plate and poured him out a glass of wine. With his mouth full the stranger said:

"Merci, M. Roberty."

"What! You know me?"

"Rather, and you too" — and he pointed at me. "I was a waiter at Lavenie's. The last time I served you was at luncheon the day after mobilization."

Strangely moved, we shook hands with him all round.

"Excuse me, old chap," said the Lieutenant, "I did not recognize you."

He excused him.

"Keep your seat," added the Lieutenant, "I'll wait on you this time."

When dinner was over we gave our best corner in the straw to our friend the waiter.

At the battle of Soissons. "In Colonne par Leux, en Avant!" ("In file! Forward.) Hardly had we started out in the direction of Bucy, when we were saluted by a shell, then two shells, and then three. They had got our range. At the first houses in Bucy artillerymen, sabre and revolver in hand, cry to us:

"Don't go that way! The Germans are at the Crony refinery.

"What news?" we shout.

He made a grimace and says nothing. Evidently there is a stiff fight on. The section climbs towards the trenches. Half way up the hill we meet a few men and a lieutenant from another reigment. They look haggart and don't seem to know where they are.

"Where are you going?' questions our lieutenant.

"I haven't the least idea,' replies the other. "This is all that remains of my company. We have just been blown up by a mine."

On we go, climbing continually. I have had enough of it. Still I keep on, supported by Charensac, the big Auvergnat. The slope is steep and muddy. I must jettison some of my provisions. Taking from my sack a a tin of stew and another of lobster, I mechanically offer them to Charensac. To my astonishment he shakes his head. He does not want them. I throw the tins away, and Charensac and I climb on sighing heavily. At the summit we bear off along a sunken path, with mud up to our knees. My section must pass in front of a firing battery. Our lieutenant politely remarks to the artillery officer that it would perhaps be prudent to interrupt the fire in order to avoid accidents. The captain smiles disdainfully.

"Stop firing to let the infantry pass!" he explains with scorn.

We turn into a communication trench and pass under the muzzles of the battery. Having organized our positions we settle down to rest, plentifully sprinkled by German shrapnel and high explosives. Suddenly Charensac creeps to my side. He has my lobster and my stew. "It would have broken my heart," said the thrifty Anvergnat, "to have left them behind." At the risk of his life he had gone back and fetched them. And, to his credit be it said, he would not hear of it when I insisted on making him a present of them.

Liquor Question To Be Big Issue in Michigan Fight

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—The battle between the wet and dry forces in Michigan promises to have a far-reaching effect in the fortunes of candidates in both parties.

The filing of a petition with 75,000 dry signatures, requesting that the issue be put up to the people of Michigan at the November elections, was the opening gun of a campaign which bids fair to make the old time politicians reminiscent.

That the wet element is thoroughly aroused over the seriousness of the situation to their cause is evidenced by increased activity in securing speakers and candidates who possess liberal views. It is stated that State Senator James Murtha of Detroit was offered $2,500 for a single speech in advocacy of the wet cause.

Murtha to Manage Wets.

Murtha, who is an orator and one of the strongest men in the Democratic party, has been quoted as being anxious to run as a gubernatorial candidate on a straight wet platform, dumfounded liquor leaders by declining the offer and criticising the manner in which their campaign has been conducted. It is now said the Detroit senator will become manager of the wet campaign in Michigan.

His acceptance as leader of the wet forces brings disappointment to Democratic party leaders, who had picked him to run for the governorship in place of Governor Ferris, should the latter adhere to his determination not to become a candidate for a third term.

Surprise is expressed over the small number of candidates who have filed petitions for various offices thus far. While July 20 is the last day on which petitions can be filed, the applicants are far behind numerically compared to other years.

Sleeper Is Wide Awake.

A. E. Sleeper of Bad Axe, Republican candidate for goverpor, has turned a clever campaigning stunt on his rivals. Headquarters have been established at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, and all Michigan visitors are immediately tagged and hurried to the Sleeper booth to sign his petition. This move has the double barreled object of securing many names on Sleeper's petition and getting in touch with voters.

This invasion of Frank B. Leland's territory naturally does not make a hit with the supporters of Detroit's candidate for governor, and his friends are devising ways and means to counteract Sleeper's action by making a raid on the Thumb, where the latter enjoys his greatest popularity.

Rumour has it that Mayor Oscar B. Marx of Detroit is to be an eleventh hour candidate for governor as a standard bearer of the liberal element in the Republican party. Marx has designs on the position, but is inclined to bide his time for a couple of years, so he can serve another term as mayor of the metropolis.

Greco-Bulgarian Intrigues Have Tobacco Land Behind Kavala as Their Background

LONDON, July 10.—The deep mystery enveloping the political attitude of Greece for many months, and the energetic measures recently taken by the Allies against Greece, forcing her to demobolization, is about to be cleared up. The Italian censor has allowed the news of the situation which forms the back-ground of the extraordinary intrigues which for more than a year has mystified all the nations, belligerent and neutral alike, to become public.

Secret agreements between Greece and Austria, disputes and threats between the Allied Powers, Austria and Bulgaria, and a recent secret agreement between Bulgaria and Greece, all are part of this amazing background.

An interesting consequence of the agreements just forced upon Greece by the Allies is that the Franco-British expedition at Salonica now will expect active warfare with the Bulgarians. Under the pre-existing conditions the Bulgarians, it is declared, refused to fight the French and British troops.

It is now known that Germany urged upon Bulgaria the necessity of making an attack on the Allies at Salonica six months ago, when the latter were poorly prepared. The reply of Bulgaria was that her campaign was limited to Macedonia and to operations incidental to the accomplishment of her purposes in that region, and that she would not be moved from her resolution not to expand her campaign.

Tobacco is at the bottom of Bulgaria's war. History may give to the Balkan end of the present war the name now commonly used regarding it in the southeast of Europe, "the tobacco war." Tobacco—the article known as "fine Egyptian" or "Turkish" tobacco, which in reality is now Greek tobacco—has been the cause of Bulgaria joining the Central Powers, and the cause, therefore, of the overrunning of Serbia, of the maintenance by Greece of her neutrality, of the failure of the Gallipoli expedition and of the prolonging of a great European conflict.

Italy, among the greater Allies, is the one most keenly concerned in the Balkan end of the conflict. Had Italy's voice been heard at the time when the treaty of Bucharest was signed, in 1913, Bulgaria, the nation which had won the war against Turkey for the greater benefit of others and which had lost the succeeding war which she fought with her old allies, would have received better treatment. The Macedonia question, in both its Serbian and Greek ends, would have been more justly decided and Bulgaria would have received more of the precious Turkish tobacco lands and a better outlet to the Aegean Sea.

ITALIAN WATCHFULNESS.

It was the watchfulness of the Italian agents in the Balkans which alone prevented the Allies from being entirely hoodwinked by Greece and Bulgaria. When recently the Bulgarians started to invade Greece it was Italy which had the solution to the mystery of the quiet and orderly surrender of Greek forts to the Bulgarians, and it was Italy which demanded that the Allies take immediate action against Greece.

Italian agents are said to have obtained proof of the existence of agreements between Greece and Bulgaria, whereby the latter, in consideration for assistance to Greece in Albania, was to be allowed peaceful occupation of former Turkish territory, which Greece had obtained through the Bucharest treaty.

The Bulgarian advance on Serres, Drama and Cavallo constitutes in reality not the oriental development of the war of the Teutonic empires against the Allies but merely an incident of the Balkanic troubles, a consequence of the deplorable peace of Bucharest, says the Italian political authority, Signor Tedeschi. In an article in the Tribuna of Rome he appeals to the censor, to allow the facts in the case as he wishes to narrate them to be revealed since accurate information on the matter can have only a beneficent result, and can serve to upset the calculations of German press agencies, which attempt to alarm the people of the Allied nations with the statement that the Bulgarian and Teutonic operations in the southeast of Europe are a new and serious onslaught against the armed forces of the Allies and comparable with the German assault at Verdun, and with the Austrian attacks in the Trentino.

"This Bulgarian advance," Signor Tedeschi says, "is in a measure a local fact and its interest was regarded as limited to the two parties directly in question until the Allies took action to nullify the arrangement which Greece and Bulgaria had made among themselves.

"In Italy and on our side of it the military experts have been discussing the question as to whether the eventual occupation of the zone of Serres, Drama and Cavallo would constitute a new threat against Salonica. In general they have reached the conclusion that Bulgarian action, action against Cavallo would be inspired by a great strategic move which had Salonica as its objective, and that it would be part only of vast simultaneous movements from the direction of Monastir. In reality, however, all the indications heretofore revealed entirely different purposes on the part of the Teutonic powrs.

The best German troops from the Balkanic sector are now in France or in Russia. The Bulgarians always admitted even when their German and Austrian allies were treating them in the most flattering fashion, that the Bulgarian military programme should consider itself as substantially realized with the occupation of Macedonia.

Bulgaria's Aims.

"It is no longer a mystery that, to the most seductive invitations to attacks Salonika months ago when Salonika was not the formidable base it is to-day, the Bulgarian General Staff replied with a positive refusal. The reasons which justified the refusal continued to be equally positive.

"For Bulgaria the vital problem, once she occupied Macedonia, was to succeed in remaining there despite the events of the morrow, whatever they might be. The diplomatic arrangements which Tsar Ferdinand has been meditating in order to succeed in this purpose will be efficacious only if Bulgaria has pledges in hand with which she can negotiate and soldiers to give weight to her end of the argument. There is no motive of any mysterious kind why Bulgaria should not deviate from the constant purpose she has had in aiming exclusively at Bulgaria's interest.

"But there is another side of the problem to be considered. The military critics, even though they admit that the Bulgarian advance on Cavallo does not include the purpose of an offensive on Salonika, still seem to think that this operation may be determined by a purpose of preventing an allied offensive through the Balkans toward the plains of Adrianople or Philippoli.

"Without knowing the special intention of the French general Sarrail, who is in command of the allied forces at Salonika, it is of course impossible to make any positive statement in this regard. Common good sense, however, would indicate that if the Allies really proposed an attack toward the chief cities of Bulgaria they would have begun by landing their expeditionary force at Kavala, which is the indispensable base for the direct line through which such an attack must be made. Salonika, on the other hand, may always be considered as a formidable thorn in the side of the Bulgarian enemy. A permanent war like menace, its function in the general economy of the war is already indicated by the very numerous forces which it keeps in activity all around it. Constituting a concrete demonstration of power and of warlike activity on the part of the Allies from the political point of view, the Salonika camp has been the most efficacious restraining force for all those Balkanic factors which would line up against them if General Sarrail and his army were elsewhere.

The Kavala Question.

"With regard to the future, and considering that the German assertion that while Verdun is the right wing of a great Teutonic fighting force and the north of Italy its centre, the forces of the King of Bulgaria constitute the left wing is not to be taken too seriously, it may be said that the Allies regard the Greco-Bulgarian problem as a distinctively eastern European one which affects Italy more than any of the other leading Powers. The Kavala question is likely to loom up as one of the complicated ones of coming months and possibly years.

"At Kavala, before the war of 1912, there lived very many Turks, many Greeks and some Bulgarians. The Turkish problem was quickly solved. Not a great many of the Sultan's subjects survived the triumphal entry of the Bulgarian chiefs into Kavala, and still fewer of them were left when King Constantine had himself photographed in a memorable attitude on the ruins of the seaport won to Greece. After that photograph was taken the Bulgarians also disappeared from the city. In the country, however, many thousands of Turks remained and really constituted the basis of the population. They adapted themselves quietly to their new rulers, happy only if their masters would allow them to live and work in peace.

"The zone of Serres, Drama and Kaval was acrimoniously contested by Greece and Bulgaria at the conference of Bucharest. The good offices of the German Emperor were used in favour of his Greece relative, and the sentimental affection of France for Greece also aided in having the rich gift given to the latter country. Venizelos himself declared on that occasion that the gift was a unique one.

Look over your shelves Mr. Merchant

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away, —are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead—and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

Any Woman's Struggle For Good Health Quickly Rewarded

A SIMPLE HOME TREATMENT NOW ADVOCATED THAT GIVES FINE RESULTS.

When a woman's face grows haggard and pale, when she is tired all day and ready to cry when night comes, she ought to know something is wrong.

Putting off only make matters worse. The best advice we can give any sickly woman is to test out the following treatment.

At the close of every meal, with a sip or two of water, take two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This seems to be the best thing going for folks that are tired out, run-down and in need of a strengthening, building-up medicine.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

By strengthening digestion it forms an abundance of rich, red blood—this gives good colour.

By perfecting assimilation, Ferrozone supplies nutrition—this gives strength, vim, stability.

Elimination is assured because Ferrozone quickens the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels—this guarantees the maintenance of vigorous health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigor, endurance — not a person who is weak, nervous, or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't receive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. Try it yourself—sold everywhere in 50 cent boxes, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Don't fail to spend this evening at Sacred Heart Social. Supper, Music and various attractions.

OUTINGS WITH THE OUTFITTERS

[1] A Group of Guides. [2] Tieing the Diamond Hitch. [3] Where the Camp Fire Blazes. [4] Camping at foot of Mt. Assiniboine. [5] Lake Louise

WHO and what is an Outfitter? The real genuine article is a mountain man: guide, philosopher, friend, cook, lumber jack, bridge-builder, broncho buster, hunter—all found under the one suit of clothes.

He is a comparatively new type in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, representing a new profession. You'll find him at every C.P.R. tourist point in the mountains, at your service for a modest fee just to keep the pot boiling. You can buy more good fellowship and more undiluted happiness and health in this way than in any other yet invented, I know, for I've tried it out many a time.

May I introduce you to a sample Outfitter, at Field, say, or it might as easily be Glacier or Lake Louise or Banff. A gang of tenderfeet have arranged for a trip through the Yoho Valley. The Imperial Limited having dumped us on the platform, dunnage bags and all, it does not take long for Mr. Outfitter to give us welcome, with a grip of the hand that says: "I'll see you through." From across the Kicking Horse River comes a procession of ponies—our cavalcade no less, with a couple of trusties to assist the boss. So we are sorted out to our mounts, as we eye each other with mutual suspicion. I don't like the look in the eye of Nebuchanezar (Neb. for short), but we hit it off fairly well on the trail. So we're off, single file, a truly wonderful procession of assorted humans. Isn't it jolly just to be in God's garden in the open air, to have all creation to wander in, to be hitting the trail to wonderlands beyond, while giant peaks, like Stephen and Cathedral, Field and Burgess, look down upon us midgets from their towering peaks

But it is of the Outfitter I want to write. It is worth the whole price of admission to watch him do things and handle situations, to corral a wandering horse, and quiet a refractory one, to be everywhere at the same time, to help the girl from Chicago and the matron from Montreal, and the male tenderfeet from elsewheres in dismounting and mounting, and in guiding their mounts through turbulent streams and tangley woods.

No less adaptive are they in the camp. They can handle axe or gun as adeptly as the reins of a broncho. They can fell a tree across a brawling stream with unerring accuracy, or cut a way through a maze of underbrush or Devil's Clubs.

So the tents were well pitched and ready, with the nicest of beds made of odorous branches. All one had to do was to spread his blankets, make a human roll of himself and then journey to Slumber Land, regardless of disturbing gophers or porcupines. But it is as a cook that the Outfitter shines most brightly. The elaborate many-coursed meal at a C.P.R. hotel tasted no better—and they taste well—than the four-course meal Bill served at a quick lunch speed, with unlimited reserves in the end of his little cookery tent. Everything from mush to bannock and tea was on tap, at and in between meals and at bed time.

And then the happy times around the camp fire revealed the Outfitter in a new role—that of a story-teller of rare quality, a raconteur, too. Indeed the trail trip as a whole showed Bill up to be a Gentleman, a Benefactor, and a Philanthropist. So there!

DOCTORS AT LOSS TO DEFINE BLINDNESS

A definition of blindness is not so easy to formulate as one would suppose, inasmuch as the medical profession seems to be more or less puzzled over it. It is obvious from the comments made by the editor of the New York Medical Journal under the caption, "What Is Blindness?" that the physicians are by no means certain just what conditions should be embraced under this term.

"The average practitioner," he writes, "even the average layman, would be astonished to learn that he cannot define blindness offhand; yet there was once a notable discussion on the point at a meeting of the ophthalmological section of the Royal Society of Medicine. (Proceedings January, 1915). Harold Grimsdale, admitting that total blindness was easily defined, offered several definitions of simple blindness with a view of guiding legislation on the subject.

"Was a child blind who could not read an ordinary textbook? In some trades vision of 6-12 was as good as 6-6, but a watchmaker should not only have 6-6, but the power of accommodation as well; hence few watchmakers remained in the trade after the age of fifty years.

"Grimsdale submitted a definition of a blind child as one whose corrected vision was less than 6-60. But he thought there should be special schools for those whose vision was not more than 6-24; as to adults, he would accept any one with corrected vision of less than 3-60 as eligible for a pension. Between these limits, however, there was work for specialists in individual cases.

"William C. Rockliffe would divide the so-called blind of all ages into: 1. blind; two, partially blind or with defective vision; and include as blind, a, those with no perception of light; b, those unable to differentiate; and, c, those able to differentiate, but at a less distance than three feet; as partially blind, those able to differentiate beyond three feet, but with less acuity of vision than 6-60.

"Angus MacGillivray divided so-called blind people into three classes: 1. Totally blind, those who do not possess any perception of light. 2. Practically blind, those who possess perception of light, but are unable to take part in any industrial occupation owing to marked impairment of vision. 3. Partially blind, those whose vision is such as to preclude them from obtaining employment in an ordinary workshop, but also such as to disqualify them for admission to an institution for the blind on equal terms with those totally or practically blind. With slight verbal changes these divisions applied also to children.

"N. Bishop Harman was opposed to an exact definition of blindness because the clever word jugglers of Parliament could fall foul of it, and would cite cases 'well known to themselves' which would have to be excluded from the embrace of this 'unconscionable definite.' He would have each adult case examined individually by two qualified practitioners personally acquainted with the sufferer. As to children, the present definition of blindness, sanctioned as it was by custom, was sufficient.

"F. Richardson Cross cited the practice of census takers in the United States, who entered as 'blind' people who could not read a book even with the aid of glasses, although actually they might have some power of sight. The danger of definition was that, if the State gave aid to the blind, many people who desired to live easily without work would make a claim for assistance, while the independent, spirited workman would accept any position rather than go to an institution.

"W. T. Holmes Spicer hoped that a good definition would be found, one for the benefit of ophthalmological experts, however, and not for lay members of a county council.

"The President of the section, Priestley Smith, reminded his colleagues that their opinion had not yet been asked, but he hoped that the authorities would appeal to them rather than to some individual and permit them to send an authorized representative—Mr. Grimsdale for example—in whom they all had perfect confidence.

"We note, therefore, that both in Great Britain and in the United States the word 'blind' does not always mean what it seems to mean; a more or less useful eye, with good perception of light, may be classified as blind."

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

RED CROSS WANTS ADDRESSES AND NAMES OF PRISONERS IN GERMANY

The Red Cross desires to obtain a complete list of Peterborough soldiers who are prisoners in Germany. It is their aim to have parcels of food and other comforts sent regularly to every man from this city who has fallen into the Germans' hands, and they therefore appeal to the relatives of the men to supply their names, number, rank and the German camp at which they are interned. Will the relatives or friends of local prisoners kindly supply this information to Mrs. T. F. Matthews or leave it at the Examiner Office. When it is remembered that the prisoners in Germany are to a considerable extent dependent upon the parcels they receive, there should be no delay in immediately forwarding the desired information.

Beware of Fake Baking Powder Tests

("THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute quantities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

Nine Special Trains Will Bring Crowds For The 12th

An idea of the traffic the G.T.R. will carry into and out of Peterborough to-morrow is conveyed by the following schedule of arrivals and departures:

7.55 a.m., regular from Lindsay.
8.00 a.m., regular from Campbellford.
8.10 a.m., regular from Port Hope.
8.30 a.m., special from Campbellford; departs at 7 p.m.
8.35 a.m., special from Cobourg; departs at 6.30 p.m.
9.50 a.m., regular from Lakefield.
10.15 a.m., special from Fenelon Falls; departs at 5.50 p.m.
10.20 a.m., special from Franklin; departs at 4.35.
10.45 a.m., special from Lindsay; departs at 4.30 p.m.
11.05 a.m., special from Raven Lake; departs at 5 p.m., going through to Coboconk.
11.40 a.m., regular from Lindsay.
12.10 p.m., regular from Port Hope.

C. P. R. SPECIALS.

In addition to the regular morning trains the C.P.R. has the following specials:

9.00 a.m., from Sulphide, Tweed, Havelock, etc.
10 a.m., from Burkefon, Pontypool, Cavanville.
10.20 a.m., from Lindsay, via Port McNicholl line.

"FIRST WIN, THEN TALK" EDICT NOT ACCEPPTED

BERLIN, July 11.—The recent appeal of the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, in the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung for less discussion and criticism and more concentration on the war, or, briefly "first win, then talk," has unloosed a flood of discussion for and against the Chancellor.

The Conservatives declare that the Chancellor is demanding the nation's blind confidence without giving the people an insight into his plans, and criticize "the paralyzing silence" of Wilhelmstrasse. They assert that the nation is still without an adequate definition of the great purpose of the war.

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg now returns to the charge in the Nord Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, denying that he is asking for any such blind confidence. He refers to his speeches in the Reichstag, in which he outlined the aims of the war. In this connection, the Chantellor asks: "Is it not a great purpose to free from foreign control the gates of approach into the heart of Germany?"

REFLECTIONS OF AN OLD TIMER

Early this morning have nothing in particular to do and attracted by the sunny atmosphere I strolled down to the George street wharf and watched one of our passenger steamers steaming up and starting on its long hike up the Kawartha lakes and the winding Scugog to Lindsay. It is remarkable how the tastes and inclinations of the local excursionist have changed in the past ten of fifteen years. Years ago when the old Wolfe street wharf was in its glory, nothing would satisfy the tourist and holidayer but a trip down the Otonabee to Jubilee. The dinner basket was packed and labelled "Jubilee" or some other point down stream. In those days the old Calcutt Line of Steamer carried down crowds the like of which are not seen or heard of to-day.

Those were the palmy days along the old Otonabee, the golden age of Peterborough's picnic history. Those times are past, however.

The trend of traffic of late years has been up stream and the Kawartha Lakes have usurped the Otonabee in the affections of the tourist. Stoney Lake has now a summer population which Rice Lake could never boast of and the water route connecting Peterborough with her little sister Lindsay has also been a great factor in the popularity of the Kawartha system of Lakes. The Railway accommodation offered to the Stoney Lake visitor is also a strong incentive for the tourist to seek the Northern Lake with the many islands in preference to the big inland lake to the south.

The familiar taunts of yesterday are the desert wastes of to-day and spots down the river and along Rice Lake which were once frequented by joyous picnickers have long since given way to the tall grass and the "no trespassing" signs.

Norwood once a real live little borough has now settled down to rural repose and Idyll Wyld once the delight of the excursionists and upon which many a steamer load of holidayers have lounged is now private property.

It was even thus and summer resorts like every fad must naturally be expected to come and go and to use and fall in the fickle estimation of the pleasure seeking public. These reflections must constitute the sole solace of the old timer as he sails down the beautiful Otonabee these bright sunny days of early summer and cogitates on the glory of the past.

"What has been and might have been,
And Who was changed and who was dead."

their own party. The Liberals did not make the slightest attempt to win over this vote. The Globe is informed on the best of authority that they did not have a single canvasses in Ellice or in any other German-speaking community.

As for Ellice, specifically metioned by the Conservative candidate, to-day the largest Liberal majorities were secured in the two polls where English-speaking voters predominate. Moreover, in contrast to the Liberals declining to appeal to any prejudices, the Conservative forces were augmented for the contest by Messrs. John Bennewiss, M.P.P. for South Perth, and Henry Eilber, M.P.P. for South Huron though where or how they worked the Liberals do not know.

REACTION ON LOYALTY CRY.

The only visible effect of the Conservative loyalty cry was a reaction. In their campagin material they informed the electorate that the election of the Liberal would mean a slam at the British cause. They especially lauded Sir Sam Hughes, so Sir Sam may take some of the blame today, especially as the soldier vote went largely against him.

PROHIBITION CRY ALSO.

Prohibition was the Conservatives' only other cry. True, Hon. I. B. Lucas stated at the first meeting that bilingualism was to be the issue, and he only issue. But the party failed in that deception of the public, and abandoned the bilingual cry. So it was they fell back upon prohibition, imagining that the Liberals of temperace principles could forget their stand in 1914. The Liberals had even more recent reasons to remember the Conservatives and what they intended to do for temperance in Stratford The seven members of the City Council who fried to block the local option by-law in this city this very year were seven Conservatives who have been talking prohibition during the past few days.

CONSERVATIVES STAYED AT HOME.

On the other hand, Mr. Hay made himself very clear as to his attitudes which was that he stood absolutely on Mr. Rowell's platform. The result was that, while Mr. Hay polled the normal Liberal vote in Stratford today, enough Conservatives stayed at home to allow their party to be badly beaten. In 1908 the Liberal candidate Mr. Hay, polled 1,557 votes, in 1911 Mr. Blown 1,214, and in 1914 Mr. Robertson 1,074. To-day Mr. Hay polled 1,228, so that it is evident he got just about the normal Liberal vote, though the Conservatives polled so many less that the net result was a gain of 744 for the Liberals.

NORMAL LIBERAL VOTE TOLD.

In fact the getting out of the normal Liberal vote had perhaps as much to do with the actual winning of the contest as anything else. The Conservatives relied upon the Cabinet Ministers and assistant orators of the Government, whose reputation was at stake, but the rank and file disgusted with the pretence of such an Administration, were loath to organize, though the party managers did everything possible in every section to inspire them. On the other hand, the Liberals were behind Mr. Hay to a man, and the slogan of "Hay day, July the tenth." was a rallying cry that aroused real zeal among the party.

Capt. McClellan At Borden Camp

He Points Out the Defects or Oversights Committed by Col. Low

The correspondent of the Toronto Star included the following illuminating paragraph in his news letter yesterday—"A feature in connection with this camp is the superintendent of the grounds, Capt. J. H. McClellan, to whom all the troubles in connection with the grounds are told. He rides around all day in a buggy and visits the units, finding out where improvements can be made in the accommodation."

The public has had the impression that Col. Low and his staff had established at Camp Borden a military camp that was perfection itself. Even Toronto supply houses failed to meet the exacting demands of the administrators. Notwithstanding all the thoroughness with which this camp was planned and built, Capt McClellan, driving around "all day" in his buggy, sort of a fifth wheel to it, finds room for improvement thus performing the impossible, or at least gilding gold, and at the same time Capt. Harris receives a mere gold wash of ten dollars a day.

DREW TO MENARD WHARVES

Civic Carter Swears He Carted Materials to the Work

EVIDENCE OF MORNING MUCH LIKE THAT ALREADY OFFERED.

MONTREAL, July 11.—Mr. Albaid Germain, K.C., counsel for the Menard family in the Bordeaux ward sewer investigation, now proceeding before Mr. Justice Panneton, took advantage of the cross-examination of a witness to declare that the whole affair is a "tissue of lies and calumnies" against Alderman Menard. Mr. Justice Panneton ordered him to proceed with the cross-examination of his witness. Mr. German's declaration came as a diversion in the otherwise dull proceedings this morning.

Two witnesses were in the witness box to-day, the first Emmanuel Picard, a city carter, and the second, J. B. Decelles, a city accountant, who checked the disappearance of material during the construction of the Bordeaux sewers.

Picard explained how he had been employed on the Salaberry street work and how he had carted materials to the Menard wharf.

Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city, inquired: "According to the general information to whom does the Bordeaux wharves belong"

Mr. Germain objected to this question, but Mr. Geoffrion said it was a question which facilitated his argument, and was associated with the agreement of sale entered into by Ald. Menard and his brother, Pierre, the postman, who was now according to Ald. Menard, the owner. The question was allowed, and witness replied that the general impression was that the biggest wharf, the left going down to the river, belonged to Ald. Menard.

Witness said he had transported earth and stone to the land of Aldas and Gedeon Menard, relatives of Ald. Menard, and he spoke of carting material from the sewer trenches in Valmont street to Aldas Menard's property. He said he used to make ten or twelve trips a day.

Mr. Geoffrion asked witness if he had seen any drunkenness on the Bordeaux work, but he could not give any positive information on this point.

Picard was closely cross-examined by Mr. Germain. He admitted that he was one of those who signed the request for an investigation, and later a Mr. Eugene Picard, signed the affidavit.

It ranspired that there are three Eugene Picards figuring in the case and there was much laughter in the court when it was explained that one was Eugnene Picard "pere", the second one was Eugene Picard "fils," and the third one Eugene Picard "jeune fils." Eugene Picard, Jr., is the father of the present witness.

Witness admitted, too, that he had carted earth to his own place, four or five loads during the year, he said, but each time he insisted it was under the eyes of his foreman. He said he always had the permission of his foreman, who once told him that if he wanted any advantage he had to ask Alderman Menard.

He also admitted that he had taken bundles of wood belonging to the city with, in each case, he said, he had the foreman's perimssion. His foreman at one time was Armand Major, and at another time was Antoine Deslauriers.

Mr. J. B. Decelles, city accountant, was next put into the witness box, and he was being examined at the adjournment. He produced the books of the city respecting the materials used on the building of the Bordeaux sewers, and bore out the testimony of City Engineer Mereier.

The investigation is proceeding.

Chief Thompson Attends Convention

Chief of Police Thompson has returned to the city and resumed his duties at Police Headquarters, after attending the Twelfth Annual Convention of the Chiefs of Police of the Dominion, held at Kenora, New Ontario. Chief Thompson reports this year's convention to be the most successful one held yet, both in point of attendance of Chiefs of Police and in regard to the excellence of the papers which were read relating to police duties. The local Chief of Police read a paper on "Juvenile Crime," which paper had been read at the International Convention in Toronto two years ago, but which the Convention requested to be read again owing to the subject of juvenile crime having been previously treated by the local Chief.

President—Supt. Rogers, Provincial Police, Toronto.

Vice-President—Chief Ridout, of Monkton, N.B.

Chiefs Thompson, of this city, Newton of Belleville, and McLellan of Vancouver received nominations to the Vice-Presidency, but owing to Ontario being represented in the Presidency, all retired in favour of Chief Ridout, of Monkton.

RUNAWAY "NIPPED IN THE BUD"

What came close to being a runaway was narrowly averted at the corner of Hunter and George Streets this morning when one of the horses of the Dominion Express Company broke its hame-strap and was just off to a mad tear down the main thoroughfare when two or three strong hands who saw the mishap to the steed's harness sprang on to and stopped the animal before it started on its mad career.

LAWN SOCIAL AT GILMOUR CHURCH

A strawberry festival at Gilmour Memorial church last night under the auspices of the Young Men's and Ladies' classes attracted a large attendance from the surrounding countryside. Peterborough, Bridgenorth, Selwyn, Omemee, and other centres were well represented and the concession lines converged for the occasion at the church lawn. The Salvation Army band rendered a fine programme of music and vocal solos by Miss Lillian Eastwood and Mr. Asa Huycke were much enjoyed. Appropriate speeches were delivered by Rev. Mr. McKee of Bridgenorth, Rev. Mr. Roberts of Indian River and Reeve McKee of Smith. A recitation by Master Jackson was cleverly done.

The supply of strawberries and cream was more than ample and every one enjoyed the refreshments.

Dinner and Supper At Temple on 12th

The Temple Band will be serving hot dinners at the Temple on Simcoe Street from 10 to 2 o'clock, and tea from 4.30 to 7 o'clock to-morrow for the accommodation of the crowd who will be in the city. They expect to feed at least 500. Those who patronize the Army Band at their dinner and tea will have a chance to have a good "wash up" and sit down and rest themselves in the big room especially provided for the purpose. Send your friends along to meals. They will be treated right.

Apsley Items Of Interest

APSLEY, July 11.—Pte. Willard Whitney and son Orland of the 93rd Battalion were home Monday on their farewell trip, they spent a very enjoyable evening with about fourty friends and relatives.

LAST LEAVE

Mr. Watson Parks was the guest of his brother Joseph on Sunday last.

Ptes. Roy McCauley, Herb Palmateer, Edgar and Will Parks were home on their last visit before sailing.

Mr. E. J. Gould has been to Campbellford for the past three weeks attending the funeral of his only brother Mr. Chas. Gould.

Mrs. Wm. Wilkerson of Edwards, N.Y., has been the guest of her mother Mrs. Dan Carl for the past two weeks.

The L.O.L. will walk in their own town, Apsley on July 12th.

Mr. Earl Whitmore was the guest of Mr. Percy Prouty on Monday.

We are sorry to hear of the illness of Mrs. George Wilson.

To the Editor Examiner:

Dear Editor,—I wonder if our "City Fathers" have dust in their eyes, that they cannot see the need of oil on Water street, north of Smith.

Now there is fifty per cent. more traffic on this part than from Smith St., south not even mentioning the Street Car Service.

I think it well to make the suggestion that those in power who cannot see into the needs of all its citizens, be sent to the front and their positions left open for ones more capable of seeing, that though the oil supply be short the Otonabee river still has its usual volume of water.

Are Preparing For Prohibition

County Temperance Convention Will be Held Here on Friday

The Ontario Temperance Act comes into force on the 16th of September next. It is of the utmost importance that the law shall be made an unqualified success. The Premier of the Province, Hon. W. W. Hearst, Sir George E. Foster, Mr. N. W. Rowell, and other public men have emphasized the importance of law enforcement and urged the temperance organizations to put themselves behind the officers appointed by the Government for this purpose.

With this end in view the Dominion Alliance is promoting a series of County Conventions and we have pleasure in calling upon the friends of temperance in the County of Peterborough to attend a convention to be held in the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, on Friday, July 14th, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There will also be a public meeting in the evening.

The afternoon session will be devoted to discussion regarding organization, law enforcement, hotel accommodation and such social readjustments as may arise out of the prohibitory measure. The officers for the ensuing year will also be elected. In the evening address will be given by Rev. Ben. H. Spence of Toronto, and others. Mr. H. Ruthven McDonald, Toronto's celebrated soloist, will have charge of the convention singing and will contribute solos at each session.

A Delightful Outing

The Water and Rail Trip to Lindsay Monday Was Well Attended

The steamer "Stoney Lake" left yesterday morning on her first trip this season. Through the Kawartha Lakes and Lindsay, with a good load of excursionists—about a hundred and fifty all told. Among the party were members of our best known citizens, some of whom had never been over the popular route before. The expression of delight with the trip were repititions of what has been so often said before.

All through the upper lakes the scenes was at its best. Full of charm and romatic feeling—and in some respects may be said to be a replice of the grandeur of the Scottish lochs.

The steamer arrived in Lindsay in good time to connect with a special train which had been provided for the excursionists who were then enabled to arrive home in Peterborough at 8.30.

Lad Suspected of Being a Deserter

A young lad who hails from Havelock appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of drunkenness. He pleaded guilty and was remanded until to-morrow. The lad is suspected of being a deserter from the 79th Battalion, stationed at Borden, though he claims to have been discharged by the Battalion. He will be held until to-morrow until further particulars of his case are ascertained.

MOTOR CAR DITCHED FIVE MEN INJURED

CHATHAM, July 10.—Five Wallaceburg men were injured when an automobile in which they were returning home turned turtle and plunged into an eight-foot ditch at Concession 6 on the Dover town line. The occupants were pinned under the car, and it was some time before they were released. Medical assistance was called and it was found that Joseph Jeffries' left arm was broken near the shoulder, and that the other four occupants were badly bruised and scratched. The damage to the automobile was slight.

Letter of Thanks From Her Majesty

Expresses Her Appreciation of Work Done by Lady Workers of The Empire

Another interesting letter of thanks from Her Majesty the Queen, has been received by Mrs. Angus, President of the Canadian Branch of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild. The letter which was written by Miss Annie Lawley, Hon. Secretary at headquarters in London, says:

"That Her Majesty has desired me to ask you to convey her thanks to the workers who have contributed so splendidly to this last consignment. The arrival of your cases was a great help to us at this moment, as we are sending out a large consignment of things to Mesopotamia, and many of your things have gone there. The handkerchiefs were specially welcome as I seen to have unlimited demand for them."

Her Majesty was much interested in the comfort bags from Yarmouth, and we have sent some to No. 14 General Hospital, France, to be given to some of the worst cases. It is indeed good of your workers never allowing their energy to flag, and I hope they realise how much their labors are appreciated. We have so much to be grateful for, not only to the daughters, but to the sons of Canada, who at this moment are covering themselves with glory, and one finds it difficult to express their thanks.

The following are a few extracts received from letters by the headquarters in London:

Hotel Auxiliare,
St. Germain-on-Laye.

"There is one thing which we really do need badly but I have been hesitating to suggest it as it is such an expensive want, and I do not know if the Q.M.N.G. supplies such things. Many of the poor wounded have such terrible bed sores when they come here either from the stretchers or previous bad nursing, and we have no water or air mattresses, not even the large water pillows that are such an excellent substitute. It is pitiful to see their sufferings on these hard mattresses, when one knows how comfortable they could be made. India rubber hot water bottles are also unknown here, but we have stone ones instead. Most of the garments that these patients wear are sent by the Q.M.N.G. I always look for the mark and feel proud of seeing it there."

Hospital Melun,
Seine et Marne.

"A fine hospital, having many serious cases, surgical and illness. Clothes are in great demand as the men come straight from the front with nothing."

Hospital Mixte, Fontainbleau.

Hospital No. 9, Bis,
La Chapelle, France.

"A most pathetic little hospital in a poor part of the country. Entirely run by contributions of the peasants. Patients very cheery. No garden, so they sit or lie on the roadside, or take turns in one-wheel chair. I am the second visitor they have had since the war began. They nearly went on my neck. Do be as generous as you can."

(Hospital Civil, Rue Victor Hugo 1, Montereau-fault-Yvonne.

"A visit to this hospital would melt the stoniest heart. They have practically nothing, and very serious cases, and receive no outside help."

Many Guests At Viamede

Two Americans Are Wounded at Verdun

PARIS, July 10.—A 64inch shell which burst near the Richard Norton section of the American Automobile Ambulance, on the Verdun front, wrecked one of the ambulance cars and fragments of the shell struck the two American drivers. Harry Howard Hollinshead, of Sparta, N.J. suffered a flesh wound in the left forearm and Jacob Wendell, of New York, formerly of Sandridgebury, England, was wounded in the back. None of the French wounded in the ambulance was struck by the shell fragments. The Norton section of the American ambulance was filled with French wounded at the time.

Wendell's mother was Miss Kendall of Washington, D.C.

Several Children For Adoption

Several Children Have Been Placed in The Shelter During the Past Few Days.

Yesterday and to-day several children were added to the strength of the Childrens' Shelter. The total number on the roll at the present time is fourteen. Several of the members are available for adoption. One is a baby boy, one year old and another one who has yet to round out the first month of its establishment in this grey grim old world. A pretty little girl of two two years awaits a home likewise a number between the ages of two and ten years.

Several of these children owe their detention in the Shelter to the fact that their parents have failed to care for them properly. Mr. C. A. G. Spence the local agent for the Children's Aid Society has been busy of late visiting homes were children are said to have been abused and adjusting family difficulties that arise from time to time.

STREETS IN FACTORY DISTRICT NEED OIL

Employees of the De Laval, C.G.E. Works, Colonial Weaving Company, and other south end factories have commented recently upon the fact that the streets in that district more frequented than many of the streets that have received a treatment of oil. Furthermore they are less shaded than many of the oiled streets. Thus there is a combination of heat and dust that is very annoying and uncomfortable these summer days. The employees reside in many parts of the city and they should be able to pull the strings with enough of the Aldermen to obtain oil on the factory streets at once in order that their walk to and from work may at least be free from clouds of dust.

Corner Stone of Ammunition Plant Will be Laid on Saturday Next

LINDSAY, July 11.—The corner stone of the ammunition factory now in course of construction will be laid with fitting ceremonies on Saturday afternoon next, by Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes.

A meeting of citizens to make arrangements for this important event was held in the council chamber on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and although called on short notice, the attendance was large. All classes of our citizens were represented and it was decided to make the event a memorable one in the history of the town.

His Worship Mayor McLean was voted to the chair, and Mr. John Carew, M.P.P., who was instrumental in calling the meeting, addressed the gathering. Owing to important engagements it was impossible he stated, for Major-General Hughes to visit Lindsay on any other date but Saturday next. Invitations would be sent out to Cabinet ministers and other distinguished gentlemen to be present at the ceremonies.

Saturday was selected by the meeting as the most suitable date for the corner stone laying, and several committees were selected to make all necessary arrangements.

On the occasion of the corner stone laying Major-General Hughes will be presented with an address by the citizens, and the ceremonies will be featured by speeches from distinguished visitors.

The town will be gaily decorated for the occasion and the council will, this evening, be asked for a grant to help defray the cost.

At the meeting on Saturday several citizens in their remarks pointed out that erection of this plant would be an epoch in the history of the town and all should co-operate in making the ceremonies in connection with the corner stone laying an event of the greatest importance.

Rumours About Submarine Were Ridiculed For Weeks

NEW YORK, July 11.—Rumors which a month ago caused many laughs about the heralded coming of a submarine from Germany were recalled, this time without the laughs, and those who first told of the vessel's coming were treated as prophets, or, if not as prophets, at least as men who were "in the know". Also, the advertisements which for the past week have been telling the foreign population of an opportunity to send money to relatives and friends in the countries of the Teutonic allies were treated seriously for the first time when the news of the Deutschland's arrival had spread through the city.

Just how the report of the vessel's coming was first spread is not definitely known. The ship news reporters recall that several weeks ago, before the U-35 took a message from the Kaiser to King Alphonso of Spain, Matthew B. Claussen predicted that a cargo submarine would before long come to this country from Germany. Mr. Claussen had gone down to meet a friend coming in from Europe and spoke in rather positive terms of the arrival of a vessel from Germany.

Like similar rumors, the story of Mr. Claussen was treated as an argument for the feasibility of such a trip rather than coming from any knowledge that such a venture was anticipated by the German authorities. With the arrival of the U-35 at Cartagena, Spain, with a message from the Emperor to the Spanish monarch the rumor of a voyage by a submarine with a similar message to President Wilson began to be spoken of. Even when Lieutenant Von Krohn, of the German embassy in Madrid, said that a submarine was to reach this port on June 25 the story gained but slight credence, particularly when that day passed and no submarine from Germany arrived.

COMING WAS ADVERTISED.

Shortly following the arrival of the U-35 in Spain the Amerikai Magyar Nepszava, a Hungarian newspaper printed here, carried an advertisement which said that the Transatlantic Trust Company would accept money from Hungarians here for delivery to their families in Europe and that the money would be taken across by submarine and receipts brought back in the same way. The advertisement said that even then the submarine was in Baltimore harbor, submerged in a place of concealment known to only a few.

"Wonder of wonders! Money forwarded to Hungary by a German submarine—100 kronen for $14. On Thursday morning there arrived at Baltimore a German submarine, and it leaves for Europe in a few days. The Transatlantic Trust Company announced with pride that from now on it will send money orders in this way and will manage to get receipts in the same way.

"We have no longer to fear from the injustice of England. The money forwarded is no more in danger. Every body who wishes that their money should be forwarded by the first German submarine should send it at once to the address of the Transatlantic Trust Company, No. 67 William street. Hungarians living in New York should call at the East Side Branch, No. 109 avenue A. corner of Seventh street, which will be open for business to eight o'clock.

When information was sought about the remarkable advertisement nothing could be learned from Julius Pirnitzer, president of the trust company, and the man who had caused the advertisement to be inserted. When a thorough examination of Baltimore harbor was made in search of the vessel, and nothing was found, it was thought that the information which had reached Mr. Pirnitzer about the vessel could not have been authentic. Although the advertisement was repeated from day to day it was so changed that it appeared to lose much of its assurance.

A LINE INTO THE EMBASSY

Upon the arrival of the vessel an effort was made to learn from Mr. Pirnitzer where his information about the submarine's arrival came from and whether much money had been sent in to be forwarded to Germany and Austria in the way that had been advertised. Mr. Pirnitzer could not be found but it was reported that he had gone to see Mr. Alexander Von Nuber, the Austrian Consul General in this city. One person familiar with Mr. Pirnitzer said that the latter was unofficially connected with the Embassy, and undoubtedly knew of the vessel's trip from that source.

Neither Mr. Paul Kracle, the German Consul, nor Mr. von Nuber could be found yesterday. It was said that both men had left the city early in the day, and it was intimated that they might have gone to Baltimore to meet the submarine and greet its commander and crew. It was explained that the vessel, with its wireless, could undoubtedly send word of its coming, which would be known several days in advance, particularly if the Deutschland was forced to delay off the Virginia coast because of submarines.

One point which gave credence to the rumors that the submarine was actually coming, was told exclusively by the Evening Telegram ten days ago. That newspaper reported that a tug, the Thomas F. Crimmins, was steaming off the Virginia Capes waiting to meet a German submarine and escort it into Baltimore. It was shown that the tug was chartered by the Eastern Forwarding Company, a branch of the North German Lloyd Company, and appeared to be the first substantial indication that a submarine was nearing the Atlantic coast from Germany.

None of those who had foretold the coming of the submarine and were known to be in the confidence of the officials would comment on what the safe arrival of the boat would mean with regard to future traffic between this country and Germany. They would not talk about whether the vessel was one of a fleet which would make regular trips to this country and which would carry money and mail, influential passengers and as much cargo as the vessel could accommodate.

The following recipe is for library paste that will not mould: Three cupfuls of boiling water to one of sifted flour, one cupful of cold water to mix flour for the first paste. This amount requires a great spoonful of powdered alum, which is put in the boiling water, add 20 drops of oil of cloves, added immediately when the paste is taken off the stove.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD KING OF ANNAM HAS BEEN DETHRONED

Fomented Rebellion Against French Rule in Country.

Paris, July 11.—Duy-Tan, the sixteen year old king of the French protectorate of Annam, on the China Sea, has been dethroned as a result of a revolt of Annamites at Quang-Ngai, which he is accused of having fomented. The Governor-General of French Indo China reports the outbreak was suppressed quickly and the King arrested near Hue. He is succeeded by Prince Dun-Dao, who has been crowned.

A despatch from Shanghai, May 18 said the Governor-General of French Indo-China, of which the kingdom of Annam is virtually a part, had ordered that King Duy-Tan be deposed on charges of complicity in riots in Quang-Nan. Several uprisings against French rule have occurred within the last three years in Indo-China, and martial law was proclaimed throughout the greater part of the territory in April.

GERMAN SHORTAGE OF FOODS GROWS

Potato Harvest Expected To Be Fortnight Late—Meat Cards Cut Down.

AMSTERDAM, July 11.— The potato harvest in Germany will be played a fortnight, according to Berlin newspapers. As an evidence of the growing seriousness of the potato shortage the Berlin municipal authorities, in co-operation iwth the authorities of the suburbs, have decided that for the present, holders of potato tickets will receive only two pounds of potatoes a week. As a compensation they will get an extra 400 grammes of flour.

Holders of meat cards must also face a decrease in their allowance. The quantity is fixed at 225 grammes for the ensuing week, as opposed to the former allowance of 250 grammes (about 8 3-4 ounces.) This reduction is ordered on account of the lessening number of cattle.

The shortage of potatoes in Germany has been a serious factor in the food situation, according to a statement by Adolph von Batocki, Germany's food dictator. Early in June the German authorities proposed to prohibit meat consumption for two months. This plan was vetoed by Von Batocki, who stated that it was inadvisable because of the lack of potatoes to take the place of the necessary fats.

The first meat cards were issued in Berlin on June 6 of this year, and provided for a weekly meat ration of 300 grammes (about 12 ounces) per head. This amount was reduced to 250 grammes on June 25. As an indication of the growing scarcity of cattle, heifers and breeders brought six times their normal prices at the market held recently in Koenigsberg.

New, Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair or fuzz from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.

Man Drowned in Futile Attempt to Rescue Girl

Two Perish in Lake Hopatcong When Swimmers Capsize Boat by Diving.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Diving from a rowboat into Lake Hopatcong, in New Jersey, caused the deaths of a young woman and a young man. So far as known she drowned were Miss Irene Rohde, of No. 442 Tenth Street, Brooklyn, and William Meyer, also of that borough.

Meyer and Miss Rohde, with another young couple from Brooklyn, had engaged a rowboat at Nolan's Point and the two men had put on bathing suits. They rowed to a point off Edwards' dock, where the lake is seventy feet deep and there the two young men began to dive from the boat.

In diving one of them slipped and capsized the craft, throwing all of them into the water. One of the men and one of the girls were able to cling to the overturned boat. The other girl sank and to save her Meyer dived many times.

In these efforts to find Miss Rohde under the water Meyer became so weak that he could not swim. Rescuers then were approaching and they called to him to hold himself up. Several persons heard him say he would go down once more to get Miss Rohde. He sank beneath the surface and did not rise again.

Rescuers carried the other couple into Edwards' place and they soon were revived and left without any one learning their identity. From them was obtained the names of Miss Rohde and Meyer.

Coroner Totten went to Lake Hopatcong and began an investigation. Efforts were begun to recover the bodies.

Always paid his Way.—A minister saw Jock about to enter the local public house, and he touched him on the shoulder. "D'ye ken, man, that everytime ye enter that house Satan enters wi' ye?" Jock grinned. "I dinna mind. He has to pay for his sin."

Dublin Still Restless City Below Surface

DUBLIN, July 11.—Dublin is a city of rumors. Two months after the Sinn Fein rebellion men are going about the streets whispering to one another that another rising is about to take place, that sniping being decoyed into the slums and murdered, and that prisoners are being done to death in revenge in British and Irish prisons.

Of course there isn't a word of truth in any of them but the fact that they flourish shows that Dublin has not yet settled down to its normal conditions, and there is, in the opinion of its most substantial citizens, little hope that it will settle down until some form of established and organized government takes the place of the present martial law under which Ireland is ruled.

The prime minister, Mr. Asquith has announced Lloyd George's solution—an Irish parliament with Ulster left out. That will do for the war, no doubt and may or may not be a permanent solution.

SENTIMENT IS CHANGED

It is possible now to get a better perspective of the revolt than it was immediately after it had been put down. A visit to Dublin now reveals a great change in public sentiment from that experienced during a visit just after the rebellion. Then there was nothing but execration for the rebels among the substantial Dublin citizens of all parties, and a hope that those really responsible for the rising would be sternly and quickly punished and their dupes dealt with as leniently as possible.

To-day there is a feeling that the continued imprisonment of thousands of young men without trial and without even any charge having been formulated against them is unfair and unjust, and while it would not be true to say that the anti-British feeling has grown, there is evident a feeling of irritation and unrest which might easily be fanned by some unlucky incident into serious discontent.

SOLDIERS ROUGH IN METHODS

That incident may happen at any time while martial law continues, for the soldiers who are in charge everywhere are not remarkable for their tact. They mean well enough, no doubt and their officers are the pink of consideration and courtesy, but in cases where the men are left in charge without the immediate supervision of an officer they are sometimes rough in their methods of enforcing orders, and such methods might lead to a serious clash.

For instance, at one of the landing stages the other day where passes to leave Ireland are necessary I saw men whose only fault was that they had failed to provide themselves with passes, which they did not know they needed, and were slow in understanding what was said to them in an—to an Irishman—almost unintelligible Cockney dialect, roughly thrown back into the waiting crowd.

The sympathy of the crowd was with these men, and had any of them put up a show of resistance the crowd undoubtedly would have taken their part and a serious row might have developed.

DEATH PENALTY OF FAILURE

Let it be clearly understood, however, that outside the small group of extremists there is no sympathy with the men who were executed. It is fully realised even among those who appreciate the high ideals of the rebel leaders that they had only to expect death as the penalty of failure, and it is also felt that they merited the most severe punishment for leading hundreds of young boys into their mad enterprise.

It is a fact which is easily verified by any one who has the confidence of the people of Dublin, that the great bulk of the rebels knew nothing of what they were in for when they left their homes on last Easter Monday morning. It is doubtful if more than a hundred people in all Ireland knew that a rising was contemplated.

The rank and file of the volunteer organizations had been parading Dublin and the other towns of Ireland for months with their rifles and ammunition, and when they were ordered out by their officers for a parade on Easter Monday they all thought that it was the usual thing.

REVOLUTIONISTS MOSTLY BOYS.

I was told by a relative of one of the boys who seized the general postoffice that the rank and file in that party knew nothing at all of what was expected of them.

They marched through Sackville street as usual, and as they were passing down it they received an order to turn into the postoffice. Once in, the leaders took possession.

"Now, boys," one of the officers declared, "we are in for it. There is nothing for it but to fight for our lives until the Germans arrive to relieve us."

I have alluded to the rebels several times as boys, and this is literally true. A few days ago I visited the Castle hospital where in addition to some hundreds of wounded British soldiers, there are forty or fifty wounded rebel prisoners. With three exceptions every one I saw was a young boy, apparently, in most cases, not more than 16 or 17 years of age. They seemed, too, to be nearly all boys of good education and breeding, and certainly none of them belonged to the hooligan class.

BOYS FROM DUBLIN TRADES.

It is the fact that boys like this who knew nothing of what they were being led into and who are connected with the peaceful trading and professional classes of Dublin, are being detained so long that it is causing the gradual change of feeling.

Another thing which contributes to the change is the knowledge which is now becoming general that in all cases where the rebels were in organized bodies and under the control of their own officers they behaved excellently and observed all the rules of civilized warfare. Even rebel sympathisers will not deny that there were many outrages and even cold-blooded murders by individual snipers, and by the hooligan element which seized the opportunity for looting and rapine.

This was blamed on the rebels at first, but in every case investigated it has been found that the organized rebels were not responsible. In consequence you hear even among Unionists in Dublin the remark that "after all the Sinn Fein boys fought well, and like gentlemen."

IRISH DENOUNCE BIRRELL.

The most remarkable thing in Dublin to-day is the unanimity with which men of all parties from the most extreme Unionists to the Sinn Feiners themselves agree in denouncing the Castle government in general and Birrell, the late chief secretary, in particular.

"Birrell is the one that ought to be hanged," is the usual comment in Dublin, when any one asks where the blame for the rising lies, and all Ireland is bitterly angry that Birrell has been allowed to retire without even a vote of censure of parliament, and will presumably draw a large pension for the rest of his life.

Felt like Daniel—A guest called upon to return thanks for the distinguished strangers at a public dinner, said: "This is quite unexpected. In fact, when I came into this room I felt much like Daniel in the lion's den. When Daniel got into that place, and looked around, he thought to himself, 'Whoever's got to do the after-dinner speaking it won't be me.'"

GERMAN DEATHS TOTAL 3,012,637

LONDON SAYS THESE FIGURES ARE ANNOUNCED IN THE OFFICIAL LISTS.

LONDON, July 11.—German casualties from the beginning of the war to the end of June, as computed from official German lists, are given as 3,012,637 in an official statement made public here to-day. This announcement follows:

"German casualties reported in German official casualty lists, exclusive of corrections, in the month of June, follow: Died of wounds and sickness, 18,585; prisoners and missing, 6,279; wounded, 63,197; total, 88,061.

"These, added to those reported in previous months and including corrections reported in June, 1916, bring the totals reported in German official lists since the beginning of the war to: Died of wounds and sickness, 757,387; prisoners and missing, 342,673; wounded, 1,912,637; total, 3,012,637.

"These figures include all German nationalities: Prussians, Bavarians, Saxons and Wurttembergers. They do not include naval casualties or casualties of colonial troops. They are not an estimate by the British authorities, but merely casualties announced in German official lists."

One Ingredient Lacking.—Master—"How do the dogs like the new food, John?" John—"They don't seem to take very kindly to it, sir." Master—"How do you account for that, John?" John—"Well, you see air, it says on the packet, that 'dogs will eat it with avidity,' and they never sent none of that. But I'll try them again as soon as I gets the other packet to mix it with."

TENNIS

The final game in the church league was played last night when Knox and All Saint's who were tied for first place both having won 18 sets and losing 2 were scheduled to meet. Knox winning 3 out of 4 sets which gives them the championship with 21 sets won and 3 lost. All Saint's are in 2nd place with 19 sets won and 5 lost.

In the church league 'mixed doubles' St. Peter's were unable to get a team together so St. Luke's have taken their place. Games last week resulted as follows:

All Saint's won 4 sets, Trinity 0.
St. Andrew's won 4 sets, St. Paul's 0.
George St., won 2 sets, Knox 2.

Sacred Heart and St. Luke's play this week. Other games this week are:

St. Paul's vs St. Luke's.
George St. vs St. Andrew's.
Knox vs Trinity.
Sacred Heart vs All Saint's.

Italy's King a Good Soldier

LONDON, July 10.—The military correspondent of the London Times, describing his recent tour of the Italian front, says in this morning's issue:

"Italy is fortunate in having at her head at this critical hour of her destinies a King who is a soldier born and bred. It is a common saying here that the King of Italy is homesick when he is absent from the army, and it is certain his Majesty spends every hour he can spare from state affairs with his troops. He wears on his breast the medal and ribbon given only to those who have been at the front a year, and though he deprecates any allusion to the fact it is true that he is constantly in the firing line. He has had many narrow escapes, and is personally known to the whole army, who love to see him in their midst.

AIDS HIS GENERALS.

"I have not found any officer of his army who has a better, more intimate or more accurate knowledge of his troops than the King. His attention to the wants of the army is absolutely untiring, and his cool judgment and large experience must often be of great service to his ministers and generals.

"I do not know whether the field headquarters of the King of Italy or of King Albert of Belgium is the more unpretentious, but certainly both monarchs live in circumstances of extreme simplicity. My recollection is that when I last had the honour of visiting King Albert's headquarters, the bell in which I must call the parlor did not ring, and the Queen of the Belgians had to get up and fetch tea herself.

HUMBLE SURROUNDINGS.

"When I had the honour of being received by the King of Italy, I found his Majesty in a little villa which held only four people, and the King working in a room of which the only furniture, I can recall, consisted of a camp bed, close to the ground and of exiguous breadth, a small table and two chairs of uncompromising hardness. The only ornament in the room was the base of the last Austrian shell, which burst just above the King's head. It had been mounted as a souvenir by the Queen."

HEAT AFFECTS SOLDIERS.

No Afternoon Practice of Manoeuvres at Borden Camp.

Camp Borden, Ont., July 10.—Heat prostrations at the ceremonial parade this morning was the reason for calling off the afternoon practice. The men were played out on returning to their areas.

General Sir Sam Hughes and party from Ottawa will larrive in camp at six o'clock to-morrow morning. The general will breakfast at 8 o'clock at Col. Bob Low's headquarters mess, and will inspect the camp. The review of the troops is timed for 11 o'clock. The Minister and party will leave at 2.30.

Bone Transferred Between Soldiers

Paris, July 10.—One of the most remarkable surgical operations on record is now being performed at the Grand Palais, the massive building customarily used for the annual Salon but now transformed into an hospital. Here two soldiers lie side by side, bound together like Siamese twins, while a large proportion of the leg of one of them is being slowly transferred into the leg of the other one. Noted surgeons are gathered about, watching the slow development, which they regard as marvellous both from the surgical standpoint as well as from the sentimental, in which one soldier is calmly giving away day by day part of his body to a fellow soldier.

The two men lie on their backs on a large operating table in one of the halls of the hospital. They lie in opposite directions, the head of one near the feet of the other. They are among the most seriously wounded of the younger class of soldiers, one 26 and the other 23 years old. The younger, Rousselot, was wounded in the leg in the battle of Morhange in the early days of the war. He was taken a prisoner to Germany, where the surgeons say, he did not receive intelligent attention. Brought back here last September, it was necessary to perform a second operation to lengthen his leg fourteen centimetres (about five and one-half inches.) But after the extension was performed there was still a lack of bony matter between the two portions of the broken femur.

The other soldier, Tillete, an artilleryman, was seriously wounded in the leg two months ago in the desperate fight over Fort Douaumont. In a field operation his leg was amputated above the knee. Later it was found that a second operation was necessary in order to shorten the leg by some centimetres.

It was at this point that the surgeons concluded that the soldier who needed the shortened leg could give up his portion to the soldier who needed the longer leg. Tillete was consulted by the chief surgeon; the operation of grafting was fully explained to him, and it was made known also that he was rendering a service to a soldier comrade and to science. He did not hesitate; he gave his full consent.

Thereupon the operation began, and now after some weeks the two soldiers lie there on their backs, the right thigh of Rousselot against the left thigh of Tillete, bound together with the same surgical bandages so as to prevent the slightest shifting of the operated parts until the phenomena of transferring one leg to the other is accomplished.

there were rushes across the road by the 170th men. The rebels turned and fled, and some were taken prisoners. This seemed to settle matters, and the riot gradually subsided about 11 o'clock. At the present time (11.45) all is quiet.

The Men's Grievances.

Some facts: The men were taken to the parade ground at 7.30 this morning without water bottles. They returned to camp at 1.30. They were not allowed to fall out and get a drink at the creek. The London battalions were rushed to the camp without enough preparations. Sir Sam Hughes wired General Logie that he "wanted to see the boys." General Logie did his best to get them and the camp in good shape, and they claim that too much time was devoted to a useless spectacle.

One Toronto N. C. O. of the sensible type said to The Globe: "When the whole country is up in arms this is no time to have parading for Sir Sam Hughes."

One complaint is that they should have two leaves per month instead of one.

A large number of the noisy rebels were very young fellows, some scarcely seventeen.

SUNDAY'S ORDERS.

Following are the Battalion orders by Lieut. Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F. Headquarters Barriefield camp. July 10, 1916.

DUTIES.

Duty Unit to-day, 156th Battalion, C.E.F.

Field Officer of the day, to-day, Capt. W. J. Baker, 154th.

Orderly Officer to-day, Lieut. G. M. Millburn.

Orderly Officer to-morrow, Lieut. N. C. Hatton.

PARADES—

The Battalion will parade at 6.00 to-day, Monday for platoon drill, etc. Other parades being then detailed.

TENTS—

The following instructions are to be strictly observed by Quartermaster's of Battalions, when tents are to be handed over to the Ordnance Corps.

At an hour appointed by the S.O.O. tents will be struck and spread out, but not folded, the valise, pin bag, tent pins, and mallets will be laid out, on the right of the tent. The poles will be tied up in sets (all nails having been previously removed). Tying cord may be obtained from the Ordnance Stores on application.

A representative of the C.Q.C. will take over the tents from the Quartermaster of the Battalion, who will have sufficient men on hand to fold them up and load the transport waggons, for removal to Ordnance Stores.

RANGES. Camp Cooking—

Ranges Camp Cooking must be thoroughly cleaned, i.e., all ashes removed, the boilers and roast pans washed, scoured and dried, before returning to Ordnance Stores.

J. E. B. MUNRO, Captain, Adjutant 93rd, Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

NOTICE—

Lieut. F. S. Dupuy has lost a silver cigarette case and a pair of gold cuff links. Finder please return at once to him.

Mrs. George Curtis of this city has received the following interesting letter from her son, Private Howard Curtis of the 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Contingent. Private Curtis has been wounded three times. The letter follows:

Dear Mother,—"I am glad to be able to write and let you know that I have come through the recent fighting all right. We certainly have had a pretty hot time of it lately, but the Germans again found out that we can still put up a good scrap.

I have seen some pretty rough times out here but this last affair beat them all. During the three days we were in the attack it rained all the time and when we came out we were a mass of mud and rain. It is the showers of shell that gets a fellow's goat out here.

One big German shell buried five of us, but some of the other fellows soon got us out and we were none the worse save for a very severe shaking up. Our artillery kept a steady stream of shells going for about forty-eight hours and the German trenches were flattened so much that when we took the trenches it was hard to find where the trenches really were.

The prisoners were a mixed lot of men. Some were very young and others were men of over forty years, but thy were all pleased to get on our side of the line. One young fellow who could speak fairly good English, said the war would soon end. I guess they are just finding out that we mean to win.

There are not many of the first contingent out here now. In the platoon I am in there are only two of us left and I hope to be spared to see the finish, but of course a fellow cannot count much on the future out here.

The Russians are certainly making a big move and I hope they keep on till they capture the whole Austrian army. If they beat the Austrians it won't be long before the Germans will have to give in.

I was up to the 4th Battery to see the Peterborough boys yesterday. Will Clark of East City was wounded a week ago, but not serious. I hope he makes Canada and don't have to come back.

Remember me to all my friends. I remain.

HOWARD.

The Kingston Standard Says:

The officers of the 93rd Battalion of Peterboro have very kindly consented to allow the fine band of the battalion to give a concert in Macdonald Park on Tuesday evening, July 11th. This will be the only chance the city will have to hear the band of the 93rd, and there is a great treat in store for all lovers of music to-morrow night. Bandmaster Hughes will present a programme that should satisfy all. Later on the 139th, 156th, and the pipers of the 154th will give the promised combined concert, and some time next week the 156th band will give a concert in the park.

The Brockville Recorder speaking of the casualties sustained among Brockville soldiers since the war began refers to the total—84 as being very large. It may be interesting information to the Recorder to know that the Peterborough casualties in the last 40 days have totalled no less than 98.

A number of the men of the 93rd Battalion who have been rejected in the last medical test as physically unfit for overseas service is expected home to-night. Several of the rejected men arrived home last night. It is understood that the majority of the rejections have been in C and D Companies, B Company going through with only five or six rejections.

Lieut. Thompson, of the 74th Battery, who has been here on recruiting duty, left this afternoon for Kingston.

Capt. Birdsall, the officer in charge of the local recruiting office, is confined to his home through illness.

Pte. Theodore W. Quinn, of the 2nd Battalion, who has been home on furlough, went to Ottawa last night to report for duty.

A little vaseline rubbed on a carving set when put away, will prevent rust and is easily wiped off when wanted for use.

Take warm water and pour in a little ammonia and wipe carpet with a large sponge or a soft rag. This will take out the grease spots should there be any.

PHELAN—DELAIRE

A pretty wedding took place this morning at eight o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral when Mr. Nagle Edward Phelan, son of Mr. Harry Phelan, 385 Rubidge street was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Josephine Florence Delaire daughter of Mr. John Delaire, 458 Park street. Rev. Fr. Phelan performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride was daintly dressed in a dress of Georgiate crepe and wore a white leghorn hat. Mr. Saigfield Sheeby B.A. Sc., acted as best man, while Miss Lydia Delaire sister of the bride looked charming as bridesmaid.

During the nuptial mass, appropriate solos were rendered by Mr. Ed. Honrahon and Miss Annie Simons.

After the ceremony the party proceeded to the home of the bride where the wedding breakfast took place. The happy couple left at noon to-day for an extended trip to Pittsburg and other points.

Dread Disease Has Been Checked

PARALYSIS IS CHECKED.

VIOLATORS OF SANITARY CODE IN NEW YORK COURT.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The campaign of cleanliness being waged by all city departments to wipe out the epidemic of infantile paralysis here was continued with increased vigor. Hundreds of violators of the sanitary code were brought to court and fined for disregarding health department instructions, particularly in territories where the epidemic is most pronounced.

There were fewer deaths in the 24 hours ending at 10 o'clock this morning, only 14 being reported. The number of new cases in the 24-hour period, however, increased to 103. Thus far the epidemic has caused 288 deaths, and the number infected is 1,088.

The National American Woman Suffrage Association to-day placed its entire organization machinery at the hospital of the Federal Government. The services of thousands of organized women throughout the country have been proffered to Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service.

Officers' Wives Are Not Wanted

LONDON, July 11.—Mainly on the ground that their presence tends to hamper efficiency in the Canadian forces in England and France, the agents general in London of the provinces of Canada assembled in conference and passed a resolution calling upon the provisional government to take prompt steps to discourage officers and soldiers' wives from going to London until the end of the war.

"There are more than three thousand wives of officers and men of the Canadian forces now in the United Kingdom," one agent general said, addressing the conference, "and I understand this number is to be increased during the next two or three months at a rate of upward of one thousand a week.

"Immediately they arrive they communicate with their husbands, who perhaps have only just returned turned from the trenches, urging them to get a further few days' leave. In the majority of cases this is, of course, impossible, owing to the military exigencies. But in spite of that they persist, demanding the intervention of the agent general and the high commissioner, and when they find they are helpless in the matter these good women take things into their own hands and write the military authorities. In not a few cases they have communicated with the commanding officer direct, without the knowledge of the husband, to whom such behaviour causes some anxiety.

"It is far better for the wives to remain in Canada with friends than to come here on an off chance of seeing their husbands and then spending several months among strangers."

Oliver White Shot Through Both Arms

Mrs. Arthur White, Jr., has received a letter from Capt. F. G. Sherring, Chaplain of the 2nd Canadian Division, informing her of the injuries to her son Oliver recently wounded in action. The wounds are in both arms, but are just flesh wounds and no bones are broken. They are not serious, but Oliver will be unable to write for some time. He is now in an hospital in Bristol.

Second Big Sub. To Cross Ocean

Deutschland to be Followed Shortly by the Bremen

Capt. Koenig Says That He Carried No Message From the Kaiser to President Wilson—Denies He Was Forced Far Out of His Course.

BALTIMORE, July 11.—Upon delivering his ship's papers to the officers of the North German Lloyd Line yesterday Capt. Paul Koenig of the submarine merchantman Deutschland disposed finally of the report that he carried a message from Emperor William to President Wilson, saying there was no foundation for the story.

He also issued a formal statement in which he announced that the Deutschland was the first of several submarines built for the transatlantic trade and that she would be followed by the Bremen.

Sister Bremen Coming.

Following is the statement in part: "The submarine Deutschland, which I have the honour to command, is the first of several submarines built to order of the Deutsche Ozean-Rhederei G. M. B. H., Bremen. She will be followed by the Bremen shortly.

"The idea of the building of this submarine emanated from Mr. Alfred Lohmann, then President of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce. He brought his idea in the fall of last year confidentially before a small circle of friends, and the idea was taken up at once. A company was formed under the name of Deutsche Ozean-Rhederei G. M. B. H., and the Germaniawerft, Kiel, was entrusted with the building of the submarine.

"I am not in a position to give you full details regarding our trip across the ocean, in view of our enemies. Our boat has a displacement of about 2,000 tons and a speed of more than fourteen knots. Needless to say, we are quite unarmed and only a peaceful merchantman."

Not Forced Out of Course.

Captain Koenig's own story of the Deutschland's voyage across the ocean was told to newspaper correspondents soon after he made public his prepared statement.

"I have seen," said the Captain, "statements that we were forced to go hundreds of miles out of our course in the Atlantic because of British warships. That is not so. Why should we go out of our course, except to submerge? That is the simplest and most effective way to get out of our course. Besides, it is much easier to submerge.

"We came to Hampton Roads by the street course from the English Channel. We did not come by way of the Azores. Altogether from Helgoland to Baltimore we covered 3,800 miles. Of that distance 90 miles were driven under the surface of the water.

Many Trial Trips.

"There is little to tell of the trip," be continued. "We left Helgoland on June 23 and steamed on the surface into the North Sea. Before sailing we conducted trial trips and drills for the crew for ten days or two weeks, having proceeded from Bremen to our starting point. I had never been on a submarine voyage, and all the training I had was received in the practice trips of the Deutschland.

"Everything went without incident the first day, but on the second day in the North Sea we were in the zone of the British cruisers and destroyers We sighted their smoke frequently, but dived only when we thought there was danger of our being detected. Of course were were difficult to see because we were running so low in the water and giving out no smoke. We did submerge several times in the North Sea, staying under sometimes two hours and sometimes less. Every time we came to the surface, if all looked well, we kept on going. We saw no British battleships in the North Sea, only cruisers and destroyers, or at least what we took to be British naval vessels.

"We did not, on the entire trip, come into close proximity with any man-of-war. We avoided them all.

On the Channel's Bottom.

"From the North Sea we ran straight through the English Channel and on the night of the fourth day we submerged and remained still all night, on the ground, on the bottom of the Channel. There were lots of cruisers near us, we knew, and it was very foggy. So we thought it wise not to take any chances and I gave the order to submerge for the night and until there should be clearer weather. In the morning all was well and we proceeded through the Channel into the Atlantic Ocean without incident.

"Our trip has demonstrated that the big merchant submarine is practical and that it has come to stay. We expect the venture to be a great financial success. This ship can carry a cargo of 1,000 tons, and on this trip carried 750 tons of dyestuffs, valued at $1,000,000. The charges for the shipment alone will pay for the cost of the Deutschland, about $500,000. On this trip we carried no mails nor did we carry money or securities. Also we came without insurance, running entirely at our risk."

YOUNG MEN ALL WEAR KHAKI IN KENORA

Chief Thompson, who has returned from the annual Police Convention in Kenora, reports that without doubt Kenora is one of the best "soldier" towns in the Dominion. Over four hundred men have donned the khaki and gone to the firing line from this small New Ontario town on the extreme border of the province. The Kenora Chief even made the boast to his fellow chiefs that for a young man to be seen on the streets of Kenora was a rarity, all men of military age, especially the younger, having enlisted to a man.

Slight Blaze At Lock Bridge

A small plot of grass near the bridge at the Peterborough Lock suddenly ignited this morning, and some nervous individual sent in a call to Chief Howard's men. The long trip to Lock No. 7 was made in quick style by the Howard brigade, only to find that some amateur fire-fighter had beat them to it and extinguished the blaze.

American Beauty May Become Bride of Royal Prince

LONDON, (Special). — The one theme of talk in upper tendom is the two important society engagements just announced.

One is official. It is that of the betrothal of Capt. John Jacob Astor, younger son of Baron Astor, to Lady Charles Mercer Nairne, sister of Lord Minto and a war widow. The second announcement, unofficial, connects the names of Mrs. Wm. B. Leeds, the rich and handsome widow of the American tin plate king, and the debonair young Prince Christophorus, younger brother of the King of Greece, who was recently in London.

It is said that they will wed if the consent of the king of Greece can be obtained to his brother's marrying out of the royal line. When a reporter rang up Mrs. Leeds on the 'phone, and asked if the report was true she assured him, sweetly, that she 'knew nothing at all about it." Then, equally sweetly, but quite determinedly, she hung up the receiver.

HIGHEST RANK IN AMERICA

The story that Mrs. Leeds is engaged to Prince Christophorus may well be true—there have been hints about it for some time—and it may be significant that no specific denial has been published.

The original report, printed by a London Sunday newspaper, asserted that Mrs. Leeds had recently arrived at her villa at Monte Carlo "with thirty English servants and tons of luggage," but the fact is that Mrs. Leeds is at her beautiful house in Grosvenor Square.

If the marriage with Prince Christophorus takes place Mrs. Leeds will outrank every other American woman. She will become cousin by marriage to King George V. and also to the queen of Spain. The prince's sister-in-law, the queen of Greece, is the German emperor's sister, and his father was Queen Alexandra's brother. The question is said to be whether the king of Greece will sanction a marriage out of the royal line.

Mrs. Leeds' little son is at an aristocratic school near Woking, and among his companions there are little Prince Charles of Belgium, son of King Albert, and the youthful Lord Stavordale, the Earl of Ilchester's son.

Prince Charles is frequently in London, and has been the guest of Mrs. Leeds more than once. At present he is the best looking of the children of the king of the Belgians, a well set up and soldierly young lad.

SUCCESSION SEEMS ASSURED.

Capt. Astor won the French Legion of Honour about a year ago. Almost simultaneously he received from his father a nice little present of land in New York valued at $7,000,000.

Baron Astor's eldest son and namesake, who represents Plmouth in the house of commons, has two sons, so now that the soldier brother's engagement is announced the succession to the peerage is fairly well assured.

MOB ATTACKS BUGGY DRIVER.

Samuel Gassman Rescued by Detectives After His Vehicle Strikes Boy.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Following a trifling accident, when a child was knocked down by a horse attached to a buggy in which Samuel Gassman, of No. 323 East 111th street, and his wife and daughter were seated, the three were attacked by an angry crowd and but for the timely aid of Detectives Sommer and Cassetti, they might have been injured.

Mr. Gassman was driving through 111th street, and near Second avenue a child ran in front of the horse and was knocked down. The screams of the child attracted the attention of several men who ran toward the buggy just as Mr. Gassman was descending to assist the child. The men attacked Mr. Gassman while others dragged Mrs. Gassman and her daughter into the street and kicked them. Detectives Sommer and Cassetti rescued them and arrested Tony Di Nomi, of No. 304 East 111th street, and he later was held in $1,500 bail on a charge of felonious assault by Magistrate Murphy.

RED GLASS MILK BOTTLES.

From Tit-Bits.

It is not at all improbable that milk will soon be delivered in red bottles, for it has been discovered that while ordinary light hastens the "spoiling" of milk, the red rays prevent it. The violet rays, on the contrary, cause the milk to turn.

Pure, fresh milk, or sterilised and pasteurized milk, if placed in an uncoloured glass bottle and left in the full sunlight, is completely spoiled by evening. But substitute a red glass bottle, or wrap the ordinary bottle in red paper, and milk is perfectly good after standing ten hours in the sun.

Brought in Woman Contrary to the Law

G. B. COOKE, FATHER OF SIX, PAYS $85 FINE—BOTH ARE DEPORTED.

Windsor, July 11.—Charged with bringing a woman, not his wife, into Canada in violation of the immigration laws, George B. Cook, 56 years old, and father of six children, was arraigned in the police court here to-day, and from a thick roll of bank notes peeled off $85, which amount was imposed as a fine.

Sunday afternoon he stepped off the Detroit ferry boat in company with Cora Brister, aged 26. The man told Immigration Officer Byrne that the girl was his granddaughter, and that they came from Barnesville, Ohio. Miss Brister, however, told an entirely different story, as a result of which the couple was held.

To-day following the police court proceedings, both were deported.

Berlin Open First Big Kitchen for Mass Feeding

Great Market Hall is Opened and 7,000 Persons Will be Supplied Daily---Other Central Stations Will Increase Capacity in Two Months to 250,000

BERLIN, July 12.—The first serious step toward the solution of the problem of feeding the masses in Berlin by means of municipal kitchens and eating houses was taken Monday with the opening of an institution combining these features in the Great Market Hall in the east side of the city, where the population is composed mainly of workingmen.

About seven thousand persons will be fed daily this week, and after that thirty thousand, the food consisting of meat and vegetable stew and groats, cooked in gigantic ketties. The city ward, where the Market Hall is situated, is divided into seven districts, each of which has its own distributing place, to which the cooked food is taken from the central station by automobile in cans provided with asbestos sides and covers, in order to retain the heat.

The central institutions and each of the seven stations distribute to persons who desire to take food to their homes. All these places also are equipped to feed such persons as desire to eat there. The majority, however, seem to prefer to take the food home.

Those desiring to take advantage of the institution apply a week ahead and surrender seven-tenth of their meat card and two-thirds of their potato card and receive a card for these containing seven coupons. When an applicant appears at an eating hall he presents a coupon and forty pfennigs, receiving a check entitling him to one litre of food.

The arrangements worked a bit slowly, but otherwise well for an opening day. Representatives of women's associations voluntarily do the work of lading out the food and waiting on the tables.

Head Burgomaster Wermuth, who passed a great part of the day in the central kitchen, said that the sum of forty pfennigs covers the actual running expenses, including food and labour. The city naturally makes no account of rentals and will expend eventually between two and three million marks in equipment. The Burgomaster said:

"One advantage is naturally that by cooking vast quantities, as here, the food can be furnished chesper than the people could prepare it for themselves. Quite as important, however, is the fact that applicants, especially women who are obliged to work all day, are no longer compelled to waste weary and profitless hours standing in line before provision shops.

"A number of big factories already taking advantage of the new institutions, one alone ordering seven hundred portions daily. Next week we will open a similar institution in another city ward, the following week another, and the third week one at the Great Central Stockyards, where 40,000 persons can be fed daily. We have arranged to feed 250,000 persons two months from now, but there is no limit; we shall go half a million if the demand exists."

Important Fact Found About Wireless Leaks

OPERATOR AT BARRIEFIELD DISCOVERS HOW GERMANS GET ALLIES' ORDERS.

Kingston, July 11.—An important discovery was made at Barriefield on Saturday and by it it is believed the secret of how Germans have been able to get the contents of messages sent from the Allies Headquarters to the front line has been found. Working at his instrument at Barriefield on Saturday, Sergt. Hycks heard a message which he knew could not be sent from any wireless station within his receiving limits. It was in the Morse code. He came to the conclusion that it must be from the busser that was working in another tent 90 feet away. The electricity which was passing over the busser wire, was being absorbed, and became active over the wireless apparatus. This is undoubtedly what the Germans have long known, and used in many cases to gain advantage against the Allies. An order to advance would become known to them instantly, as well as many other things they should not know. Great importance is attached to the discovery in official circles.

DIES AFTER SAVING 2 GIRLS FROM SEA, UNAIDED BY THRONG

John McKinnon, Lawyer and Columbia Athlete, Falls Dying After Struggle--Thousands Watch, But no one Helps Identity of Young Women is Withheld by Hotel at Long Beach—No Inquiries About Their Rescuer.

NEW YORK, July 11.—John McKibbon, a young lawyer, and one of Columia University's well known athletes, died suddenly just after heroically rescuing two girls from a treacherous current off Long Beach. A less powerful athlete than Mr. McKibbon—he was six feet two and weighed 200 pounds—probably could not have saved the two girls, and the effort was too much for his heart. It collapsed under the strain, and despite all the efforts made to save him he died within a few minutes.

Mr. McKinnon, who lived at No. 417 West 118th street, went to Long Beach yesterday with F. D. Schnaeke, a lawyer, of No. 54 Wall street, who lives in the same house, and Henry Dimon and William H. Blythe, also lawyers. They had taken a dip in the ocean off the Nassau Hotel and were playing ball on the beach when they heard the cries of two girls, who either had ventured too far out or had been carried out by a current that runs through the surf and by using the Australian crawl stroke, with which he was an expert, was soon holding the two girls above the choppy sea by treading water.

No One Goes to Aid Him.

Several thousand persons were along the beach, half in bathing costumes and half in beach chairs, observing the gay procession, when all were alarmed by the cries from the young women. Soon there was a great crowd gathered at the point opposite where Mr. McKinnon had begun the struggle to get the girls into shore. He had a hard fight all the way, being compelled to propel himself and the girls with his feet, while he held them up with his hands.

Occasionally, when the three would go under, he would let go of one to to use his hand to reach the surface again, and then he would pursue the one he had released, overtake her and again start for shore. Just why life guards did not go to the aid of the lawyer was not explained last night. The beach management refused to give any details of the affair or to reveal the identity of the young women rescued, although they are residents of the Nassau Hotel.

Anyway, no one went to the aid of Mr. McKinnon, although thousands breathlessly watched his brave struggle, until he was so near the beach he could get a foothold in the sand. Then several men went out and took the young women from him and carried them up on the beach. They were more frightened than hurt and hurried to their rooms.

Collapses on the Sand.

When the young women were taken from him, Mr. McKinnon was seen to be staggering in the water, about waist deep, and Mr. Schnaeke and others plunged in and drew him out As he reached the beach Mr. McKinnon threw his hands to his side and dropped on the sand.

Among the first to attend him were Dr. William A. Rodgers and "Tom Thorpe, once famous at Columbia in football. They were working over him and had called a pulmotor when the physician said it was useless, that his heart had collapsed under the strain and that he was dead.

Mr. McKinnons friends who had accompanied him to Long Beach had an undertaker take charge of the body. They went to the hotel to learn the identity of the young women for whom he had given his life, but they reported that all inforamtion was refused. They were informed, they said, that the management wanted nothing said about the affair, and that the young women did not wish their names to become known. Mr. McKinnon's friends said that so far as they were able to learn the young women and the hotel management did not inquire about the identity of the rescuer.

Popular in Columbia.

Mr. McKinnon was born in New London, Iowa, twenty-eight years ago. He was a son of John Q. M. McKinnon, now a resident of Mount Pleasant, Iowa. After being graduated from the Iowa Wesleyan College in 1908 he went to the University of Minnesota, where he was a member of the varsity football team and of the debating team.

After obtaining his bachelor of arts degree at the University of Minnesota he entered the Columbia University Law School and at once became a leader in the college life. He was a heavyweight on the Columbia wrestling team during his time at the university and as such won much distinction. He was a leading member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and even after being graduated in 1913 spent much of his time in that fraternity's house.

Upon finishing his law course Mr. McKinnon became associated with the law firm of Murray, Prentice & Howland, No. 37 Wall street.

FELL FROM LOAD OF HAY.

Farmer Overcome by Fit of Dizziness in the Barn.

St. Catharines, Ont., July 11.— The heat of last week is believed to be indirectly responsible for the death of Mr. Wesley Harris, a farmer, owner of the old Laws homestead, eight miles from here, who fell from a load of hay to the barn floor on Friday, fracturing his spine. He had been rushing work taking in an unusually heavy hay crop, and his fall is attributed to a momentary spell of dizziness. An operation was performed in the hospital here, removing a section of the fractured vertebra, and relieving pressure on the spinal cord, but death came Saturday morning due to the shock to the system. The body was taken to Rockwood, Ont., to-day for interment.

The late Mr. Harris was a graduate of the O. A. C., and a successful practical farmer He is survived by his widow and a three-year-old daughter.

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

OBITUARY

MAGGIE PAUL.

A death which cast a deep gloom over Central Smith was that of Maggie Paul, which occurred at the Isolation Hospital, Peterborough, on Wednesday morning, July 5th, 1916. The deceased child contracted diphtheria and was ill a very short time, having attended school up till Thursday previous, and taken part in the picnic on that day. Being a particularly bright, happy child, she was a general favourite. In the Gilmour Memorial Sunday School she will be deeply mourned by teachers and pupils alike. Little Maggie was ten years and five months' old, and had lived with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Paul of Smith, ever since her mother's demise, eight years ago. She also leavs to mourn her loss her father, Vincent Paul, and a sister and two brothers.

The family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WORRYING JIM

Oh, no, Jim's worrying didn't trouble me especially. I'd let him worry, and then I'd cheer him up. "Suppose butter had gone down to 29 cents," I'd say, "eggs may go up to 50 cents to-morrow. Smile, Jim, smile!"

Now, the first time I talked like that I suppose Jim would smile if only to please his bride, but there he sat, staring at his butter check, glummer than ever. But I soon found out he liked the nonsenical things I said, though he never took the trouble to show it.

I never saw a harder working man than my Jim. He and Ned Blake bought two of the best farms in town before they were 25 and started out to see which could pay off the mortgage first. But somehow or other, as the years rolled on Ned kept $100 or so ahead with his payments. It was sort of exasperating, for Jim always had his mind on the mortgage, and to hear Ned's great rollicking laugh you'd think he never had a care in the world. I said Jim was the hardest working man I knew. I suppose Ned really worked as hard, though he never made so many motions doing it.

Living with a worrying man grew to be as exciting as a game. I found so many little ways of helping Jim. When a small bill came in that he couldn't pay just then I learned to lay it aside until I'd sold my eggs. Then, with his bill in one hand and my check in the other, he couldn't find much to say. But there were times when Jim got ahead of me. He saw the mail first the day he received the highest tax bill we ever had. That evening you'd have thought he was reading the obituaries of all his relatives instead of the daily. "Jim," says I, looking up from the little coat I was mending, "why don't you go to bed?" "I can't go to sleep if I do," groaned Jim. "We never can pay those taxes without borrowing money."

"Well," says I, "go to bed and perhaps you will dream of a good place to borrow some." Pretty soon Jim threw down the paper for me to pick up and started off. Five minutes later I tiptoed into the bedroom and there he was sleeping like a child. I suppose 'twasn't much fun worrying with no one looking on.

I'd never seen Jim so light-hearted as he was the year we had the banner apple crop. Ned lost his best horse that fall, so we felt pretty sure he wouldn't be able to make the last payment on his mortgage, but then you never could tell how much money Ned had up his sleeve. Yet, next to Johnnie and me, Jim loved his orchard and the pride of his heart that year was the big Mackintosh red that stood by the roadside. I tried to make Jim pick off some of the apples, but he said we needed all the money we could get and propped up the branches until the tree looked like a centipede. There were $200 worth of apples right on that one Mackintosh, and every apple was as big and red and perfect as 12 years of pruning and spraying could make it.

Try as I would I couldn't get that tree off my mind one day when Jim went to town for grain. Half a dozen times during the afternoon I looked out to see if it was standing in the same place. For the sixth time I was telling myself how foolish I was acting when I heard someone at the barn. "Whoa, Prancer, whoa!" Johnnie was calling excitedly, and then I knew that he had forgotten again to shut the gate and was in for a good chase after his colt. Prancer did look pretty as he trotted around the corner of the house, his shining black mane and tail flying and his ears standing out erect. He saw me there on the piazza, and, like a flash, turned and galloped into the orchard, swung a circle and stopped in front of the Mackintosh red. Johnnie gave a wild halloo and started in pursuit. Prancer snatched off the third apple, whirled around, kicked up his heels and made for the farther side of the field. Two of the props under the largest branch fell with a thud; there was a creak and groan and the branch lay upon the ground, the apples scattering far and wide. And in less than an hour Jim would be driving within a rod of that tree!

I always tried to make something especially nice for dinner when Jim needed it the most. I could think of nothing he loved more than apple dumplings and started to pare some Mackintosh reds. Then I stopped. "Not to-day," says I, and stirred up his favourite spice pudding.

The worst moment I ever spent was when I saw Jim drive over the hill. I felt as if I wanted to put my arms around him and comfort him as I used to my little boy when he was hurt. When Jim saw what had happened he just leaned forward, staring his eyes out. Where Johnnie was I didn't know or wished to know. I couldn't stand it another minute and ran back to the kitchen to put the dinner on the table. Sooner than I expected Jim drove into the barn, and the next thing I knew he was hurrying up the back walk. I was so nervous by that time I had to run into the sitting-room to collect myself.

Before I'd fairly closed the door I heard Jim's voice. "Well, Martha, had quite an accident, didn't we?"

I sank into a chair and breathed hard for a minute. Jim spoke so cheerful I was sure he'd lost his reason. "Martha, Martha!" he called again. "How'd it happen?"

I found Jim at the table, dishing out a big helping of squash, and I told him.

"Well, it's too bad," says Jim, without a quiver, "spoils the looks of the tree—killed it, mebbe — but there's more coming on. Say, Martha, Ned paid off the last cent of his mortgage to-day, and he looks sick.

"Sick!" was all I could say in a kind of whisper, but Jim didn't know whether I'd answer or not.

"Ned drove home right ahead of me," he went on, "and I noticed he didn't act natural — never turned round to talk and joke as usual, and I thought maybe he was sick. When I couldn't stand it no longer I hollered and asked him what the matter was. Then he turned quick enough and talked right out."

"'Jim, this is the most miserable day I've spent since I bought my farm,' says he. 'I told you down to the store that I'd paid off the mortgage, and I have. Jim, I've been the happiest man alive making a payment every year, keeping up the interest and supporting my family on what was left. It was just like a game and I'm plumb lost without it. Of course, I can spend more than I can make on farm machinery, but that ain't like a mortgage to keep you hustling and happy.' Then Ned clicked up his horses and never whistled once going up the long hill."

Jim took the last hot biscuit and passed the plate to me. I filled it and set it back on the table, but I couldn't breathe a word.

Then Jim looked into my eyes and sort of smiled. "Tell you what, Martha," he says. "We've only $150 left on our mortgage and we're not so terribly old. Guess you'd better not worry any more about that Mackintosh red. Didn't happen to make apple dumplings for dessert, did you?"

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 128 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. GREEN, 832 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy.

If there is anything about which you would like special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

INSIDE THE PEARLY GATE.

Inside the pearly gate, what comfort rare,
To think that in the Heavenly Father's care,
Free from temptation and sin's evil snare,
Our darling waits awhile.

But lent to us a few short summers here,
Her gentle spirit blessed all near and dear
We bow in meek submission, without fear;
We give her back to God.

A lovely gift the Father had bestowed—
A voice to sing the praises of her God,
With angel choirs in Heavenly abode,
She sings the matchless song.

Her singing sweet gave comfort and delight;
Her smile would make the darkest places bright.
Her guileless ways were witness of the light
Of heavenly joy within.

The fragrance of her sweetlife lingers now;
It speaks to all: "To God renew your vow;
And some day hear the Saviour's "enter thou
Inside the Pearly Gate."

Shark Kills N. J. Bather

WHILE CLOSE TO SHORE AT SPRING LAKE.

Spring Lake, N. J., July 10.—Chas. Bruder, young and vigorous, one of the strongest swimmers along the beach, came from the pavilion in front of the New Monmouth Hotel, at the popular bathing hour, waded through the ebb tide surf, where scores of persons were frollicking, and struck out for the deep water beyond the life lines. More than 500 persons were sunning themselves on the sands or dipping in the breakers.

Suddenly a woman screamed. Then inarticulate she ran toward George White and Chris Anderson, the life guards. They looked seaward. Bruder's head and shoulders were no longer to be seen bobbing up and down. In a second or two as the life guards stared Bruder reappeared, one arm flung up, his mouth open as if he were trying to shout. All around him the hue of the water was changing from blue to red.

"He has upset!" she screamed. "The man in the red canoe has upset!"

White and Anderson, already shoving their boat into the surf, knew that the red blot on the water was not a reflection from an upturned canoe. They had seen Bruder forging into the long rollers. They guessed as they drove their boat toward him what they would find when they reached him.

White, leaning from the bow of the boat, gripped Bruder's arm. The man's eyes were closed. He was nearly unconscious. With what little strength he had left he whispered:

"Shark—shark got me—bit my legs off!"

He fainted. The life guards raised his body into the boat, and found it a light and easy task. Bruder was only a piece of a man. His left leg had been snapped off clean just above the knee. The right leg had been severed just below the knee. Under his left arm there was a gash which sank to the rib bones where the shark had made its first snatch at the swimmer.

White and Anderson drove the boat to shore with all the power that was in them, laid Bruder on a linen coat offered by a woman who shut her eyes as she did it, and did their best to keep the spark of life in the man so terribly hurt. Somebody had run for a doctor, but long before he could get to the beach Bruder was dead. He lived scarcely ten minutes after he was attacked.

Neither of the lifeguards had seen the maneater and neither had the slightest notion at there was danger from sharks in the bathing waters off Spring Lake. They like many others had read that a young man bathing at Beach Haven, N.J., last Sunday was attacked by a shark and lost a leg, but nobody here had given a second thought to possible shark perils.

There is a different feeling now. Old fishermen say that the shark that killed Bruder will continue to cruise off the beach looking for more victims, and that it will have to be destroyed if bathing here is to be safe.

A lump of soda added to a little hot water and added to the bluing water on wash day prevents the blue from settling in the clothes and makes them perfectly white.

Adopted Son Dies in Battle

NEW YORK, July 10.—A cable despatch from France received at the office of A. G. Spalding & Bros., of New York, announced that Lieutenant A. Goodwill Spalding, adopted son of the late A. G. Spalding, had been killed in the British offensive on July 1 while serving near Arras with the Inniskilling Fusiliers at the head of his company.

Lieutenant Spalding had many friends in this city and in Point Loma, Cal., where he spent the greater part of his life. He was born in England in 1891 and when he was an infant his parents went with him to Point Loma, where Mr. Spalding had his summer home. Mr. Spalding saw the child one day and a few weeks later adopted the boy. He studied in Point Loma until he was twenty-one years old, when he made a tour of the world, finally locating in Paris, where he represented the firm of A. G. Spalding & Bros. until the outbreak of the war.

Returning to England, Spalding enlisted with the Coldstream Guards and in December, 1915, he was promoted to lieutenant for meritorious services at the battle front. A few weeks later he was transferred to the Inniskilling Fusiliers. He corresponded frequently with friends in this city, and the last letter received from him was dated on June 18, when he wrote that he was kept busy and that "mighty things" would be doing on the western front before many days had elapsed."

Lieutenant Spalding fell heir to $100,000 under the will of Mr. Spalding, who died in California on September 9, 1915, leaving an estate worth nearly $1,000,000. On January 1 of this year he filed a contest of the will, alleging a conspiracy between Mrs. Elizabeth Churchill Spalding, widow of the manufacturer, and Mrs. Katherine Tingley, head of the Raja Yoga Theosophical Institute at Point Loma. Among other accusations made by him was that by reason of this conspiracy he was deprived of his share of the big estate. The contest is now pending in the California courts.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting [illegible]

Jack's Short Weight.—In a much patronized canteen in one of our big naval ports small pieces of cheese put on to "make weight" are familiarly known as "jockeys." "'Ere, d'ye call this two penn'orth of cheese?" demanded a massive bluejacket indignantly after being served with a rather smalled portion of cheese than usual. "Sorry, Jack," was the soothing answer, "but the jockey must have fallen off." "Jockey be jiggered!" cried the brawny tar, glaring wrathfully at the offending bit of cheese. "I think the bloomin' 'orse 'as fallen down an' lefs the jockey standin'!"—H.M.

The above diagram shows the mental figure which the Italian higher command must constantly have before it when considering the position of the campaign in the north. The four great subdivisions of the line are:—Trentino, Cadore, Carnia and Isonzo, stretching from the Swiss border down to Monfalcone, on the shore of the Adriatic Sea.

A STEADY ADVANCE ALONG THE WHOLE FIGHTING LINE—THE ITALIAN POSITIONS ON JUNE 10, 1915, AND ON MAY 10, 1916.

The gray line indicates the positions held by the Italians soon after the outbreak of war with Austria—on June 10, 1915. For most of its course the line closely follows the political boundary except in the Garda, Fiera di Primeto and Plezzo regions. Here the Italians forced the pace from the beginning of hostilities. Since that time, however, considerable progress has been made. The Italian line now embraces Monfalcone, a good part of the Carso plateau before Gorizia, Cortina and Monte Cristallo, Borgo and the formidable Trentino salient before Ro[illegible]. Along those sectors of the line where no apparent progress has been made the nature of the country is such as to make a vigorous forward movement very difficult.

Miss Melissa Alford returned home to Lakefield on Thursday, after a short vacation in town, the guest of Miss Madge Curtis.

Well-known Women.

Chatham, Ont.—"I was sick for about four years. Got very weak, could not eat to amount to anything. I got very thin and had no strength at all. I was very much discouraged at times—thought I was never going to get better. I could not walk a block without feeling all tired-out. I took different medicines but did not get the help I needed. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I began to take it with the 'Pleasant Pellets' and by the time I had taken two bottles I was well on the road to recovery, and in six months I was entirely well. My appetite came back and I gained in flesh. Now I am as strong and healthy as any one could wish to be. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines and I am glad of the opportunity to give testimony in their favor; they have done wonders for me."—Miss Thelma Parker, 141 E. King St.

Chatham, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicine with good results. I was weak and run down, lost my appetite and got very thin. I took 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets' and these two medicines built me up in a very short space of time so that I felt as well as ever. I found them to be all that is recommended of them; they are good."—Mrs. Wm. Wyman, Cor. Taylor & Grand Ave., E., Chatham, Ont.

Every woman who has backache, headache, low spirits, sleepless nights, owes it to herself to speedily overcome the trouble before a breakdown causes prostration.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a non-alcoholic remedy that any ailing woman can safely take because it is prepared from roots and herbs with pure glycerine, containing tonic properties.

The Summer "Life-Savers" are fruit, cereals and green vegetables. Meat in Summer overtaxes the liver and kidneys, potatoes cause intestinal fermentation. Get away from the heavy Winter diet; give Nature a chance. One or two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, served with milk or cream or fresh fruit, make a deliciously nourishing, satisfying meal. Such a diet means good digestion, good health and plenty of strength for the day's work. All the goodness of the wheat in a digestible form. FAMILY DOCTOR'S GOOD ADVICE

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Because They Did Her Good

Rochon, P. Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with "Fruit-a-tives".

I consider that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches—'try Fruit-a-tives' and you will get well". CORINE GAUDREAU.

PROBE HAMPSHIRE RUMORS

London, July —In the House of Commons Sir R. Cooper urged that a court martial be held on the loss of the cruiser Hampshire to quell the disquieting rumors. He stated that the survivors were not agreed as to the cause of the disaster. There is no evidence, he said, that Earl Kitchener is dead. Cooper asked if it is true that some of the bodies recovered were burned by acid, and that the survivors were under arrest. He was told that the survivors were agreed regarding the cause of the wreck. The other rumors it is said will be investigated.

Avoid Harsh Pills! Doctors Condemn Them

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Where the Sun sets in the East. — Mr. Swankley had been a great traveller, and his trouble was that he could not keep quiet about it. Everything that happened reminded him of something else that took place in Timbuctoo or the Cannibal Islands. His friend Martin was admiring a very beautiful sunset one evening. "Ah," said Swankley, "you should see the sunsets in the east!" "I should like to very much," said Martin. "The sun always sets in the west in this ordinary old country."

INFLAMED ECZEMA ON BOY'S FACE

Healed by Cuticura Trial Free

"My boy had eczema on his face. It began with little pimples around his eye. His face itched and burned so that he kept scratching it most of the time. He kept it irritated and his skin was inflamed. I was up with him every night. I thought he would lose one eye. Finally I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In two weeks he was well." NAIL-BITING.

Nail-biting can be cured by will power alone in older persons, as it comes from nervousness. With children, dip the ends of the fingers in quinine or a little quassia. Oil of mustard is also employed, but this is dangerous, as children sometimes rub their eyes.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Wireless Instrument in Barriefield Camp May Reveal German Secret.

Kingston, Ont., July 10.— An important discovery was made at Barriefield on Saturday, and by it is believed the secret of how Germans have been able to get the contents of messages sent from the allies' headquarters to the front line, has been found. Working at his instrument at Barriefield on Saturday Sgt. Hycks heard a message which he knew could not be sent from any wireless station within his receiving limits. It was a lesson in the Morse code. He came to the conclusion that it must be from the buzer that was working in another tent ninety feet away. The electricity which was passing over the buzzer wire was being absorbed and became active over the wireless apparatus. This is undoubtedly what the Germans have long known and used in many cases to gain advantage against the allies. An order to advance would become known to them instantly as well as many other things they should not know. Great importance is attached to the discovery in official circles.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

When we have a dress of simple loveliness put before us, as the one in the illustration, No. 7,847 is, words are not really necessary for one to notice its good points. The picture tells the story and this is more often so with children's garments than with those for adults, for one model seems to surpass another in artistic merit.

This one is exceptionally good for a combination of materials; it stands out as a "fetching little frock" for these reasons; it is cut in one piece, indicating that any amateur can develop it without effort; the shoulder straps of plaid material cut bias provide novelty and the finish of the sleeve is in harmony. The belt, run through lengthwise slashes at a lowered waist line, is also of the plaided goods cut bias. The closing is at the back and either long or short sleeves will be correct style.

There are many fabrics of which such a dress may be made, the most durable being repp, ratine, linen, galatea and gingham.

The pattern, No. 7,847, is cut in sizes two, four and six years. To make in the medium size will require 1¾ yard of 36 inch plain material, and one-half yard of 36 inch plaid goods to trim.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Allies' Steam Roller Moving On Schedule

Today's Lull Is To Make Preparations

IRISH FUSILIERS PENETRATE GERMAN TRENCHES NEAR LOOS

General Haig Reports Successful Exploits---Allied Offensive Has Netted Twenty-Three Villages, 19,000 Prisoners, 104 Cannon and Several Hundred Machine Guns---Quiet Night on the Somme Front is French Report.

ENGLISH COST TOWN BOMBARDED

LONDON, July 12.—A party of Irish Fusiliers penetrated German trenches at a strongly held position southeast of Loos last night dispersing its defenders, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon. They remained twenty minutes, made important observations, and retired with slight losses. Since the beginning of the Allied offensive the British and French forces have captured 23 villages, 19,000 prisoners, 104 cannon, and several hundred machine guns.

PARIS, July 12.—The Allies' great steam roller is moving eastward through the German lines exactly on schedule time. The lull in the fighting on the Somme front reported in to-day's official statement was marked down in advance on the time-table of the Allied offensive. Just as any other steam roller, it must pause to take on coal and for levelling of the road ahead. The Anglo-French steam roller is preparing for the next infantry rush.

LONDON, July 12.—German troops regained some of the lost ground in the fighting last night between Mametz and Trones Woods, east of Albert, but all other enemy attacks were beaten off with heavy enemy losses, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon. General Haig reported that the Germans have been heavily reinforced.

WILSON'S POLICY UNCHANGED.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Wilson's course in regard to the British blockade will in no way be influenced by internal politics in Germany or German threats that the submarine war will be renewed unless England is brought to book. The United States is doing everything in its power to meet the British blockade, and already has caused it to be realized in some particulars.

English Coast Town Bombarded By Sub.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 12.—The English coast town of Seaham Harbour, in Durham, was bombarded during the night by an enemy submarine, the War Office announced this afternoon. One woman was killed.

This is the first time in the war that German subs have bombarded the British coast.

A Calm Night on Both Sides of Somme

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 12.—The night was calm on both banks of the Somme last night, said an official statement dealing with the Anglo-French offensive.

Strong Movement to Oust Von Hollweg

Special to the Examiner:

BERLIN, July 12.—The overthrow of Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, champion of a conciliatory policy toward the United States, and the unloosing of all German submarines without restrictions within three months, was predicted by Von tirpitz supporters here to-day, unless President Wilson acts against the British blockade immediately. Members of the Conservative party and those favouring the annexation of territory conquered by Germany, joined in this forecast. The fight to oust the Chancellor, the beginning of which was reported in United Press despatches a few weeks ago, has now grown to such proportions that it overshadows in interest the Allied offensive. The attacks on the Chancellor have gradually grown bolder since the appearance of Prince Bulow's book "Deutsche Politik," because this book is believed to be the opening of Bulow's campaign to oust the Chancellor and step back into the position he filled until succeeded by Bethmann-Hollweg.

Conditions Are Normal Now at Borden

Special to The Examiner:

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 12.—More in spirit of frolic than from ugliness, like the night before, some of the troops raided the station restaurant last night and a considerable quantity of ice cream and confectionary disappeared. Outside of this there was quietness during the night and this morning things seemed about normal. To give the battalions a chance to clean up and settle down in their new lines, General Logie has called off the regular schedule of training for two days.

MOUNT JOLIAN WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Miss Gertrude Gray of Toronto, who is well and favourably known as an Institute lecturer, addressed the Women's Institute at Mt. Julian on July 6th instead of Mrs. Woelard, who was prevented from coming by the death of a relative, and proved an able substitute. Miss Gray is a graduate in Domestic Science with a wide experience in her work in Ontario and the United States.

The subject of her lecture was Women's Work, Past and Present, also Red Cross work. She took her audience back to ancient times and described the leading part women have always taken in the pursuits of the different periods of the world's history up to the present time. Along with this she gave an interesting account of Red Cross work and what some of the Women's Institutes of this province have been doing in connection with it.

We appreciate very much the delegates sent to us by the Department and find them a help, coming as they do from beyond our own little circle, and telling us of methods used in other parts of the province.

Our Institute holds regular monthly meetings, and although the members are much scattered, very seldom has a meeting been missed since its formation.

We have several non-resident members who are now and again present with us and enjoy the social side of our life and the discussions on practical matters.

Several of the members favoured us also with select readings and four little girls sang a pleasing chorus.

A letter was read from the secretary of a French hospital asking for aid and in response to this appeal five dollars was given as a donation.

A vote of thanks was heartily tendered to Miss Gray, after which tea was served by our hostess, Mrs. Albert Reid.

A NEW BATTALION FOR PETERBORO IS PROBABLE NOW

Deputation Saw Sir Sam Hughes at Borden Camp Yesterday in Regard to New Unit—Are Conferring With Col. Hemming To-day

A WIRE FROM THE MAYOR

A telegram received by Ald. Dobbin this morning from Mayor Duffus, indicates that the mission on which he and others went to Borden Camp to see the Minister of Militia will likely prove to be successful. Evidently the Minister is favourable to the proposition to raise in the city and district another battalion. Mayor Duffus says:

"Our deputation from Peterborough city and county, consisting of Reeve Squire of Norwood, City Clerk and myself, had a most satisfactory interview with Hon. Sir Sam Hughes, at Camp Borden, to-day, re Peterborough. We are going through to Kingston to-night to confer with Col. Hemming, district officer commanding. Will see him to-morrow. Regret we cannot get back before Thursday. Give visiting brethren a right royal welcome and do everything you can to facilitate their visit."

Jos. J. Duffus, Mayor.

Promised To Stay Sober To-day

The young Havelock lad who was suspected of being a deserter came before the Police Magistrate this morning on a charge of drunkenness, and was discharged after being given a warning and some good advice. The local police communicated with Mr. Mathewson, J.P., Havelock, and it was learned that the lad had secured his discharge. "Keep away from men who think it great fun to make fools of themselves" was His Worship's injunction in giving him his freedom.

An Apsley giant who fell into the hands of the local police guardians whilst he was in a drunken condition, was also discharged, his past record being a good one as far as local police annals were concerned. He was given his liberty in exchange for his promise to keep sober throughout the hot and glorious Twelfth.

DEATHS.

SARGENT.—On July 11, 1916, at the residence of his son, Thomas E. Sargent, Con. 10, Lot 28, Otonabee, Samuel Sargent, in his 90th year. Funeral will take place from the home of his son, on Thursday, at 2.30 to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at house at 2 o'clock.

FINE WORK BY LOCAL BOY

Sergt. A. McBride Who Gets Military Medal Repaired His Gun and Kept It in Action Under A Heavy Fire.

PETERBORO BOY'S HIT

In a letter to his wife, written on June 26, Sergt. Archie McBride, a Peterborough member of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., tells her how he won the military medal. Sergt. McBride says in part:

I came out of the big battle all right, but I had some close shells at my feet and splinters all around me, but came through all right. I have just come down to the waggon line for a few days' rest. It made me feel bad to see my corporal and bombardiers killed. They were both hit with the same shell. I was at the waggon line two days when the word came to me to go up to the guns as my gun crew were all gone. My limber gunner got fourteen wounds in him. The name of the corporal that was killed was Jim Chandler and my limber gunner was Bill Clarke. He was wounded. Clarke comes from Ashburnham and Chandler from Peterborough. They are both well known there. We had five guns put out of action in the last two weeks, but we are holding our gun. You have heard by this time that I have got the military medal. You can say you are the proudest woman in town as I am the first one from Peterborough to win it. I got it for good work I did with my gun in the first line trenches. The firing pin and main spring broke and I stayed and fixed it and went into action again in a few minutes, with the big shells bursting all around me and the rifle bullets hitting the gun and passing my ears. I did not get a scratch on me. We were only commencing firing when three of the men on the gun were killed and our officer was wounded, while the gun had one wheel blown up and was nearly all smashed up. I have been told that I am going on a twelve days' leave to Buckingham Palace to receive my medal from the King.

I like the work all right. I have just got a new gun. They put a 4.1 shell right on my old gun and put it out of business for good.

Body Found In The River

Mystery Surrounding Disappearance of George Stephenson Cleared Up

The body of the late George Stephenson, an inmate of the Protestant Home, who was missing for a few months, was recovered yesterday afternoon. It will be remembered that Stephenson was missed from the Home, and had been seen last up near the Auburn Power House shortly after, and had not been seen after.

The body of the unfortunate man was noticed floating down the river near the foot of Antrim Street yesterday afternoon by Mr. E. Elcombe, who telephoned to the police. Police Constables Blade and Pratt secured a punt and brought the body in to shore at Harvey Street. It was very badly decomposed.

The body of the man was identified by Mr. Harry Rush and by two inmates of the Home.

Coroner Greer was notified, and declared an inquest to be unnecessary.

Interment took place this morning to Little Lake Cemetery.

91 IN THE SHADE AT NOON TO-DAY

The Hottest Day of the Year Is the Official Report

To-day will likely prove to be one of the warmest days of the year. At noon the official temperature reading was 91 degrees in the shade. Last night was also very warm; the lowest the termometer went was 70 deg. This is about 15 to 20 degrees higher than usual for a night temperature.—W.P.

Several Thousand Orangemen Participate In Celebration

226th Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne Was Duly Observed in the City To-day—A Record Crowd Witnessed the Monster Parade.

LOTS OF MUSIC

The ghost of King William must have looked down upon to-day's Orange celebration with considerable pride as many thousand loyal Orangemen flocked into the city in commemoration of the 226th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. By this evening the gaily decorated banners and regalia of the Orangemen will once more have found a resting place in the innumerable lodge quarters that are so plentifully distributed throughout this section of Ontario, and all the ostentation that forms part of an Orange celebration will be forgotten for another year. To-day's parade was undoubtedly one of the best that has been seen in Peterborough since Orange demonstrations first had their inception here, and it is a safe conclusion that there was at least fifteen thousand Orangemen in the monster parade that was held shortly after one o'clock. Thousands of spectators watched the monster procession as it marched through the principal streets of the city, and not until the sun was preparing to take its final plunge over the distant hills in the west did the rattle of the drums subside into sporadic activity.

At Central Park.

Central Park was the great concentration camp of the Orangemen. From early morning until the hour set for the parade, the park, which until a few weeks ago was the parade ground of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, was transformed into a sea of orange hue, intermingled with splashes of blue, red and many other colours. The lodges assembled under the leadership of their respective directors, and sweltered in the sun, while a big good-natured crowd of spectators looked on with admiring eyes. After the parade the Orangemen returned to the park, where they were met by a representation of the City Council, headed by Ald. F. H. Dobbin, chairman of the Reception Committee of the Council, who extended the visitors the freedom of the city. This done, a few speeches followed, after which the big gathering broke up into sections, and towards evening took their departure for their respective homes. Despite the excessive heat, only a few casualties were reported. A few of the older members of the Order were compelled to retire from the scene of activity owing to the heat.

A RECORD CROWD.

A small section of the parade made its initial appearance on George street shortly after eight o'clock this morning, and after that the Orangemen paraded at intermittent intervals throughout the morning or until the hour set for the big march-out. Each lodge as it arrived in the city paraded to Central Park, where banners and other regalia was deposited. Towards noon it was plainly evident that a record breaking crowd was in prospect. The main thoroughfares were crowded to the limit, and in some sections of the city standing room was at a premium. Each train was met by a reception committee composed of one or more of the local lodges accompanied by a band, and escorted to Central Park. Between fifteen and twenty trains carried the Orangemen to the city, and by noon it was estimated there was at least fifteen thousand Orangemen in the city. Among the larger delegations was one from Bethany, which arrived shortly after 11 o'clock.

THE PARADE.

The big parade, in charge of County Master E. F. Reid, left Central Park at 1.30, and after marching through the principal streets of the city, returned to the park where a number of addresses were delivered, and the freedom of the city extended to the visitors. The Deputy Marshall of the parade was Mr. Robt. Wil-

SEVEN MEMBERS OF MOUNTED RIFLES ARE REPORTED PRISONERS

Ottawa Notifies Relatives That Missing Men are Prisoners at Pulmen---Pte. Geo. Ezra Reid Has Succumbed to His Wounds-----List of 93rd Men Who Have Been Rejected as Medically Unfit---General Military News.

Relatives of seven Peterborough members of the Canadian Mounted Rifles who were officially reported missing a short time ago, have received word from Ottawa this morning that the missing men are prisoners of war at Rulmen, Germany. In the majority of cases the news had already been received in the shape of postcards from the boys themselves. The list reported by Ottawa is as follows:

Pte. Harold Devins.
Pte. Harold Lawrence.
Pte. Harold Martin.
Pte. B. F. Cassan.
Pte. Geo. Hutchinson.
Pte. Cornelius Orford.
Pte. Hunter Godfrey.

Mrs. Geo. E. Reed has received word this morning that her husband, Pte. George Ezra Reed, who enlisted here with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., early last year, died of wounds in No. 9 Canadian Field Ambulance, on June 3. Pte. Reed had twice been reported wounded. His wife and family reside here. He was an estimable citizen and a good soldier and a wide circle of friends will hear of his death with much regret.

Lance Corporal R. Gifford, who, a few days ago was reported killed in action, and who was a member of the 21st Battalion, 2nd Canadian contingent, is the first Peterborough member of the Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, out of forty-five, who have enlisted, to be killed at the front. Several members have been wounded. Lance Corporal Gifford resided with Mr. Fred Smith, 48 Lafayette Avenue. He was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company's Works. Private Victor Gifford of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Contingent, is a brother. He has been reported wounded.

A big draft of men discharged in the final medical examination from the 93rd Battalion as medically unfit arrived home from Barriefield this morning and are back in civilian garb today much to the regret and discusses of the majority at least. Some of them were discharged as being over age and others as under size or under age. Following is a list of the N.C.O's and men who have been struck off the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion C.E.F. having been found medically unfit by the Medical Board.

N. PERTH'S VERDICT,

At this distance the turnover in North Perth looks like a rebuke to the riding's federal member, H. J. Morphy, as much as anything else. Mr. Morphy has recently become quite "strong" on the language question, so far as strength is indicated by abuse. Mr. Morphy abused the French Canadians both here and at home; he abused the civil service; and he abused the Liberals during the campaign alleging they pandered to the German vote. But the people right at home gave Mr. Morphy his answer; that answer being the most complete and emphatic a public man can hope for.—Ottawa Free Press.

DAMAGE TO SHADE TREES.

A case of much interest to the property owners of Ontario was recently decided at Omemee, Ont., relating to the rights of property owners in the trees on the highway adjoining their premises. The tree in question was in front of the residence of Mrs. Edward, mother of Mr. Jas. Edward, divisional and freight agent of the G. T. R. at Ottawa. A neighbour complained to the town council that the tree had grown so large as to injure the draft of his chimney. The council, without investigation ordered one of its employees to trim the tree. Mrs. Edward sued the municipality for damages. The case was heard by Judge McMillan who awarded the plaintiff $15 and costs, by the terms of the Municipal Act, Section 487. The judge contended that ten days' notice should have been given to the plaintiff.

Another instructive case came before the Ottawa Police Magistrate recently. A teamster damaged a city shade tree by wilfully backing his wagon against it. It was one of the first of the sort to be heard in Ottawa. The magistrate decided that an example should be made and he sentenced the driver to pay a fine of $5 and $2 costs or one week in jail.

These decisions are interesting to those who are suffering from damage done to trees by corporation employees, linemen and others.—Canadian Forestry Journal.

IT PUZZLED MOMMSEN.

Mommsen, the great German historian of Rome, once remarked that he had never completed his history by carrying it through the imperial period because he could never make up his mind as to what caused the disintegration and downfall of Roman civilization.

This confession is not one of ignorance, because Mommsen united a historical genius, equal perhaps to Gibbons', with a knowledge of antiquity that was denied even Gibbon, who lived a century earlier. And if Mommsen felt himself unable to arrive at a conclusion, we may ourselves judge how valueless are the generalisations of others than Mommsen concerning the causes of the decline and fall of the Roman Empire.

Gibbon in his immortal work, admittedly the most comprehensive and and brilliant of all histories, presents a wonderful picture of that vast Mediterranean civilization gradually disintegrating and finally extinguished. It is a fair picture on the whole, which all the researches of scholars since his time have rather confirmed than impeached. Yet it is to be doubted whether Gibbon himself thought he knew accurately the causes of that civilization's death. He magnificently traced rather than adequately explained the decline.

The discoveries of such men as Flinders Petrie in our own time have convinced historical students of the existence of advanced prehistoric civilizations in the Mediterranean basin. Petrie has proved the vast antiquity of the civilization upon the Nile, while it is known that underneath the civilizations upon the Tigris and Euphrates, those of Nineveh and Babylon, there lies a prehistoric civilization perhaps even superior to them.

Petrie distinguishes six or seven cycles of civilization, each of which after a period of flourishment disintegrated. Whatever the causes of those successive destructions, the fact is incontrovertible. And Petrie even feels justified in hinting the operation of a law of civilization and decay.

"The Law of Civilization and Decay" is the title of one of the most brilliant books of our time, written by Brooks Adams. We do not have to accept Adam's exposition of the causes compelling development and decay in order to recognize the fact of such devolution. Adams treats only of historic civilization, but he shows how between the ancient Mediterranean civilization and our own interval of a thousand years of semi-barbarism.

If there is such a law, will our modern civilization exemplify its process again or prove an exception. Have we reason to be confident that we are exempt from what neither Greek nor Roman avoided? One peril certainly is obsolete. Our civilization cannot be overwhelmed by barbarians, inasmuch as our military machinery is perfected. But, as it may be that Rome perished from internal desiccation, registered rather than caused by barbarian assaults, we cannot be sure of our immunity.

Faith in our immunity is foolish. If we survive, we shall not do so by the favour of the Providence or by the grace of anything save our own courage, wisdom and resourcefulness. There are those in Europe to-day, Max Nordau conspicuously, who see the impending destruction of Europe. Their pessimism is too much for our American optimism. But the war, at least, shows what can happen.

It behooves this nation to gird up its loins, to stop frivolty and corruption, to take counsel of its wisdom, to conserve, to prepare, to arm.—Minneapolis Journal.

Press Comment. On North Perth

Bacchus did it.—Hamilton Spectator.

As Mr. Hay is a pronounced supporter of Mr. Rowell's prohibition policy in no sense can the verdict be a triumph for the liquor interests.

The people have come to realize that the real leader of the government is Mr. Rowell, the head of the opposition.—Brantford Expositor.

Were any provincial general election to come in the near future, the result might possibly be the overthrow of the government's present large majority in the Legislature.—Ottawa Journal (Con.)

Sincerity and patriotic unselfishness such as Premier Hearst typifies is still in advance of the political life of Ontario. That is one great lesson from the defeat of the Conservative candidate in North Perth on Monday.—Stratford Herald (Cons.)

The election of Mr. Hay will be a distinct shock to both the Hearst and the Borden governments. The fact is that the people have become weary of both the Ottawa and Ontario governments and will vote a want of confidence in them on the first opportunity that offers itself.—Kingston Whig.

We know that in Hamilton, on account of the government's sudden change of front on the prohibition question, hundreds of Conservatives have declared that they will not again vote for a candidate of the Hearst government.—Hamilton Herald (Ind.)

It will serve notice on the McGarry—Lucas and Co. outfit that they will have to form themselves into a ways and means committee for the next election—that they will have to get the fixers into operation before the whole outfit is trotted to the polls.—Guelph Mercury.

The apathy of the Ontario Government to the Hydro development scheme, and the treatment meted out to Sir Adam Beck, at the last session were not forgotten by the electors of North Perth, who are warm supporters of the Hydro scheme. There is not the same confidence existing in the present Cabinet as there was when the late Premier Whitney supported Sir Adam Beck.—Berlin Telegraph.

The breakdown of appeals to class and racial prejudices must have been particularly disappointing to the Conservatives, because it leaves them with nothing but their record to go upon and that is enough to defeat any government.—Montreal Herald.

CIGARETTES IN DEMAND.

One Effect of the War Upon Smoking In Canada.

Ottawa, July 11. — The war has caused a tremendous increase in the consumption of cigarettes in Canada. In the last fiscal year, according to figures last issued entered for consumption at the Inland Revenues Department was 1,169,097,845. Of this quantity 86,936,545 were entered under the head of "Army and Navy Stores," and in respect of them the Government derived no revenue whatever. Under the same head 49,900 "heavy cigarettes were consumed and 95,383 pounds of tobacco.

The general consumption of cigarettes, apart from those used by the army, was 1,081,161,300 as compared with 1,090,125,996 last year. Tobacco used totalled 20,146,583 pounds, a slight falling off compared with last year.

COMPULSION ACT ADDED 600,000 TO BRITISH ARMY

EVEN CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR MUST DO IS BIT AS NON-COMBATANT.

LONDON, July 11.—Great Britain has become a nation of militarism.

All but a negligible quantity of male Britishers between the ages of eighteen and forty-one to-day automatically became soldiers for the duration of the war, under the Military Compulsion Act. They are the army of reserve and will become trained units as fast as the military authorities can put them through the necessary steps.

It is estimated that upwards of 600,000 are thus added to the military forces. Between 350,000 and 400,000 are under nineteen. The remainder is divided between married and single men who have held back mainly for family or business reasons.

Beginning to-day every man walking the streets or highways of Great Britain excluding Ireland, is subject to challege by a police constable and must produce his certificates of military exemption forthwith or face the consequences.

But few are free under the Compulsion Act. Total exemption is openly granted only to clergymen, exchaged prisoners of war and the medically unfit. From to-day onward for thirty days, hundreds of tribunals throughout the country will consider the last applications for exemption. It has been previously announced that absolute freedom from military service cannot be granted to those pleading "serious hardships."

HARDSHIPS NO EXCUSE

Hence the tradesmen must leave his shop, the professional man his office, the manufacturer his plant, and the husband his home, despite business or domestic hardship. The conscientious objector, if his objections are proved genuine to the satisfaction of the tribunal, must serve in a non-combatant capacity. Even the Government employe must prove that his services are idispensable to the nation.

British railway stations, especially those of the larger cities, have taken on a new aspect. More women and children crowded the platforms than ever before. It was like a Sunday school picnic, except that tears and good-byes took the place of laughter and joy as the first drafts of the conscript army started toward the training camps.

In the big London railway stations, husbands and fathers inevitably loaded with more baggage than army law allows, remained on the platforms until the trains were ready to go, bidding good-bye to their wives and children. Heartrendering scenes were enacted. Trains steamed out and thousands of persons stepped into strange paths in which they will continue to walk until peace brings Great Britain back to normal balance.

FURNITURE STORED.

During the past month, millions of pieces of furniture have been packed in thousands of British homes and put into storage. The Government lightened the load of the married conscript in this respect. Local authorities are empowered by Parliament to store the household effects free and pay a reasonable charge for the cartage and insurance.

There are many empty houses for rent in England, Scotland and Wales than at any time before in years. The married soldiers' family in nine cases has not attempted to keep the home fires burning. Wives and children have gone back to the "old folks" or into lodgings. They will make out on the Government allowance that goes to every soldier's wife and children. In exceptional cases the local authorities are empowered by the Government to offer funds—the amount to be decided by the barest needs.

Every day for weeks the railway stations, and the homes will go through what started to-day—unless peace puts an end to it.

MILITARY NEWS

his ability to do his work, everyman had to stand up to an even stricter examination than he went through at Peterborough when enlisting to determine his medical fitness. Few have been discharged, but some of them could ill be spared from the unit. One of the best sergeants in the battalion, a man who was on the Bisley team, and was in the finals for the King's individual championship, was turned down. It seems hard, but the medical board are only holding to regulations, which, however, seems to be rather strict. No leeway is given to the examining officers, and with regret Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston has had to have discharge papers made out for some of his best men.

These men were examined in Peterborough by two officers of the Army Medical Corps, but later developments made them unfit according to the strict test now being conducted. Men who have been doing the very best of work and won rapid promotion have had to be discarded because of some physical defect not previously discovered.

It is, however, a compliment to Col. Johnston's command that so many have been able to pass in spite of the harshness of the test every man was put through. Only a fraction of one per cent. had to be discharged, but it seemed that the men on that list were the most valuable to the battalion.

KINGSTON, July 12.—The parade service at Barriefield Camp on Sunday morning was unusually impressive, being a united camp service with five battalions and several detachments present; considerably over 4,000 soldiers in all.

The service was taken by Chaplain Capt. Dodds, of the 155th, the Scripture read by Capt. Hagan, of the 156th, while Major Davidson, senior chaplain of the 93rd, soon to go overseas, gave a brief address. It was founded on Acts ii., 10, "And Paul preached to them ready to depart on the morrow." "Like St. Luke," said the preacher, "soldiers travelled right." Having made the great renunciation and set out on a rough and dangerous path, and being given over to assist a noble enterprise, the soldiers' life was most favourable for the reception of the strenuous and exciting call of the Gospel to leave all and follow Christ in the narrow way. Loyal to the King, the soldier should be able to cultivate a loyalty to Christ. Higher and in line with the kingdom of Britain was the kingdom of Heaven, and no soldier should stop short of membership in it. Once in union with the Saviour, who stood so close, the soldier should never allow his line of communication with the source of strength to be cut. He should be ready for the dangers immediately before him as well as for his unknown journey's end whatever that might be. A soldier's training should qualify him to make a success of religion which was possibly more valuable and important to him from the difficulties and uncertainties of his life.

Before his address the speaker referred to courtesies and skilful and kindly direction of the commandant and the departmental officers.

No reference was made to the time of departure of any units except the suggestion that naturally it might come at any time for any one of them. While often personally unknown, they had all enjoyed a comradeship as soldiers of the Empire.

FACTORY FOR ST. THOMAS.

St. Thomas, July 11.—The city council has passed through its initial stage the proposal of the Monarch Knitting Company, of Dunnville and St. Thomas, to erect a $50,000 hosiery factory here and to employ 200 hands within the year, in return for a $30,000 loan and fixed assessment for $10,000. The company has just paid off a similar loan made in return for the location of a knitting and spinning factory here. F. R. Lalor and J. A. Burns represented the company.

WEEDING OUT SPIES GIVES THE TRAVELLER MANY TRYING MOMENTS

London, July 11.—Beyond dodging half a dozen floating mines and scraping the hull of a sunken Belgian relief ship, we had no adventures on the way across the perilous North Sea. Our troubles were to come after we were safely warped to the quay at Gravesend.

"We should catch the 6.5 up to town," cheerfully remarked a Red Cross man as the customs officer chalked his bag and bandages.

"It's the 7.15 for my money," put in a much-travelled American, who together with his wife, had come from Petrograd through Germany. "And vurry interesting it was, sir, some trip that journey across Germany."

With the exception of the Red Cross man, who had been attending German exchanged prisoners, a young girl who had been in service, and myself, returning home after 18 months in Holland, the passengers were aliens or neutrals—Belgians, Dutch, Americans, Swedes and one Spaniard. We were all smiles when the boat nestled against the quay. Not even the confiscation of two boxes of cigars could take the pleased grin from the faces of two Belgian recruits seeing England for the first time. Those who knew London were talking of dinner at this or that restaurant; strangers to the mighty city were making plans for an exciting evening of exploration.

WATCHFUL WAITING.

Full of enthusiastic expectancy we marched up the gangway, past a grey-haired sentry, spare and wiry in his khaki, and were delivered into the hands of a slim youth who divided his attention between our passports and a cigarette. We fell into Indian file, headed by a small Dutchman with a white hat, who was on his way to South Africa. Other slim youths smoked cigarettes and inspected us impassively. I was the ninth in the line and I rashly concluded that an hour at the most would see me in the train travelling dinnerwards.

The hour passed and nothing happened. The Dutchman in the white hat fidgeted in the doorway, the American traveller expressed opinions which made his wife whisper "Hush!" several nuns told and re-told their beads, and the slim young man smoked endless cigarettes.

Suddenly I missed the Red Cross man, and a well known American journalist just ahead of me in the line remarked on the disappearance of a Belgian priest. The travelled American investigated, and could not account for the black-whiskered Belgian who had stepped on his toe coming along the gangway. Then, and not till then, the truth flashed upon us: a system of preferential selection was at work. It was not a case of first come first served; the cigarette smoking youths were weeding us out, and our spirits fell even as our appetites grew.

"SPIES FIRST!"

"Perhaps they are taking the spies first," remarked the girl from Breda. The idea was reassuring but only for a moment. The Red Cross man was no spy. The travelled American let himself go, and his wife said "Hush!" every two seconds: the American journalist said, "Let's see it through." I said, "Let's," and stared steadily at the Dutchman's white hat.

Suddenly the hat and its owner disappeared through the door and with the glow of rising hope we followed, only to find ourselves in a small, bare, dusty ante-room. The girl from Breda promptly confiscated the only chair, the wife of the travelled American sat on the table, and continued to say, "Hush!" at short and regular intervals; the nuns took up a praying position against the wall, and the mixed crowd of aliens and neutrals watched the white hat of the leading Dutchman.

One of the languid young men lit a new cigarette and murmured, "Give me air." The travelled American promptly obliged him with a generous supply of very hot air. Behind closed doors we could hear voices, some raised in anger; others wheeling in sweet argument—while the hours passed and the daylight faded.

"When we were in Germany," exclaimed the travelled American for the fortieth time, "we were stripped, and searched and examined in less than an hour. I don't mind being suspected as a spy, I don't mind being ordered about by officious Prussians, but I do mind being absolutely ignored by a lot of cigarette-smoking—— It's no use you say 'Hush!' dear. We are entitled to civility, and we shan't get any dinner to-night."

HINT WAS LOST.

A detective entered and the American rattled the money in his pocket, but the hint was lost on the Scotland Yard man, who approached the praying nuns and led them through the door still held by the white hatted Dutchman.

"Waal, I don't mind ladies first," observed the travelled American catching his wife's eyes, "but if any goldarned foreigner gets ahead of me there's going to be trouble." His wife descended from the table and whispered in his ear. The American smiled, approached one of the cigarette youths, and in a few minutes followed his wife and the girl from Breda past the white hatted Dutchman, and into the examining room from which no passengers returned.

"That's done it," said the American journalist. "There is something wrong about the system. I'm——"

"Wait till white hat goes," I pleaded. "After all he was the first here."

THE LAST STRETCH.

When white hat went the clocks were chiming nine, and there remained in the ante-room the American journalist, myself and the Spaniard. We clung together for sympathy. Why had we been left over? we asked ourselves and each other. Were we a troublesome trio destined for the Tower? The American journalist smacked the Spaniard on the back and requested him to buck up." The Spaniard edged towards the table and regarded us with suspicion. Obviously he was associating us with his misfortune. I took the chair vacated by the girl from Breda and toyed with an umbrella left by one of the nuns.

In the course of time a detective came to us and between yawns examined our passports. He was bored, and the American journalist's sarcasm was met by cold official enquiries. The Spaniard went right behind the table and watched.

When the name of the American journalist was called I shook him solemnly by the hand and soon afterwards I heard his voice booming from the inner chamber. Then followed silence. I joined the Spaniard behind the table.

It was now dark in the ante-room, and I was filled with forebodings. What had become of the white-hatted Dutchman? The room seemed filled with the ghosts of those who long ago had sailed with me from Holland.

The Spaniard touched me on the shoulder. I looked up. The Scotland Yard man beckoned me, and fearfully I passed through the door where so many of my comrades had gone—never to return. The room was filled with military officers, detectives, and slim youths smoking cigarettes. I was going to shriek "Guilty!" when a bland voice greeted me with "Good evening, Mr. Dunn. So you are home again. Sorry to keep you waiting."

In two seconds I was led dazed from the room and joined the American journalist, who was struggling with three porters and two trunks. "Hurry up! We may catch the next train up," he shouted.

We hurried. He weighs seventeen stone, and he had not run for ten years, but we hurried; we hurried so effectively that we only missed the train by four minutes.

O, to come to England now that war is here!—James Dunn.

WAR HISTORY CAUSES CLASH IN GERMANY

ATTACKED BY COLLEAGUES FOR ARGUING AGAINST THE PROPAGATION OF MILITARY BIAS.

Controversy among German pedagogues and publicists as to the attitude to be adopted by teachers in the matter of explaining the war and its allied problems to the youth of the Fatherland continues to occupy considerable space in the German press.

A recent phase of this discussion is a series of polemics between Professor Foerster and Dr. Erich Meyer, both eminent pedagogists, following the publication of a pamphlet by the former with the thesis that children must be brought up to regard not only the interests of their own country, but also in such a way that they will be ready to recognize the rights and interests of their neighbors. Foerster complains that since the war began German children have not been sufficiently impressed with this side of their duty, and that a strong military bias, in the narrowest nationalist sense, has been given to all their instruction on the war.

"Nations," says Professor Foerster, as quoted by The London Daily Chronicle "can neither isolate themselves nor others and children must be taught that with all their patriotism they are destined to intercourse with the peoples of other countries, and that their happiness, the happiness of their country, and the happiness of neighboring countries depend on the loftiness of their views on this subject, and the standard they set themselves as men in carrying out these views.

In his pamphlet Professor Foerster does not dwell on the theory that the Christian religion, which is the religion officially professed by Germany, is a religion of love. But he does say that the teaching of high ethics is an important part of pedagogics and that no responsible guide to youth should neglect any opportunity of impressing the minds of children with the hatefulness of hate and with the beauty of treating all men, of what ever nation, with tact, good feeling and fellowship.

Professor Foerster's sentiments failed to meet with many responsive echoes among his colleagues. Instead, one authority after another rose to declare that these doctrines taught to German children at a time when the nation was in arms in defense of its most sacred values were little short of treason, that if pressed to their logical conclusion they must exercise an enervating effect both on teachers and pupils, and that for German children there was only one point of view worth considering—the German point of view.

"Steel and not sugar-plums, muscles of cord, cool heads, and German, German, German," was the summing up of the whole duty of pedagogues toward children by one of Foerster's antogonists.

Then appeared Dr. Meyer and wrote a lengthy article in the Tagliche Rundschau to prove that Professor Foerster was a weak-kneed and namby-pamby humburg. Dr. Meyer declares, according to the Chronicle, that when Foerster wrote: "The souls of the young will suffer damage should they ever forget that in this war brother is fighting against brother," he said something which, if taught to a German boy would change his German soul to something like the soul of a sponge.

"It is our business," says Professor Meyer, "to push aside all these lofty ideals, to 'train the youth the stern realities of this war to teach them that at last, at last after a long existence as an end-er, an existence of unworthy slackness, our people have ceased to dream."

Dr. Meyer will not tolerate the men who can say a word on behalf of Latin civilization, as compared with German Kultur. Latin civilization is deteriorating, and if its ideals are taught to German youths and girls the result will be catastrophic. "Away with such nebulous and sickly sentiment! Let it be rooted out from the soul of our people!" Professor Meyer asks: "What good are these great ideals to our soldiers? They require cold blood in them. And the more they are free of this sentiment the more beautiful the more German are their actions."

"The school must indeed learn that war is a frightful and mad terror which one might gladly banish from the world for all time but with every desire to make the school a training ground for peace, it must before all else be made a preparatory school for war, and for the development of that power which will enable us to deal effective blows with our hammer. All of us now know what this war is teaching us—that the war is a battle of life and death between two ideals of humanity, the German and the un-German ideal. There can be no compensatory balancings. With arms or without arms the battle must be fought to a finish until one or other of the ideals has disappeared

GERMANS CANNOT PLAY THE GAME

A story goes the rounds telling of an English officer who, wounded and captured, was afterward exchanged to England in a crippled condition. In the German trenches he came across a German officer, contemporary with him at Oxford. The Teuton remonstrated with him over English methods. "Why on earth do you send your soldiers, armed only with rifles and bayonets, against our machine guns, poison gas and liquid flame? Man, you are simply murdering them."

The Englishman was wounded and perhaps nettled out of his customary good breeding. "We t tyro 'TsODs, good breeding. "We try to fight fairly," said he.

The Prussian sneered. "Do you take war to be a game?" he asked.

At the dispersal of the Kilcoy herd of shorthorns in Ross shire a short time ago, bidding was keener for the cattle than the oldest breeders could recall ever having observed before at an auction of similar class.

SETTLEMENT IN IRELAND DUE TO UNITY FOR WAR

Premier Admits That Bill Contains Provisions That None Would Have Chosen Voluntarily.

LONDON, July 10.—In explaining to the House of Commons to-day, the Irish settlement terms, Premier Asquith admitted there were features in the plan which none would have chosen, voluntarily, and as a result there had been some misunderstandings in the Cabinet. In view, however, of the agreement reached in Ireland and the importance of unity, the Ministers were willing to share the responsibility of submitting the proposals to Parliament, and recommending their acceptance.

"The dominating factor," Mr. Asquith said, "which made us all willing to become parties or sponsors to this measure is the war."

New Bond Created.

In a few sentences, the Premier referred to the part which the Ulster and other Irish regiments have taken in the fighting, and added: "There is no patriotic Irish but has felt these common sacrifices have created a new bond between them and us."

While not going into details, the Premier indicated the main lines of the agreement, including the exclusion of six Ulster counties. He said the Irish Parliament would be composed of the members at present returned to the Imperial Parliament, while the Appeal Court in Dublin would be appointed by the Imperial Executive. The Government, Mr. Asquith said, had not received any specific proposals from the Unionists in south-west Ireland, but such proposals would receive careful and sympathetic consideration.

Provisional Bill.

The Premier explained that the bill was a provisional one; but he saw all sorts of possibilities in regard to that expression.

"To relieve all possible doubt on that point," he continued, "let me say, speaking for those who, like myself, look forward and are anxious for a united Ireland, that we recognize and agree that such union can only be brought about with the free will and assent of the excluded area."

Result of Irish Visit.

Mr. Asquith recalled his visit to Ireland, which, he said, was made to ascertain whether the Irish parties might not be disposed to come to an agreement. As a result of what he learned, David Lloyd George was deputed to open negotiations. Mr. Lloyd George quickly discovered that an agreement was possible on the basis of immediate enaction of a Home Rule measure, with the exclusion of six Ulster counties and the boroughs of Belfast, Newry and Londonderry. There was no section representative of any substantial body of opinion, Mr. Asquith said, whose views were not invited by Mr. Lloyd George. All parties concerned took the responsibility of submitting their agreed recommendations to Parliament.

No Replies.

As soon as the Premier concluded his statement he was plied with questions, but he referred all inquirers to the bill, which will be introduced next week

For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red blotchy or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercolized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggtore, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

SHRINERS AT BUFFALO.

Ten Thousand in Parade—6,000 Carbed as Arab Patrols.

BUFFALO, July 11.—The most brilliant spectacle of the 42nd annual session of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine occurred to-day, when the Imperial division was escorted from headquarters to the theatre where the opening session of the Imperial Council was held. In the escort were 10,000 Nobles, 3,000 of them garbed in the gay costumes of the Arab patrols.

Geo. K. Staples, Past Potentate of the Ismalia Temple of Buffalo, and chairman of the General Committee of the session, presided. Mayor Fuhrmann welcomed the Shriners, and J. Putnam Stevens, of Portland, Me., delivered the annual address as Imperial Potentate of the Order. Imperial officers will be elected to-morrow, all being advanced according to custom, Henry F. Neidringhaus, of St. Louis, the present Deputy, becoming Imperial Potentate.

Zurah Temple, which appears to have secured the session of 1917 for Minneapolis, celebrated to-day by raising $10,000 as the nucleus of a fund to build a new Temple, to be completed before the opening of next year's Imperial Council meeting.

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away,—are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead—and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

RUSSIAN OUTWITS GEN. VON DER GOLTZ

ALLIED OFFICER DINED WITH FAMOUS GERMAN AND THEN ESCAPED TO FRIENDLY LINES.

The story of the audacious adventures of a Russian officer, Lieut. Aldatoff, in escaping from an Austrian war prison at Senntargberg, is told by the Petit Journal of Paris.

In attempting to hoax the Austrian authorities he announced that he was of Turkish origin, that he had a true Mussulman soul and that he wished to fight in the Turkish army in order to preach a holy war. He was sent to Vienna, where he was interviewed by the Turkish ambassador, who after questioning him on his origin and faith was satisfied, and wrote to the Minister of War at Constantinople.

He was now treated in a gorgeous way by the Austrian and the Turkish authorities. "I lived in a first class hotel," he said, in telling of his adventures, "and after receiving a fez from the Turkish Ambassador an evening party was given at the Turkish embassy in my honor."

Before leaving for Constantinople he was introduced to Marshal von der Goltz, who said, "It would be a good thing if all Russian officers with a Mussulman soul acted as you have done." He afterwards lunched in the train with the German field marshal.

The escape was made at Bucharest. While the Austrian officers accompanying Lieut. Aldatoff were looking out of the windows he walked to the rear of the train and got out of the last compartment. "A few seconds afterwards," added Lieut. Aldatoff, "I was in a cab driving to the Russian Legation, and later I rejoined my regiment."

This Food is New

The Canadian Patent Office has recognized that fact and granted a patent both on the form, and the method of making

NEW Post Toasties

No other flaked corn food on the market shares this honor—no other equals it in form and flavor.

Several distinctive features characterize this new and economical food delicacy.

Old style "corn flakes" do not possess much real flavor of their own. Old-fashioned methods of making didn't bring it out. They depended largely for their taste on the sugar and cream, or milk, you ate with them. You were never asked to test the flavor by eating them dry.

We want you to test NEW POST TOASTIES by eating some DRY, fresh from the package. You'll get the flavor at once. The new way of cooking, rolling and toasting under quick, intense heat brings out the natural goodness of the grain.

NEW POST TOASTIES do not mush down when milk or cream is added. They don't crumble or "chaff" in the package. There's substance to them—so wonderfully delicious as to make you call for more.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WAR AND THE VILLAGE

I looked down over the fair valley of the Thames; over the peaceful hamlet with the church spire standing tall and slender against the clear sky. I was suddenly awakened by the sight of three wounded soldiers in their light blue hospital uniforms and scarlet ties, and I realized the times we were passing through.

This remote spot had heard the call. Every home along the straggling street, gay with pink chestnut trees, had its tiny card with its cross of honour upon it, proclaiming that the master of the house or one of its sons is fighting for the Empire. In some houses there were two such emblems; in others even more.

A strange hush had fallen over the quaint settlement. There were no groups of farmer folk about the two old inns, and the shops were closed, with signs on the doors, "Not at home for the duration of the war." Even the market square was empty, save for one or two old women. The young women were in the munition factories near by. Along the street a large motor 'bus clattered over the cobbles. It was filled with working women, who were being conveyed in this excellent way to the munition factories. After they had all gone the little village seemed more si' than before. The hot sun poured down upon the village green, and threw long shadows across the deserted houses. Nearly all the larger houses bore a sign, "To Let," or indicated that apartments could be obtained. This was caused by the joining up of the married men. Every empty small house and cottage in the neighbourhood had been taken by the previous tenants of the larger houses, or two families had joined forces to cut down expenses. It is very difficult now for a woman to manage here on her separation allowance. Even if she does supplement her income by her work at the factory, or on the land, for food has increased 55 per cent., and the only way to make 9s 6d do for £1 is to cut down all round. Thus there are smaller rations and smaller houses, but all are proud to make the sacrifice.

These villages, too, have the problem of the little children to deal with. This problem is being met by the organization of local creches to take charge of the little ones while the mothers are working. This village, like many others, is deserted for the call of battle, but the true spirit remains deathless. Many of its people have suffered, but there are none that prate of peace: all are glad to make sacrifices for their Empire.

Mr. Frederic Johnston, son of the late Archie Johnston of Harvey, was brought into the Nicholls Hospital, last evening, having received severe injuries by being pulled off a horse he was riding by another he was leading. He was bringing them in from the pasture without bits in their mouths and they started galloping, wih the above result. Dr. Halliday is attendiong Mr. Johnston.

GREAT RESULTS IN WESTERN LAND FROM DAIRY WORK

Showing the excellent results obtained by farmers of Alberta from dairy herds, the following figures, obtained from one of the largest creameries in the west, are interesting. The figures in detail are the prices paid by the creamery to the farmers for milk and cream throughout 1915.

The price paid for sweet cream varied from twenty-six cents to thirty-seven cents per pound, and sour cream bought as high as thirty-three cents, the average being twenty-nine cents. The prices paid during April and up to May 15 for No. 1 sweet cream were the highest during the year, thirty-seven cents; No. 2 sweet cream, bringing, thirty-five cents during the same period. In December, January, February March, and from May 15 to 31 the price for No. 1 was thirty-five cents and for No. 2 during the same period thirty-two and thirty-three cents were paid. During October and November thirty-two cents was paid for No. 1 and twenty-seven and thirty cents for No. 2. During June, July, August and September No. 1 remained at thirty cents, while No. 2 ranged between twenty-six and twenty-eight. The average during the year for No. 1 cream was thirty-three cents; for No. 2 thirty cents. four sour cream about twenty-eight cents. The creamery, which is located at Calgary has a very large export trade in both butter and ice cream.

The average price paid by the company for milk was $1.75 though during January and February the price was $2.10 per hundred pounds. It ranged all the way down to $1.55 during June, July and August, but was around $1.90 in March, part of April and October. All the milk had to test 3.6 per cent butter fat, though the company makes the practice of paying according to the quality so that the farmer supplying the best milk receives the highest price. Thus any one shipping in milk that made a higher test than 3.6 would receive a higher price than the shipper whose milk barely met the test.

Dairy cattle thrive on all lands of the west, and the cost of upkeep of a dairy herd is much less than in the east and south. Fodder and winter feed of all kinds are also much cheaper, and this being so the margin of profit is proportionately larger.

Cigar or good cigarette ash makes an excellent polish for silver.

TRAVEL TO THE LAKES IMPROVING

Passenger and Freight Traffic of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company Improving

The present season's travel up to the back lakes has been very much retarded owing to the phenomenal rainfall during the two previous months. But the predictions are that unless unforseen circumstances arise the extra travel is going to be made up before the end of September. The officials of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company would not be surprised to see the season extend beyond its usual limits this year; and that there is plenty of time yet to compensate for the loss of so much business in June.

The past week has revealed the very exhuberance of holiday making and good times. Not that Peterborough is a particularly happy city just now—she couldn't be with the daily casualty lists before her eyes. But Peterborough in common with most other cities is spending money freely these days—taking jaunts to Stoney Lake, Lindsay, Rice Lake and other places.

The American travel is as yet a little slow, but promises to be good. When reciprocity in automobile licenses became effective a great barrier to American tourist traffic was removed. Americans who found their entry by that means made easy concluded that perhaps it would not be difficult by other means as well, and so they started to come by railway as well as by automobile, and they were astonished to find the immigration officers on both sides of the line making things as easy as possible for them. When they got here they were equally astonished to find how busy and prosperous we are. It is shrewdly suspected that for a long time after the war commenced Americans were "fed up" with the idea that scarcely an able bodied man remained in Canada; that the wheels of industry stood rusty and motionless, and the cities were becoming deserted ruins. Very greatly were they led to fear that if they ventured across they would be promptly conscripted. It was part of the cunning plan of pro-Germaniam to make them so believe. But having ventured and seen for themselves, not all the Germans under the Stars and Stripes can keep them away. They find Jack Canuck a mighty good fellow, busy as a nailer, earning lots of money, and spending it freely just like themselves, while still doing his great big bit in the biggest war in history; and they will keep on coming and inviting Jack across to see them again, until the tourist season, which is as yet only nicely opened, becomes in reality what the steamer lines expect it to be.

Huge Crowd at Sacred Heart Social

All roads led south last evening to the spacious Sacred eart grounds on Romaine street, and a bumper crowd took in Father J. J. O'Brien's social and supper. Last night's affair was without doubt the most successful one yet and the ideal weather caused a steady stream of humanity, both young and old from all parts to wend their way southwards and spend the evening as guests of the Sacred Heart Church people, where a good time is annually promised to all who come and which promise is annually fulfilled. Supper began at five o'clock and an excellent repast was served throughout the evening by the ladies of the Sacred Heart who proved themselves to be excellent and amiabl hosts and well able to cater to the tastes of a hungry public. Three long ables upon which reposed the choicest of eatables ran the width of the grounds and were well looked after by the Sacred Heart ladies.

The grounds had been fixed up for the occasion and all conveiences were on hand for the comforts and pleasure of a large corwd. The 57th Band was on hand and enlivened the evening's proceedings by rendering an excellent and well-chosen programme. Another feature of the evening was the assent of a giant balloon fourteen feet by twenty. A list of the winners of the various drawing contests will be published on Saturday.

Names Appear on Largest British Officers' Casualty List.

London, July 11.—To-day's casualty list of British officers is the largest which has been issued since the beginning of the offensive. It contains the names of 73 officers, many of whom belonged to the Newfoundland contingent.

If Stomach Hurts Drinks Hot Water

A Physician's Advice.

"If dyspeptics, sufferers from gas, wind or flatulence, stomach acidity or sourness, gastric catarrh, heartburn, etc., would take a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia after eating they would soon forget they were ever afflicted with stomach trouble, and doctors would have to look elsewhere for patients." In explanation of these words a well known New York physician stated that most forms of stomach trouble are due to stomach acidity and fermentation of the food contents of the stomach combined with an insufficient blood supply to the stomach. Hot water increases the blood supply and bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes the excessive stomach acid and stops food fermentation, the combination of the two, therefore, being marvelously successful and decidedly preferable to the use of artificial digestents, stimulants or medicines for indigestion.

The Amaryllis is a genus of bulbous plants; the large trumpet shaped blooms are gorgeous in coloring, and very showy on account of the peculiar growth.

Dr. D. S. Abbott, Pure Food and Drug Commissioner for Texas, condemns the use of egg albumen in Baking Powder.

Interstate Grocer, St. Louis, Jan. 24, 1914.

"Albumen is not a necessary constituent of baking powder," states Dr. Abbott in discussing his decision. "Its use in baking powder is to produce a foam when water is added, for the purpose of deceiving the consumer with respect to its quality. In this respect albumen serves a fraudulent purpose."

According to the Department's statement, albumen in powder forms a slight membrane over the mixture made when water is added to the powder, and, as the gas is generated from the powder, it is held beneath the membrane, thereby causing the mixture to rise rapidly, whereas there may be less gas really generated from the powder than is generated in other brands of powder where the egg albumen is not used. Because of the very small quantity that is used, it serves as no healthy ingredient, and hence the department has forbidden its use.

Hughes Blames Booze For Riot But Logie Says Men All Sober

Whether There is More Trouble at Camp Borden Will Depend on Ability of the Officers to Control the Men

Camp Borden, Ont., July 11.—Probably the most peculiar situation that has been witnessed in the history of militia in this country developed with the arrival at six o'clock this morning of General Sir Sam Hughes. The Minister came from Ottawa in a special train accompanied by a retinue of newspaper men high military officers and railway officials.

A night of rioting and the difficulties of the situation had told on Gen. Logie, camp commandant, and his staff here, but Hon. Col. Low, the camp constructor, was in good shape, and, with a line of automobiles, was on the job when the special backed into the siding close to headquarters. The party were taken immediately to Col. Low's mess tent and had breakfast. Gen. Logie did not go in to breakfast with the General, but with Col. Bickford he talked over the doings of last night and made his arrangements for the day.

READ HEADLINES ONLY

In a short while Sir Sam emerged from the tent. He walked up and down conversing with one newspaper man and an officer. He was handed a Mail and Empire. He scanned the headlines. "The paper is read," he said. He was in good fettle, but appeared to be wondering where things were at.

The only comment he made on the "mob scene" was when, somehow, the trouble was mentioned in the group. He turned to Major John Bassett, his secretary.

"Boose, eh, John?" he said firmly.

"Yes, General," assented Major Bassett, who was never in the camp before this morning.

"No," spoke up Gen. Logie who had joined the group. "There was not a man in that gathering last night who had a speck of boose. I saw the men and I talked to them. They had not been drinking."

Sir Sam made no comment but moved to another part of the grounds. Preparations were then made by Col. Low to take the General and his party around the camp.

CONFERENCE TO-NIGHT.

At 7.30 to-night there is to be a conference, at which all the general staff will hear from the London officers.

"If the officers have control of their men," said Gen. Logie, "the whole thing will stop here. If they have not there is going to be more trouble," Gen. Logie feels the position keenly.

Gen. Logie handled the disorderly troops last night in the only possible way. He did not try to 'jolly' or to lord it over the men. He talked calmly and patiently, and promised in an unassuming manner to see that certain things were made "right" for the men. He saved the situation at a time the soldiers seemed ready to tear headquarters down.

HOURS OF CEREMONIAL DRILL

The disturbance was provoked by the morning exercises, lasting four hours, until a broiling sun, preparing the troops for to-day's review before Gen. Hughes. It was the third day for some of the soldiers. It was very hot and it was very dusty, and as the men manoeuvred from 7.30 a.m. to 1.30 p.m. over the plain, which has only recently been "stumped", they became fagged and thirsty. And they carried no water bottles, and were not allowed to drink from the creek; this latter due to sanitary reasons.

The same, stirred up by the evolutions of the 20,000 men, was raised in clouds of dust, and under all the circumstances it is no wonder that there were a number of prostrations. Indeed it became rumored among the troops that three had succumbed.

RAISED THEIR ANGER.

During the afternoon, the London battalions, still chafing over their grievances of being removed here in a hurry (just so that Gen. Hughes could look them over) from Carling Camp, at London, where they had more congenial surroundings and could see their friends more conveniently, got out of hand. Towards evening several hundred of the men formed up in a straggling way on Hughes avenue, led by men waving great sticks and howling. Most of them had a stick of some kind, and all were shouting. Among the shouts could be heard such things as "Do we like this hole?" "No", "We can't get a wash." "We want wet canteens" "We want to go back to London." "We won't sleep and live in dust for twenty-four hours."

Also, there was a song, the product of some camp wit, expressive of the complaints of the men, and with a chorus made up of the reputation of one line—"To——with Camp Borden." This chorus was frequently heard during the demonstration.

170TH DID GOOD WORK.

A feature of the disturbance was the conduct of the 170th Battalion, which is made up of brokers, business men and clerks. In fact, is a little section of the wholesale and financial world of Toronto, having been recruited mainly from the heart of the city. When order came for the company to charge, Lt.-Col. LeGrand Reed's men were right on the job and scattered the disturbers right and left. The company captured one Major, one captain, and six privates, during the night and was of material aid in quieting the unruly spirits who were keen for trouble. The cordon provided by the battalion for the southern half of the area maintained themselves like soldiers, despite the taunts threats and revolver shots of the mob.

Rich Uncle (to his physician)—"So you think there is hope for me?" Physic Doctor—"Not only that but I can assure you that you are out of danger." "Very well, I wish you'd inform my nephew; but break the news gently to him."

Soldiers Drop In Parade for General Hughes

Sir Sam Thought Men Were Too Eager to Eat and Recalled His Own Conditioning for Lacrosse

CAMP BORDEN, July 11.—Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, after reviewing the troops to-day, expressed his desire to address them, but his voice would have been inaudible to the majority of the men, so he contented himself with calling out the officers and speaking to them. He refrained from directly mentioning last night's trouble.

His Own Rigorous Training.

Sir Sam said that within a few more days the camp would be far more comfortable than at present. He prophesied that conditions would be pleasant for both officers and men. He thought the men were eager to eat too much, and by way of showing the dangers of over-feeding, cited his lacrosse career, and how he had observed training rules. Sir Sam claimed that he ate nothing twenty-four hours before a match, and believed he was now more active than the other surviving players of his time. There would always be plenty of food for the men though, promised the General.

While the General was speaking one of the bands struck up a few bars of "How Dry I am."

Drop in Tracks.

The officers returned to their battalions and the final march past took place. The heat was so intense that it was a frequent sight to see men dropping in their tracks.

Following the march, battalions could be heard shouting, "Will we stay in Camp Borden?" and answering "No! No!" There have been many stories afloat about wholesale desertions in the last two days.

It is said the London Battalion were shy about 300 men when they turned out this morning. From Barrie came a report that about a hundred soldiers had passed the night there, and in Allandale sleeping in the open. It is thought that many of those who have left the camp did so, not so much because of dissatisfaction with the camp, but from fear of punishment for last night's demonstration.

Nothing to Say.

Gen. Hughes, when asked as to the disorders, asked: "What riots?" And asked as to the Perth election would only say: "Well, now; is that so? Dear me!" and so on.

Rivers Out of Bounds.

All rivers within the camp are out of bounds to all troops. Officers must see that this order is carried out. Orders make mention that it is hoped later on arrangements will be made for a bathing area within the camp.

Soldier-Orangemen Leave.

Camp Borden, Ont., July 11.—Close to a thousand soldier-Orangemen left here on the afternoon trains for points at which celebrations will be held to-morrow. Probably five hundred more will go on the special arranged for to-morrow.

DEUTSCHLAND NOT A WARSHIP

WASHINGTON, July 11.—On the strength of advice from navy experts who inspected the Deutschland at Baltimore to-day, the Treasury Department informed the State Department that the German merchant submarine was an unarmed freight carrier, which could not be converted for offensive use without "extensive structural changes."

Importance of Tobacco to Men At Front Told by Harding Davis

Among the papers left by Richard Harding Davis, the brilliant American war correspondent and author, his brother discovered the following message, written apparently a few days previous to his death:

"Men at home who breathe tobacco air, cannot know how much tobacco means to the man in the trenches, or rather how much the loss of it means. During the Spanish-American War, in the U. S. Army regulations, tobacco was officially classified as "Officers' Supplies." It was considered a luxury.

"When I cabled from Cuba that our soldiers in Cuba needed tobacco, my appeal was ridiculed and I was asked if our soldiers did not also want silk pajamas and eau-de-cologne. The man who had never gone without tobacco, and who could fill his pouch or case at the street corner, still thought tobacco a luxury.

"It was Sir Frederick Treves, during the South African War, who made people understand that for the soldiers tobacco was a necessity. A man can hunger, he can suffer cold, fatigue and wounds; these things he can endure if he can smoke.

"I have been a looker-on on seven wars, and I find it so with each of them, and with men of all races. Give them tobacco and there is no hardship that they will not cheerfully suffer. So with the purpose of your fund, I, for one, am heartily in accord.

"If the glorious record of the Canadian troops has been made on short rations of tobacco, we may feel confident that well supplied with it they will in a short time be in Berlin, which is the heartfelt wish of,

(Signed) Richard Harding Davis.

The above is the testimony of a man who has been through seven wars, and who himself knows personally a soldier's needs. No comment is necessary on our part. That great Imperial institution "The Over-Seas Club" is endeavouring to provide for the needs of the Empire's soldiers from overseas. It has organized Canada's Tobacco Fund for the comfort of our Canadian soldiers, and has already raised in Canada upwards of $130,000.00 for this purpose.

Unfortunately, the money being subscribed is insufficient to provide each Canadian soldier with a weekly tobacco supply, and an earnest appeal is made for more funds.

For 25c The Overseas Club will send to the front as much cigarettes and tobacco as a private individual can purchase and send for $1.00, and will enclose in each package a box of matches and a postal card for the soldier to express his thanks. For $1.00 a month our readers can make provision for the smoking needs of one of Canada's boys at the front, and surely there is no smoker left in Canada who would like to think that his friends who are defending the Empire and adding glory to Canada's name are going short of a smoke.

There ought to be no difficulty in securing that each Canadian soldier has his weekly tobacco supply, and we invite our readers to help in the accomplishment of this purpose.

Soldiers Claim Credit For The Perth Victory

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., July 12.—Soldiers in camp here from Perth declare that they were to a great extent responsible for the Liberal victory. They declare this is only a start and that every man and his relatives will vote with the Liberals as a protest against Sam Hughes' treatment of the troops.

In using canned vegetables for cream soups the liquor should be discarded.

THE BANDS OF THE OLDEN GOLDEN DAYS

Memory is a curious thing, and wonderful as well. We have stored in the coils of our brains all sorts of memories of the days and years that were, waiting to be revived. For memory needs to be provoked to act. As thus may be. You burn your finger in prodding the fire in the kitchen range, and at once as a flash comes up the recollection of the death of a friend under most painful circumstances. Never thought of it had you not burned your finger.

And so peering in the window of the recruiting office and seeing that old, battered cornet, of a shape and make long defunct, memory harked back to the days when just such a set of instruments were the admiration of the town and in the hands of energetic players tore off big chunks of melody and noise and tossed the fragments over into the adjoining townships. For the town was the envy and admiration of all neighbouring burgs within a radius of seventy miles or more. We were the people.

The card attached to the horn says that it was picked up on a battlefield of the Great War of Unpleasantness undertaken by our American friends from the year 1860 and on for a spell. More than likely it was picked up in a Peterborough yard where it had been flung, for veritably it looks mighty like one of the old B flats that blew forth. If it isn't it ought to be. So like as two peas from one pod. And so memory says to tell of the coming in of the very first band that Peterborough ever boasted, way back in the days when eggs sold for a sixpence and butter was a drug on the market at seven pence the pound. Wages were a dollar a day, and brass horns some thing to be dreamed of but unapproachable in price.

Shortly after the close of the Crimean War, to which activity a fair number of men had drifted from Peterborough and a few of who returned an effort was made to get up some sort of a military organization in the town, which was then about seven years old. That is seven years old as the municipality of Peterborough. The place had been squatted on the map from about thirty-seven years earlier. But it was in the year '57 running along with a town council, a chief constable, several pathmasters, a chief of the public pound and a professional weeds trimmer and why not something of a military touch. Sure thing. So Templeton Brown, the jeweller, Louis McGregor, the hotel keeper, George Weller, lawyer, Richard White, publisher, Dan. Haggart, Alex. Gilbert, James Albro, William Mocock, and George Stethem, (the same George Stethem whose demise we were advised of in papers of a few days ago), all of these citizens, with others, gentlemen at large, got together and organized. The result was Rifle Co. No. 1, with a dark green uniform, which each man paid for, and a strict rule that any man absent from weekly drill was fined six pence, for the ultimate good of the order.

When the company was fairly on its feet, so to speak, it struck some one that what was needed next was a band. We of to-day can't realise what it means to have all sorts of music, from a phonograph to the 93rd constantly on tap. In those days the only strictly definite musical organization worth two buttons was William Graham's singing school, and he was the precentor in Old St. Andrew's. He had some voice, had Graham. Pianos in those days, were rather tin-panny at the best, and only the elite could handle one, and the privilege was not too extensively shared in by the common people. So a band seemed to hit the popular idea and promise to fill a popular void. A committee was formed, and a nucleus started. Everything springs from a nucleus. The committee subscribed, and then the hat being passed around quite a respectable sum was raised. Within two weeks the crowd were in a position to look about and see where it would bestow its patronage in buying the horns.

Enquiries were made, and a man named Murdoch, at Kingston offered an assortment at a reasonable price. At least it seemed to be reasonable, for no one had the least idea of what the things were worth, and finally settled down to the conviction that they would be worth what they cost. Decent philosophy, and not so far astray. At any event it was from a firm in Kingston that the horns were bought. To send to England would have taken several months, and having raised the money the prospective players were anxious to raise the mischief and would not wait. So an American firm, named Gilmour, got the order. The British style of horn is that coiled up thing that the player clasps to his breast and expresses his musical emotions, but our American cousins were bound to have their own styles, and built the instrument when the player marched. The cornets were little slim things, but the bass and double-bass were whoppers. Comfortable to carry, and giving off sound freely. The value action was of the "rotary" kind, as distinct from the pump-valve variety.

A list of the players could be hunted up, but it is really not worth while. They were blamed enough when they were playing without pitching into them now. William Kennedy undertook to teach the men to play, but the bandsmen were restive under home-made instruction. You see, nearly every man knew about as much about the business as Kennedy, and in moments of devotional exasperation sassed back which was a conventional way of telling the bandmaster to go to. Things were not going very well and several musical souls had cut adrift from the band when it was decided to try imported skill. One of Her Majesty's infantry regiments was stationed at Kingston, and enquiry was made to know if any of the military bandsmen were about to leave the service, and would accept, one of them, the position of instructor to the band.

Some one was of service in the matter and said he had spoken to Band Sergt. Rackett, who had served his time and wished to remain in Canada. He was given as of excellent character, quite capable of teaching a band and, what was critical, his terms were moderate, about what would be, say $300 per year, though he expected to make something on the side by private tuition. It was decided by the committee to engage him, and another guarantee list was circulated to ensure enough to pay the salary.

Some additions were made to the instrumentation by exchanging the horns and a few more bought, and presently twenty-five were enrolled. Mr. Rackett proved to be an excellent teacher, and in a very short time the streets of the town echoed with the strains of British Grenadiers and tunes suitable for the marching of men.

Following the American fashion, the "lead" as the melody part is termed, was played on the E flat cornets. It is supposed that an E flat cornet can make more noise for its size than anything devised of man. They carry far and hard. The band soon found it out. When they were playing in front of the Caisse House—and expecting to take something afterwards—with the bells of the horn pointing up street it never seemed to make any difference who was there so long as Mr. Rackett and Joe Buller were on deck. Mr. Buller (father of ex-Mayor Buller) was the one man they couldn't do without. There always is, in any well regulated band, one, possibly two men absolutely indispensible. The others don't count for much. Buller played baritone quite a chunk of a horn and in any melodious emergency he could whale it out in fine shape. Play anything at sight, pick up any part that seemed weak, break into the melody, take a solo or strengthen the bass. A tower of strength in the band and was looked to pull the rest of the band out of any tangle in the score. So long as Buller kept up everyone followed. It was simply great. The bass drum usually kept at it through fire and water until some one with presence of mind turned him off.

Mr. Rackett was a staunch lead. Quite of the stern English school. Gave the band marches to play, written in four-four time instead of the lively six-eight of the American quick-step. Consequence was that it took a good many heats to get a fair grip on any one piece. Jack Ames was a bass player of renown. When he let out things hummed. After a few preliminary snorts and gurgles Ames would buckle to his work and the people crowding up behind moved back and trod on one another's toes to get out of reach of the blasts of cellar deep sounds that the horn emitted. Talk of the foundation of music. There it was. He couldn't tell, himself, how he did it.

The Peterborough band had one hated rival. Prof. Chalauptka's Cobourg Marine Band. Cobourg was down by the lake, with water in prospect, and the name fitted the place and the band suited the name. Chalauptka "led" on a flagolet, a little weasened pipe of a thing, which the Peterborough men despised. To put one over on Cobourg was considered good form and a legitimate felony. Things culminated one day when Peterborough stole their orphiclide. This instrument is a rare one, and deserves to be so. It is the father of all instruments the tones of which are provoked by means of a good reed instead of a mouthpiece, as in the case of trombones, cornets and such like. The tones are deep and smooth, quite like the diapison of the pipe organ. A sort of "clarionetus giganticus" to use a perfectly clear expression. The horn is all bell, with about a bushel of clappers, as big as oyster shells, plastered up and down the bell. There is a whole raft of keys, which chase each other round and round to keep out of the way, and when in full going order propelled by a man of some muscular ability the thing is unique. People stood around with their mouths open just to see the thing at work. Anyway, he was stolen, on the strength of a job in Bill Larmour's shoe shop at a dollar a week rise. Cobourg went wild. Denounced the Peterborough band as a set of rapscallions and low downs, and derided the town, the band and the people. He was a musical fraud, hang him. He drank profusely and too often and had to be fired.

The band lived through many vicissitudes. At one time on top of musical calenday, again down and out. Mr. Rackett went away, stayed a couple of years and came back, and then we had a real band, along until the early seventies, when it went to pieces. Out of the wreck developed the Independent Cornet Band, which lived until strangled. Then the Fire Brigade Band, which after wards merged into the 57th Battalion Band and you know its history for all time. But the moral of it all is that given an E flat cornet it generally takes three strikes to hit a high note so that it can be recognised in the score.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight an ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny mawdsut diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay-there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilative elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine street, Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

New York Stock Market

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 12.—The stock market opened with irregular changes for the most part confined to fractions. Maxwell Motor American, Beet Sugar and Anaconda were weak losing a point or more each. Mexican special ties made slight gains.

Try These Recipes While The Berries Are So Cheap

For a dainty strawberry desert, take one cupful ripe strawberries, 1 cupful sugar, 2 eggs whites, stale cake.

Mash the berries and stir in the sugar. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff; then put in the berries and sugar and whip stiff. Put a layer of stale cake in the bottom of a dish and pour the strawberry fluff over it. In about an hour the cake will be permeated and softened with the juices, while the fluff on top is firmer than before. If you desire to make the dish more ornamental, drop spoonfuls of whipped cream on the meringue, putting a strawberry and a bit of green angelica or real strawberry leaves on each.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Four cupfuls of sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoonful sugar, 3 tablespoonfuls butter, 1 teaspoonful soda, 1 cupful sour cream or rich sour milk, 1 egg, strawberries, whipped cream.

Sift flour, salt and sugar together into a mixing bowl and chop the butter into it. Dissolve the soda in a little warm water, then beat the sour cream or milk into it, together with the beaten egg. Add to dry ingredients, mixing with a flexible knife, but handling as little as possible. The dough should be soft enough to roll out easily. Roll quick and lightly on a floured board into sheets. Lay one on top of the other in a well-greased, round pan, having the first one well brushed with softened butter. Bake in a hot oven. When done, split the cakes, cover the lower half with a thick layer of strawberries crushed and sweetened, then place the second one on top and cover with a layer of whipped cream and place whole strawberries on top of this. Sweet milk and baking powder may be used instead of sour cream and soda.

STRAWBERRY JELLY.

Strawberry jelly may be made of strawberry juice alone, if the berries are only partly ripened; but if sweet or fully ripe, red currant juice or lemon juice in the proportion of a half cupful of red currant juice or the juice of a small lemon to a pint of strained strawberry juice should be added. To each pint of the mixed juice a pound of sugar is allowed. English housewives make a delicate jelly of the berries alone before they are fully ripe in this way. Put the carefully picked and cleaned berries into the preserving kettle over a slow fire. Crush slightly with a wooden spoon until the juice flows freely. Simmer gently for half an hour, strain through a jelly bag and return to the fire. Boil briskly fifteen minutes with constant stirring. Take from the fire, measure and allow a pound of sugar to every pint of juice. Add the sugar, a cupful at a time, stirring until thoroughly dissolved. Put back on the stove and boil briskly until the liquid jells.

STRAWBERRY MARMALADE

To one pound of strawberries allow one and one-half pounds of sugar. Cook strawberries in the clarified sugar, stirring constantly until they become pulpy and the juice is thick. The heated berries may be passed through a sieve and stirred with sugar, allowing two pounds of sugar to one pound of berries. Pour into glasses and cover immediately. Then cook them in a double boiler for fifteen minutes, leaving them in the boiler until cold.

STRAWBERRY GLACE.

One quart water, 2 cupfuls sugar, 1 teaspoonful granulated gelatin, juice of 1 lemon, 1 1-2 cupfuls strawberry juice, whipped cream.

Boil sugar and water together twenty minutes and then pour over the gelatin which has been softened in a little cold water. When this is cool, add the lemon juice and the strawberry juice, carefully strained and free from seeds. Freeze and line a mold with the frozen ice. Fill in the centre with stiffly whipped sweetened cream. Cover the top with the strawberry ice.

STRAWBERRY SANDWICHES

These are delightful for afternoon teas. Fine French bread and tender baking powder biscuits serves as the sliced and sprinkled with sugar. Sometimes a spoonful of whipped cream is added to the berries.

HIT BRIDGE FOUR TIMES AT RANGE OF 14 MILES.

PARIS, July 11.—French artillery already is beginning to throw a ring of fire around Peronne. How effective that artillery now has become is described by an officer attached to a heavy battery on the Somme front, who said:

"Thanks to our aviators we never have been spotted by the enemy's air service since we have been in our present position. Under these conditions our work is excellent. Objects aimed at are smashed with remarkable precision. For example, we have just fired four shells at a bridge more than fourteen miles away. Four times the aviation officer who was watching where our 'shipments' arrived, signalled us by wireless the simple word 'bridge.'"

Olive oil rubbed over a black marble clock will give it a good polish. Finish with chamois leather.

PICARDY PICTURE OF RUINS: DEATH IS EVERYWHERE

FRENCH STAND FIRM UNDER COUNTER ATTACKS WHICH HAVE ALL FEROCITY OF DESPERATION.

Paris, July 8.—A French official observer, describing conditions in the village of Fricourt after it had been taken by the British in the recent advance north of the Somme, says:

"Fricourt, like Montauban, presented a spectacle in ruins, which were in a state of such complete disorder as to show the power of the new British guns. It is now the Germans' turn to pulverize the ruins, and they are now destroying what remains of the shattered relics.

"Everywhere are dead. Behind a demolished parapet a German grenadier still holds a grenade clutched in his dead hands. Further along is a group of three German infantrymen torn to pieces by shells, and then half-covered by falling walls. In every corner and in the holes made by the shells are dead, and still more dead. The air is heavy and infected with the odor of the bodies.

"The battle continues not far off and grenade fighting is going on. We plainly hear the repeated explosions of the projectiles. German shells keep falling without cessation on the western end of the village.

"Back of the firing line we came across a group of prisoners from the 186th regiment of Prussian infantry of which an entire battalion has surrendered. We pause to interrogate them. I put the following questions to them:

"'Where were you before coming here?'

"'In the Champagne, facing Tahure.'

"'How did you come north?'

"'By train two days ago.'

NOTHING REMAINED BUT SURRENDER.

"'Why did you surrender so quickly?'

"'We were without shelter and the artillery tore our ranks to pieces. We felt ourselves to be in such a complete state of inferiority that nothing remained but to surrender. We then made a hasty decision and raised the white flag.'

"'Did your commander tell you of this offensive?'

"'No; when we started we believed we were going to Verdun. It was only when we were on the way that we learned that we were to fight against the English.'

"'Are you satisfied to be out of the fight?'

The answer was given enthusiastically in the affirmative."

Describing the character of the new Kitchener army which took part in the battle the observer quotes the following statement by a British officer:

"Three-quarters of my battalions are of the recently formed army. Only one of my battalions belong to the old army, and yet when the test of battle came my new battalions could not be distinguished from the old. They manoeuvred with the same sureness and moved with the expertness of veterans. This homogeneity of the old and the new pleased me greatly. Chiefs of other brigades had the same experience. The Germans had thought that this new army was a lot of amateur soldiers, but they found themselves deceived."

The solidity of the French conquest in Picardy at last has been put to the test and military men here say it has come out of the ordeal with flying colors, thus again demonstrating the soundness of the Brusiloff method.

The Germans, who managed to gather considerable forces, partly apparently from the British front, where the pressure was lessened during the day, and partly from depots, delivered a series of violent attacks between Hem to Feuilleres, and between the extreme right and the rest of the French front.

GERMAN REACTION TOO LATE.

The success of these manoeuvres would have forced the eventual retirement of the whole French line.

The German reaction, however, came too late. The French had time thoroughly to strengthen their line, to advance and place in position heavy artillery and to bring up plentiful stocks of munitions. Consequently the attacking wave was caught in a whirlwind of machine gun fire from the trenches, and was shot to pieces by the "seventy-fives," while the German supports following and reserves far in the rear were shattered by salvos from medium and heavy batteries.

The German infantry plodded forward again and again but nowhere. French reports say, did they make any impression upon French lines. Rarely even did they get to grips with the occupants of the trenches, which accounts for the small number of prisoners taken. The Germans, say the reports, had striven the whole day without effecting the slightest modification of the situation.

The French remain two and a half miles from Peronne on the south side of the Somme and four miles from that city on the north side of the river and there are no formidable natural obstacles in the way of their occupation of the city when the French commander judges that the time is ripe to do so.

At the beginning of the Somme battle there were behind the front assigned to the French attack 27 German battalions drawn from the 121st division and from regiments of the Seventeenth army corps. Between July 1 and July 5 the German commanders sent up to the Peronne front four reserve divisions of which two already are declared to be virtually out of commission. The other reserves brought up from different points between Rheims and the Somme were of a most heterogeneous nature. One battaloin of the guard which was annihilated, had been formed from several different battalions.

GERMANS TAKEN BY SURPRISE

The French officers say there can be no doubt that the rapidity of the French advance, if not the advance itself, took the Germans by surprise. This, they assert, is shown by their not having provided an adequate supply of reserves for such a contingency.

The work of sorting the booty taken by the French brings to light many curious facts. In the Mereaucourt woods a heavy German battery was found completely dismounted. The battery commander's shelter alone remained intact.

The luxury of the arrangements in the German positions on the Santerre Plateau showed that they were considered impregnable. In the positions occupied by the battery mentioned were a piano, a brass bedstead and a complete hot and cold water supply.

The greatest booty fell to General Balfourier's famous "Iron Corps," which distinguished itself at Verdun. This corps took enough material to set up a whole army.

PARIS IS BECOMING GAY.

Cheerier Than at Any Other Time Since the War Began.

PARIS, July 11.—With the progress of the offensive, Paris became gayer than at any time since the beginning of the war. A notable change has taken place in the last few days.

The official parade of July 14 will illustrate the new spirit. On that day, following the ceremony at the Invalides, French, British, Russian and Belgian troops from the front will march down the Champs Elysees, through the boulevards, thus permitting the first patriotic demonstration of the war.

The silence of the German communiques is considered a further good omen, though everyone realizes the great task still ahead, and that the bug push cannot be driven home until the German reserves are used up. The byword of the boulevards last night was: "We are within pistol shot of Peronne."

Wild Animal Show Enjoyed

La Tena's Show Proves to Be Interesting

MANY PRESENT

La Tena's big animal-show arrived in the city this morning at 6.30 in full force, and the street parade was given on scheduled time, about 11. The first performance was given this afternoon on the grounds, starting at 2. With a large number in attendance, the show went off without a hitch. The performance was one of the best that has appeared in this city in years and there was not a dull moment from the start to the finish. A noticeable feature of the whole performance was the promptness with which everything was run off. The managers have figured everything to the minute and the acts were displayed in fast style and proved very popular.

The show is bright, clean and filled with acts of genuine worth. There are so-called "fillers" used in the show and every act was most commendable and took well with the audience.

The grounds proved to be a trifle small for the numerous tents that are carried by the circus, but after a little close figuring, everything was fixed in a satisfactory manner. It was found impossible to put up the horse tent which is a large one, but the horses were cared for in the best of style, in a space a little northeast of the grounds.

The cleanliness displayed in every detail, and the utmost courtesy shown by all attendants was a noticeable feature. The crowds of people that thronged the streets this morning waiting for the parade were well repaid on time to the minute. It is interesting to note that the La Tena show is the first circus that has given its parade on time in years. Unusually the people are kept waiting for hours for the procession to arrive and a recent circus that appeared here, did not give a parade until late in the afternoon, while thousands waited patiently from 10.30 in the morning, waiting for them to appear.

In the numerous cages of wild animals, attendants sat in an unconcerned manner, while the animals roved back and forth in a restless manner in their cages.

The managers make it a specialty, never to shorten their performance regardless of circumstances, and a full afternoon show was given as usual.

A three ring animal show is an unusual thing and frequently it is found hard to watch all of the acts, but the La Tena's shows are so arranged and the acts so timed, that the people can witness all. A troupe of seals, for the possession of which the managers had to outbid Barnum and Baily, performed seemingly impossible acts and it is hard to realize how these clumsy animals can be taught to do such tricks as they do. They formerly were shown at the Hippodrome in New Rork and proved a big drawing card.

Among the many special acts of merit at this show may be mentioned Margarette's Nubian Lions, among which is a large male lion that goes through his part of the performance with apparent liking, but who has his ever watchful eye constantly on his mistress and on the door of the cage as if he were hoping that one day he may be free again. This den of trained beasts is only one of the many big features with the circus and among others may be mentioned Balchman's remarkably clever bears, Captain Picard's educated seals, Dunlop's highly-trained elephants. Another act of real merit was presented by Gothard's troupe of distinguished wire artists, five in number, who gave a very high grade act upon a tight wire.

A troupe of ponies were especially worthy of mention and are highly trained and well cared for. The elephants were well trained and perform many hard and difficult tricks. One trick, that of standing on their heads with all feet off the ground was only taught these ponderous animals last week, but they did it with little hesitation. It is a difficult job for an animal the size of an elephant to balance themselves on their head.

A bunch of clowns keep things moving at a merry rate and many original "stunts" were shown by these fun-makers. The clowns are all sizes from a midget up.

A side show and the many attractions were in full blast.

All in all the play was a wholesome good production and the people left the grounds this afternoon, satisfied and in good humor. The evening show begins at 8 o'clock.

Sir Sam Tries to Shift Blame Onto Unknown Officer

PROMISES CHECK FOR $8,000 TO COVER THE LOSSES OF LAND.

LONDON, July 11.—The retreat from Ottawa took place on Sunday at noon, the deputation from this city returning to their local haunts shortly before 12 o'clock.

They were not able to save the camp, but some of the members of the deputation are hopeful of good things—some time in the future. In the meantime, seven battalions quit this hospitable city, and two more would have gone, had other circumstances not intervened. They will probably go a little later.

They received the assurance from Sir Sam Hughes that from 3,000 to 4,000 troops would be left in London during the summer, that the Government would return to the city $8,000, the amount expended in leasing land for camp purposes, and that there would be a big military camp here this winter. The battalions from this district, which have been sent to Borden Camp, and which will not go over seas, will be returned to London when the snow flies, he stated.

DID NOT GET CHECK.

This was the substance of the promises given to the deputation. However, the check for the $8,000 was not brought home with them. There was a sufficiency of promises.

When the party reached Ottawa, they were suffered to enter the presence of Sir Sam Hughes when it was supposed that the deputation would lay the claims of London before the minister.

Sir Sam was the speaker of the occasion, and he delivered an oration, of somewhat familiar outlines, in which he stated that London, in which he stated that London was highly favoured in having the troops tarry in its midst for such a length of time, that other cities had complained most vociferously when troops were moved to Valcartier and other points, but they had calmed down, and the universe, including the soldiers, had come to the conclusion that Sir Sam was beyond all question quite the presiding genius of the universe, and that his judgment in centralising the camps meant probably the salvation of the Empire!

DENIES AGREEMENT.

He then went on to assure them that London would not suffer by losing the troops.

He was stopped in the midst of his oratorical outburst, and reminded that London had spent many thousands of dollars on the camp on a written agreement that the camp would remain here.

"Where is the agreement," he said "I never saw any agreement. There was none."

However, he was shown a document from a militia headquarters, asking that the city lease many acres of land and make other arrangements for the camp.

When Sir Sam overcome when he saw the document? He was not, and immediately placed the blame on some officer, who had done something without his sanction or leave.

WAS SHOWN STATEMENT.

Sir Sam also doubted that London had expended so much money on the camp, and was shown an itimized statement of the expenditure of the utilities commission, and the council.

"We will absorb that expenditure for leasing the land," declared Sir Sam, and he promised to send a cheque.

No word was forthcoming as to the number of regiments to be left in London. He declared that there would be between 3,060 and 4,000. Authority would be given at once for recruiting another battalion in Western Ontario and that together with the 241st Highland, Battalion would be quartered here, when they reached a certain strength. It seems that Windsor has an agreement to hold the 241st Battalion, so it might be that Windsor will be deceived shortly.

It also developed in the conversation that the 110th Perth Battalion would be moved next week. This regiment did not go with the rest as there is an election in Perth to-day. The 153rd will go soon also.

MAY REMAIN HERE.

It would seem that the 111th and the 160th Battalions would remain here for some time.

"We will have between 3,000 and 4,000 troops, according to the statement made by Sir Sam Hughes," said William Gray, M.P. "These will be with us all summer. In addition we will get the 241st and the new battalion to be recruited as soon as they reach a certain strength, possibly 600 men. In the fall, the troops from this district, not going overseas will be returned to London. Our winter camp will be larger than ever. I do not know what regiments will remain here."

"We got a promise of $8,000, the amount we expended in leasing the land for the camp," said Ald. Little. "The camp is going and the only consolation seems to be in the promise that we will get $8,000 back out of, all we expended."

Battlefield Scenes After Fight Passed on

Press Camp in France, July 8.—Facts and impressions come in overwhelming numbers to the press correspondent, who is on the move morning and night trying to grasp the details of the gigantic struggle which is in progress in Northern France. At every turn he realizes the immense forces of material and men that are being employed in this determined offensive.

Everywhere the eye can reach are perspiring and dust laden soldiers, while on the side lines groups of peasants call out to the passing soldier, and the drivers of the ammunition trains, endlessly going and coming, for the latest news. British and German wounded are seen limping off the field side by side, while processions of trucks reload shells and ambulances deliver wounded at the dressing stations to be passed on to waiting trains.

Where the British and the French lines join there is another world of blue and khaki uniforms and varied kinds of transport vehicles. The correspondent took an automobile to a point on the battlefield which a week ago had been in sight and range of the German machine gunners. The reserves were sitting about among the shell craters wrought by the terrific fire of the British guns, German rifles were been gathered in piles and German dead in rows for burial. On all hands the soldiers offered to the correspondent captured German helmets, German officers' revolvers, and even a pair of binoculars.

The change from the scenes presented by the monotonous trench warfare to those of an advancing army was amazing. From the ruins of the German positions between Montauban and Mametz the correspondent looked over the whole field toward the second great line of the German defences, where the barbed wire entanglements were plainly discernible. From the field won by the British with its battle litter and silent shell holes the spectator looked forward to where the battle still raged and well beyond Fricourt, to where the British infantry were advancing to take another position. Men who were spoken to talked of good luck or bad luck, which meant that they had made the rush across the zone between the old British and German lines against little opposition or that some machine guns had been still in position as well as snipers who survived the shell fire.

As an instance of the amazing rapidity with which the British troops advanced a British Colonel took his first real sleep since the fight began in a German dug out where his predecessor's candle still burned on the table.

The correspondent went over the territory previously taken by the British from the west of Montauban through the famous Dantzig Alley, where the famous nest of machine guns gave the British their greatest trouble in their first day's attack on Mametz and Fricourt, which now are being steadily shelled by the Germans. Officers and men who had been all through the fighting said they had been regularly supplied with food, but that they needed a good wash, and water was unprocurable.

The soldiers in Dantzig Alley were excited over one of those theatric scenes which this rolling country affords in this close-in fighting. When the British closed in upon the trenches at Poodle Woods, the Garman sections, already surrounded, came out holding up their hands. Thus a body of more than 500 men after being hammered incessantly with shell fire for four days dramatically surrendered before the eyes of the correspondents.

CALL SEED GRAIN LOANS.

Government Asks Farmers to Repay Advances Made.

OTTAWA, July 11.—Preparations are being made by the Department of Interior to collect the larger part of the advances for seed grain made to Western farmers for the crop of last year. More than ten million dollars was lent by the Dominion Government in the drought-stricken districts of southern Alberta and southern Saskatchewan. Despite the heavy crop many farmers were in no position to make any payments and the Government gave them generous treatment. This year it is hoped to call in the larger portion of this amount. A head office has been opened in Moose Jaw with Harry Cuttle, Chief Inspector of Homestead Agencies, in charge. Arrangements have been made to have payments made to postmasters. No collections will be made through elevators as in the past.

Grease spots on the pages of books should be sprinkled with finely powdered pipe clay, then a piece of tissue paper laid over the pipe clay and the page pressed with a warm iron. Rub of with India rubbe r.

WEDDING BELLS

ADAMS—WEIR.

A quiet wedding, which is of interest to a wide circle of friends, took place in St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, on Tuesday, July 11th, when Kezia Emly, daughter of Mrs. Weir, 463 Stewart Street, was married to Mr. Andrew Allison Adams, son of the late Rev. James Adams.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thomas Mitchell, after which Mr. and Mrs. Adams left by C.P.R. afternoon train.

PHELAN—DELAIRE

A pretty wedding took place yesterday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral when Mr. Nagle Edward Phelan, son of Mr. Harry Phelan, 335 Rubidge street was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Josephine Florence Delaire, daughter of Mr. Patrick Victor Delaire, 474 Park street. Rev. Father Phelan performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride was daintly dressed in a dress of Georgiate crepe and wore a white leghorn hat. Mr. Saisfield Sheeby B.A. Sc., acted as best man, while Miss Lydia Delaire sister of the bride looked charming as brideamaid.

During the nuptial mass, appropriate solos were rendered by Mr. Ed. Hanrahan and Miss Annie Simons.

After the ceremony the party proceeded to the home of the bride where the wedding breakfast took place. The happy couple left at noon to-day for an extended trip to Pittsburg and other points.

NORTHEY—GRYLLS.

The Methodist Church, Lakefield, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at half-past two on Saturday, July 8th, when the marriage was solemnized of Eugenie Ada, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grylls, and Mr. Gordon Northey, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Northey. Palms and daisies were the only decorations used in the church. The Rev. Mr. Barrett performed the ceremony, and Miss Laura Grylls played the wedding music.

The bride was brought in by her father, and very lovely she looked in her misty wedding gown of white taffeta silk, veiled with ninon and rose point lace. The skirt, which hooped quaintly over the hips, was very full, the ninon overskirts being banded with taffeta. The bodice of the gown had a little jacket of taffeta, over which was draped the point lace. Her veil of white tulle, arranged with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. Her only ornament was a string of pearls.

Miss Elsie Ogilvie, the bridesmaid, wore a charming frock of delft blue taffeta, crisp and bouffant. Her hat was of white tulle, trimmed with pink poppies. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations, and wore her gift from the bride, a signet ring, on which was the Ogilvie crest.

Mr. Sam. Grylls acted in the capacity of best man.

The bride was also attended by a flower girl, Miss Maude Nixon, who wore a dainty dress of white silk voile. She also wore a cameo ring, the gift of the bride.

The ushers were Mr. Percy Edwards and Mr. Elwood Northey.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Grylls held a reception at their home. The spacious rooms were lovely with pink snapdragons and carnations. Mrs. Grylls was wearing a beautiful gown of mauve crepe de chine and ninon, with hat to match.

Mrs. Northey, mother of the groom, wore a handsome gown of gray satin.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly gifts, among which was a handsome cheque from the groom, a grandfather's clock from her parents, and a cheque from the groom's parents.

Later, the bride having donned her going-away suit of Joffre blue silk poplin and a smart Panama hat trimmed with old rose, left with her husband midst showers of rice and confetti, for their cottage in Stoney Lake.

LET NO MISTAKE BE MADE.

London Telegraph.— Viewed from the standpoint not of the immediate present, but of the unknown future, the position is as grave as any which has confronted the world. Every ship that sinks beneath the water raises the price of the necessaries of life in every country on either side of the Atlantic. With every man, woman, or child who is assassinated the security of the whole human family is lessened. That is the situation. If it be evaded to-day, the terrible penalty must be paid to-morrow. It is not for us to attempt to dictate to neutral peoples how they should think and act in this emergency. Let no mistake be made—seeds are now being sown by the enemy in the oceans which may spring up in the year to come and choke civilization.

SETERAL THOUSAND ORANGEMEN

son, while Mr J. H. Spence had a busy session in the capacity of District Master. The trio named headed the parade mounted on white chargers. County Master E. F. Reid had a big contract on his hands in connection with the disposition of the forces. The task was achieved to the satisfaction of all concerned and everything passed off without a hitch.

ECHOES OF THE DAY.

Sentinel Lodge No. 2322 made a big hit with its khaki standard bearers and its four pretty girls clad in orange dresses, who supported the banner. The whole lodge presented an attractive appearance.

The Cobourg Citizens' Band in their blue uniforms made a very favourable impression, both by their appearance and by their playing.

Capt. W. C. Riddiford, formerly of the Park street Baptist church and now a chaplain of one of the battalions at Camp Borden, wrote the local committee expressing regret at his inability to be present to-day owing to a death in his battalion.

Police Constable W. Smith was on the street to-day resplendent in an Orange sash. P. C. Smith was a member of the Orange Order in Ireland, but has not yet been attached to one of the local lodges.

Argyll lodge No. 493, Keene, had not a very large turnout to-day, but there is a reason. No less than thirty-five of the members of 494 are at the front or on their way there.

Pte. W. E. McLaughlin, invalided home some time ago from England, where he was training as a member of the 8th C.M.R., did valiant work as a drummer for L.O.L. No. 50 to-day. Rheumatism failed to subdue his enthusiasm on the glorious Twelfth.

If the members of the 93rd Battalion had been allowed leave to-day the number of khaki uniforms in the parade would have augmented considerably. There are over one hundred Orangemen in the Peterborough battalion.

Bethany reported shortly after eleven o'clock with one of the largest delegations of the day. They were followed by Orillia and an Indian band from Rama.

Refreshment stands and ice cream parlours did a land office business throughout the day. A couple of women were so anxious to see the parade that they carried a dish of ice cream out to the edge of the sidewalk where they were able to kill two birds with the one stone.

The police department report a fairly light day. A few of the visitors became top-heavy before the day was out, but with few exceptions, all were able to return to their homes.

Fire Chief Howard was a conspicuous figure in to-day's parade. He not only extended the right hand of welcome to a host of visitors but also acted as chairman at the meeting that was held in the Park after the big parade.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., marched with Havelock L.O.L. to-day.

No organization in the parade got more applause than the Indian band from Rama, Ont. About half the members of the band were in khaki, being on leave from some of the battalions.

Khaki uniforms were prominent in the procession. Nearly every lodge had a soldier or two in line and this was particularly true of the lodges from Victoria and Haliburton, a large number of men of the 109th Battalion being on leave to take part in the walk. In many of the lodges the standard bearers were in khaki.

Stanwood L.O.L. No. 1384 were noticeable by reason of the khaki hats worn by its members.

General Hughes' Lodge, had a real live piper to supply music. To the regret of the Scottish residents, however, the braw piper did not wear the Highland garb.

Harold McLean, of the Examiner press room, was one of the banner bearers with the Duke of Manchester Lodge.

Mr. Ford Moynes, of the Lindsay Warder, motored down to cover the celebration for his paper.

Beresford Lodge, Lakefield, made a fine appearance in their regalia.

A soldier carried on a vigorous recruiting campaign as the parade passed down George Street. He exhorted every man of military age in the procession to put on the khaki.

The music was not confined to the usual Orange tunes. "Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Men of Harlech," "The Cock of the North," and other patriotic airs were played.

EXPERTS EXAMINE SUB.

Baltimore, Md., July 11.— United States naval experts, after a vigorous controversy, to-day made a detailed examination of the German super-submarine Deutschland. Under instructions from Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, Capt. Koenig of the submarine finally allowed Capt. C. E. Hughes, Lt.-Commander J. O. Fisher, and Naval Constructor H. S. Howard, of the Navy Department, to inspect the vessel. The German agents of the line which owns the boat, headed by Paul Hilken, flatly refused to allow the U. S. officers to board the ship without permission from Von Bernstorff.

Murder is Blamed On Seamen's Law

FIVE MEN ARE HELD BY BRITISH AUTHORITIES TO ANSWER FOR KILLING OF ENG SCOTCHMAN.

New York, July 11.—The officers of the American line steamship Philadelphia, which arrived yesterday afternoon from Liverpool, said that the La Follette seaman's law, which permits a ship's crew to demand pay in a foreign port, was the cause of a fight among the firemen on board the boat that resulted in one man being killed and four others injured.

When the liner left New York on June 17 she had a mixed crew in the stoke hole composed chiefly of Liverpool Irish and Russian Finns, and there was quarrelling daily in the fo'c'sle on the way over.

On Tuesday, June 27, when the Philadelphia was lying in the Canada dock, Liverpool, the Finns retaliated for attacks of the Irish firemen, and injured two of them severely. The following night their opponents got together in force and beat up the Finns, leaving two of them lying on the deck of the fo'c'sle.

All was well until Friday afternoon when the firemen drew their half month's advance pay from the office, and started to celebrate ashore with Liverpool rum, known to the seafaring community as "chain lightning." Sundry skirmishes took place between the two factions in the grog shops, but nothing serious occurred until 2.30 on Saturday morning, when all hands were on board the ship.

No one seems to know just what began the affray, but the lights were doused in the firemen's fo'c'sle, and the men sailed in with firebars, belaying pins, and other weapons known to sea romance. The fight was free for all and lasted for about 15 minutes, and only stopped when Robert Harkness, a big Scotchman about 38 years old, cried out: "My God; I'm killed!"

When policemen and watchmen from the pier, with the quartermaster, officers, and engineers on watch, went to the fo'c'sle, and turned on the electric light, they found Harkness lying on the deck unconscious with his skull fractured, and three of four Finns and Irishmen suffering from scalp wounds.

The police sent for an ambulance, but Harkness died before it reached the ship without recovering his senses. The wounded men were attended by Paul H. Tracy, the ship's surgeon, and the body of the Scotch fireman was taken ashore for an inquest.

The Liverpool police detained five of the firemen as witnesses, as they consider it a case of murder. No one appeared to know who struck the fatal blow, as the fighting took place in the dark. The trip back to New York was peaceful in the firemen's fo'c'sle, as both the Finns and the Liverpool Irish men felt they had had enough fighting for awhile.

Otto Manelus, one of the men most severely injured in the melee, started to work yesterday with his head bandaged, but was ordered off by the doctor, who did not think that he had sufficiently recovered.

BRITISH MAKE SEVERAL GAINS ON WESTERN FRONT

RUSSIANS CAPTURE TOWN FROM TURKS

Germans Make Desperate Effort To Capture The Outer Forts of Verdun

Violence of Yesterday's Attacks Furnish Unmistakable Evidence That Germany is Determined to Continue the Attack on Verdun--- Second Phase of the British Offensive is Approaching a Crisis in the Battle Northeast of Albert---Germans Have Thrown two Whole Army Corps into Action.

LOSSES ARE HEAVY

PARIS, July 13.—Dense German masses are storming the approaches to Fort Souville in the seventh great assault on Verdun since the battle for the fortress began 146 days ago. The violence of yesterday's attacks furnish unmistakable evidence that Germany is determined to continue the attack on Verdun, regardless of her critical position on other fronts. French military critics agreed on this point to-day after studying the reports from headquarters. Only at one point, near the intersection of the Fleury and Vaux roads did the German attack gain any ground.

SECOND PHASE OF OFFENSIVE.

LONDON, July 13.—The second phase of the British offensive is approaching a crisis in the battle northeast of Albert, where British troops are striving to advance two miles eastward to heights of Martinpuch. The Germans have thrown two whole army corps into action on both sides of the Albert-Bapaume road to defend the approaches to Bapaume. German correspondents admitting the great power of the British offensive, claim that the attacking forces have suffered heavy losses comparable only to the casualties at Verdun.

LOST GROUND REGAINED.

LONDON, July 13.—All of the Mametz Wood is now in possession of the British, who regained all points lost during the previous night and are pressing on to the Bapaume plateau.

ARMENIAN TOWN CAPTURED.

PETROGRAD, July 13.—Russians captured the Armenian town of Mamakhatum, west of Erzerum from the Turks.

RUSSIANS PRESS ONWARD.

PETROGRAD, July 13.—Russian troops have advanced 25 miles in three days on a 50-mile front, and are rapidly advancing toward Kovel.

English Must Be Language of This Province

Minister of Education Makes Official Declaration to Orangemen—No Change Will Be Made in Reg. 17

Exhibition Grounds, Toronto, July 13.—"We'll stand or fall on the regulation we've made," stated Hon. Dr. R. A. Pyne, Provincial Minister of Education, to the Orangemen yesterday afternoon. "Not one comma, one syllable, will be changed in Regulation 17, while I am Minister of Education. I've brought this message from the Premier that we have pinned our flag to the mast, and English will be the language of this Province."

Dr. Pyne denied that Orangeism had outlived its usefulness. There never was a time when it was so necessary as it was to-day.

Message to Belfast.

The following message was endorsed and sent from the Orangemen of Toronto to their brethren in Belfast: "Toronto Orangemen send greetings and sympathy. We are with you for Ulster's rights. Thousands of soldiers in uniform wearing our badges, and many military band marched in our procession to-day with frank consent of Canadian Government. (Signed) A. A. Gray, County Grand Master."

Three Patrol Boats Sunk In The Adriatic

Three Other British Patrol Boats Reached Port in a Damaged Condition---British Regain Ground Lost on the Western Front---Bombardment Severe at all Points---Russians Assume the Offensive Against the Turks.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, July 13.—The British version of the naval encounter in the Southern Adriatic, which the Austrian Admiralty in a statement issued Tuesday declared had resulted in the sinking of four or five British patrol boats by the Austrian cruiser Novara, was given yesterday afternoon in the following statement:

"Information received from the British Admiral in the Adriatic is that on July 9 the Austrian cruiser Novara came upon a group of His Majesty's patrol boats on duty. The Astrum, Spei, and Clavis were sunk, and the Frigate, Bird, and Benbus damaged, but were able to return to their port. The crews of the Astrum and Spei were taken prisoner and among the remainder of the boats there were ten killed and eight wounded."

NO IMPORTANT CHANGES.

LONDON, July 13.—French official statements issued last night declare that there are no important changes on the western front. The British, by counter attacks yesterday afternoon, regained all ground lost to the Germans early yesterday morning.

Bombardment is severe at all points.

RUSSIANS ASSUME OFFENSIVE.

PETROGRAD, July 13.—Russians have again assumed the offensive against the Turks in Mesopotamia and are driving them toward the interior.

RECALLED FROM RETIREMENT.

ZURICH, July 13.—Admiral Von Holtzendorff has been recalled from retirement and attached to the German Admiralty staff.

MAL FORCE DEBATE.

LONDON, July 13.—Sir Edward Carson may force a debate in the House on the present conduct of the British in Mesopotamia.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—It now develops that the German submarine Deutschland was convoyed by neutral merchantmen almost to American shores. Allied warships are hunting down the convoy ships.

2,500,000 BELGIAN CHILDREN HELPED

London, July 12.—There are 2,500,000 Belgian children up to the age of 16, still in Belgium, and still under German control. To provide these gallant little victims of the war with food the children and the schools of the whole British empire to-day are celebrating Children's Belgium Day.

From Fiji to Aberdeen to-day wherever the British flag flies, British boys and girls are holding sports or giving entertainments, the proceeds of which will be sent to the National Committee for Relief in Belgium. The only exception will be in Canada, where the day will be celebrated on November 15th—King Albert's Fete Day.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, M.P., president of the Board of Education, approved Belgium Day, being celebrated in the schools of England and Wales.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

Coop and Lent's Circus Will Exhibit at Peterboro

For with all its joys the parade is IT,—when the Circus comes to town. And, what a parade is this! Surely it is prodigious, like has never before been seen. Impossible of emulation, paralleled by only itself, its adequate description could be no better phrased, than, "fairyland with the world's modern wonders passing in review."

The owners of these great united shows have ever held closely to the successful policies of their famous forefathers and the traditional glories of their brilliant processional street display has remained undimmed, standing second to none for more than half a century. In those fortunate locals of Coop and Lent's regular coming, this spectacular pageant is a recognized, warmly anticipater event when it glowingly foretells of the exhibition whose advent is announced, whose wonders will be revealed in.

Crop Prospects Are Better

Conditions in West Are Ahead of This Time Last Year.

WINNIPEG, July 13. — George Bury, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated before departure for the east yesterday that crop prospects in the west are better to-day than at this time last year. He based this belief on personal observations and reports of officials and correspondents.

ORIGIN OF THE TERM "TWO BITS"

The discussion over the origin of the term "two bits" and its multiples of "four bits," "six bits," etc., may arouse as much comment as the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy. To northern and eastern people the terms sounds like a popular slang expression, says the Milwaukee News, but to the people of the west and south west it is common if not provincial. The price of "a quarter" is seldom used. It is invariably "two bits." It is much easier to say "six bits" than 75 cents.

Explanation of the origin of the term "bit" comes from the reference to the monetary system in 1792, when the Spanish milled dollar became the unit of money. At that time there happened to be coined under Spanish authority a piece of silver for Mexico representing the eighth part of a dollar, called a "real" after the name of a coin in Spain, and with the same value as the early American shilling. Yankees used the shilling as a common expression and some can remember when the farmers in the central and eastern states employed their extra help at so many shillings a day. Six, eight, ten and twelve shillings was heard in all lines of trade.

When adventurers went to California and the southwestern part of the United States they found that dos reales of the Mexican was equivalent to two shillings in the United States. Later dos reales became as common as a quarter. Americans have absorbed very few Spanish words. While the language is filled with German and French words few Spanish words were found. The American never learned to say dos reales and he might have Americanized that amount by saying "two bits." Hence it may be that "two bits" is of southwestern and not eastern origin.

You can almost keep the members of a family well by having proper food for them.

SLOWLY, BUT SURELY, THE RUSSIAN BEAR GATHERS STRENGTH

By William Philip Simms.

Petrograd, June 12. (By Mail). — Slowly like a giant getting under way Russia, backed by her plain people, is gathering strength. To-day, working for her, she has an army of them fifty million strong.

This is not sob-sister hysteria. It is truth.

The Russian war is the people's war. With their incalculable fortitude the people are backing up the government and the army in a way peculiar to them and not to be found in any other country of Europe. In England and France, for instance, the governments are co-operating with industrial corporations and bankers—to the exclusion of well defined citizens' groups—thus keeping the nation and the army supplies.

ORGANIZED COMMITTEES.

In Russia the government and the army also co-operate with these. But they co-operate with an organized people, too, through non-political groups, which have been formed all over the country—citizens' associations, co-operative societies, peasants' unions—and whose aim is but to serve Russia.

Then there is a central committee, composed of civilians, to co-ordinate the efforts of the groups and take the army's orders.

So some of the fifty millions are at the front in uniform, under arms. Others are back of the lines, drilling to go to the front. The rest are scattered all over the Russian empire, working at their jobs, big or little, for the nati

BRIDGE DISASTER

The Russian people through their organizations, have accomplished near-miracles, and are still accomplishing them, making up for past defects. Through their combined wits and resources, clear on down through to the furthermost peasant of Siberia, they have bridged what otherwise might have been disaster.

The story of some of these citizen organizations, how they came into being, how they work, and the extent of their ability for the public good will be told in subsequent articles.

CARUSO MAY HAVE TO ANSWER CALL

Florence, Italy, July 12.—Should the war endure another year, Enrico Caruso probably will be called to the Italian colors. The singer to-day is back recreating at his summer villa in the Italian Florentine suburbs.

Caruso belongs to the class of '78. The men of '83 are under arms. Certain in between classes even now are waiting and preparing for the call. The tenor had a touch of the war on his recent voyage from America. He sailed on a French liner, which during the last day of its journey to Bordeaux, was busy avoiding German submarines.

Caruso at this moment is most concerned with the problem of reducing. He thinks that he has solved it. Five pounds melted away from him in as many days. His plan is five hours of daily cross-country walking in either rain or sun. Use a march step and do not avoid hills and other obstacles; look for them. "Do this," he says, "and you will feel like a twenty-year-old."

Sweeter Than Wheat—

That's the happy combination of whole wheat and malted barley, nowhere so skilfully blended to bring out all the rich nourishment and delicious flavour of the grains as in

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening, and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast act on the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Brindle and White Cupid

Warren Howard was a creature of habit. Each afternoon when the clock and the dictates of his business conscience told him the day's work was done it was his custom to brush the cobwebs from his brain by taking a brisk walk in the park.

To-day as he entered the gate he found a satisfactory addition to an already satisfactory landscape. Just ahead of him, striding along at a pace that matched his, was a girl. His first view of her inspired sentiments of distinct approval. He approved of the simplicity of her severely plain tailored suit and the natty little hat which surmounted her glorious brown hair, and he approved of the way in which she seemed to enjoy the biting wind they faced as they walked along. Likewise did he approve of the rollicking brindle and white terrier, with the rakish spot over one eye, that accompanied her. Later, when the dog lagged behind and she turned to call him, the sight of her piquant face, framed in wind blown wisps of hair, caused Warren's approval to take a step forward and become admiration.

And then the wind, which has ever played an important part in the concerns of men, took a hand. A fitful pull lifted the tweed hat which Warren wore from his head and sent it whirling back along the path over which he had come. When he started in pursuit the dog, seeing a chance to achieve canine glory, joined in the chase. The race was to the swift. The animal easily bested the man, and Warren found that instead of chasing the hat he was obliged to chase the dog. The latter entered into the game with spirit. He easily eluded all the man's efforts to catch him and turned a deaf ear to all coaxing, meanwhile chewing and worrying the luckless hat with great vigor. When his mistress arrived and added her voice to that of the man he still remained obdurate.

"Spot, you wicked fellow, come here at once!" she commanded.

Spot's only response was to edge a little farther away.

"Nice old fellow," coaxed Warren. "Bring it here, old boy."

But Spot was equally proof against feminine commands and masculine cajolery. He thought the whole affair was some kind of game and was prepared to enter into it with zest. When they abandoned moral suasion and tried to catch him he eluded them easily, skipping about, just out of reach and showing his delight by make-believe growls.

"I'm awfully sorry he is causing you so much trouble," the girl said, addressing Warren at last. "It's embarrassing to me, too."

"Pray, don't mind that," he replied. "We mustn't blame Spot because he fails to see the occurrence from a human standpoint. Spot's only a dog, with a dog's viewpoint and a dog's love of play. He's a beauty too. I really envy you the possession of him."

"I fear his canine viewpoint isn't very good for your hat," she returned. "I'm afraid he will destroy it if he isn't soon induced to give it up."

"Happily it's an old one and very durable. Perhaps if we were to walk on a bit and appear to lose all interest in him the game would lose its zest."

The girl assented readily. Spot's actions soon proved Warren a true prophet. At first he circled about his mictress and the bareheaded stranger, seeking in various ways to call their attention to the fact that the frolic was unfinished.

When they walked on, giving no heed to his actions, his interest began to flag, and it was not long before he dropped the hat at Warren's feet.

Warren picked it up absently and continued both the walk and the conversation. When they first started to walk together they had feigned great interest in the subject in hand for the purpose of beguiling Spot. Their interest, by a series of easy transmissions, had passed from feigned to real, and when Warren recovered his hat neither noticed that no excuse for further talk existed. Both were, therefore, surprised and a trifle confused when they found themselves at the gate.

"I'm very sorry that Spot put you to such inconvenience," she said by way of farewell.

"No harm done, I assure you," he replied. "Neither the hat nor my feelings suffered at all. Well, good-by, old fellow, he added, giving the dog a pat on the head.

The girl called the dog and departed and Warren bent his steps in the direction of his apartments.

"Glory, what a girl!" he mused, as he strode along. "Into my life and out again on the same afternoon. I'll probably never see her again. Tough luck, I call it—tough luck."

"Warren's somewhat incoherent prophecy soon proved faulty. A week later as he made his regular afternoon entry into the park, he behlf the girl and the dog coming toward him. For a moment he was glad, but his joy was buickly succeeded by doubt, as he reflected that the incident of the week before was scarcely adequate at the basis of an acquaintanceship. Would they recognize each other's presence as they passed by?

Before either was called upon to face this problem Spot solved it in his impetuous way. While they were yet yards apart the dog caught sight of Warren and rushed up to him showing fore and aft delight by barking joyously and vigorously, wagging his tail. Warren was patting him and otherwise cementing the friendship when the girl came up.

"Well, you see Spot has received me into his circle of friends," he ventured. "I was wondering if his mistress would do the same."

"I have always found Spot's instinct sound," she replied after a pause. "and I'm inclined to trust them this time."

Beginning with that afternoon the solitary walks Warren took in the park became fewer and fewer. It developed that the girl—Jane Warfield was her name—was also an ethusiastic pedestrian. It also developed that she did much of her walking in the park, and mostly in the latter part of the afternoon. Such a similarity of tastes could have but one result — thew soon took most of their walks together.

Spot's importance in this growing friendship diminished daily. Beginning as a prime mover, he soon found himself being relegated to the position of minor adjunct. This was something no self-respecting, pedigreed dog could stand. A means of bringing himself into prominence soon presented itself.

One afternoon he met a terrier very much like himself. He didnt like the other dog on first sight —a feeling which was heartily reciprocated. There were a few preliminary growls, and suddenly Jane and Warren had their attention rudely torn from an altogether engrossing conversation and focused upon a full fledged, enthusiastic dog fight.

The combatants were finally separated at no greater cost than some minor confusions on the part of each and a torn sleeve on the part of Warren.

"Oh, dear," said Jane when it was all over, "Spot is getting dreadfully hard to manage. I don't know what I shall do with him."

"What he needs is a little of the masculine touch," said Warren.

"Do you mean I ought to give him to you?"

"Oh, no, not exactly that. What I meant was that we ought to try managing him together."

The girl was silent.

"You know what I mean, don't you, dear?" he asked after a time.

"Yes, Warren."

"And you are willing to trust yourself—and him—to me?"

"Yes."

Both smiled happily at each other and then at Spot, who had brought them together and had fostered their attachment from its beginning.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeaon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

CONFLAGRATION AT BURNETT'S MILLS

Volunteer Fire Department of Hastings Was Successful in Extinguishing the Blaze

HASTINGS, July 12.—The news that a fire had broken out at Burnett's Mills on Thursday last was no sooner to hand than several of our men were on the road to the scene to assist, if possible, in subduing the flames. After some hours of hard work the fire was brought under control but not before considerable damage had been done to the lumber.

Hastings has again adopted the Wednesday half-holiday for the months of July and August. We consider this a step in the right direction.

ANNUAL OUTING.

The children and friends of the Presbyterian S. School held their annual excursion to Jubilee Point on Thursday last. The weather was delightful and everyone was well satisfied with the outing.

The recruiting meeting held in the Hall on Sunday evening was well attended. Lieut. Lane of Texas addressed the gathering; also some other speakers.

Capt. Walter Thomson of the 93rd Battalion was home last week for a short visit prior to sailing for England.

We are pleased to report improvement in the condition of Mrs. Wm. Tate and her many friends are looking for a speedy restoration to health.

The boys who went on a sailing expedition to Washago, have returned well sunburned but still merry.

Mr. Bailey has returned from a trip to Quebec.

Mr. C. Tucker and party of Norwood were in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. Robert Reid and children of Peterborough are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stewart up the river.

Mr. John English of Moosejaw is the guest of his brother, Mr. Fred English.

Miss Ella Tate treated her S. S. class to a picnic on the river shore on Wednesday afternoon, when a most enjoyable time was spent.

Master Clifford Hess has returned from a visit with friends in Smithfield.

Mr. Harold Richardson of Western Canada is holidaying at his old home near town.

Mr. Harry Lobb of Saskatoon is renewing acquaintances here after an absence of twelve years. Mr. Lobb notes great changes in the places and people.

TO LEARN GERMAN LANGUAGE.

Prisoners Will Get Chance to Imbibe Culture at First Hand.

The hundreds of thousands of prisoners of war scattered throughout the German Empire will have a chance to become educated in the German language if a project supported by a number of German publicists and educators is put into operation. In the leading article in the Vossiche Zeitung on this subject it is pointed out that by teaching the German language to these prisoners many of them are sure to be converted to a different view of German culture and spirit, and after the war they will be friends rather than enemies of German ideas.

The writer hardly believes that all the million or more prisoners will take to studying German as a relief to the monotony of their captivity, but there are thousands for whom dominoes and football afford no intellectual stimulus, and these men would only be too glad to master the key which opens to them the treasure house of Goethe and Shhiller, Lessing and Hauptmann. It is pointed out, moreover, that language is a far more serious dividing line between nation and nation than geogrpahical boundaries, or differing customs and laws. Teach these English, French and Russian the language of their captors and you remove the main obstacle to the growth of cordiality and sympathy for Germans and their cause. The article concludes:

"Even should only 10,000 to 20,000 prisoners be won over to take part in the proposed course of instruction, we obtain thereby this number of apostles who will afterward be spread over the countries now hostile to us, and will certainly act as apostles of the German spirit.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. Brussiloff Acting Under Instructions of the French Commander in Chief.

CZAR HAS 12,000,000 MEN.

ARMY CONFIDENT IN CHIEFS — EAGER TO WIPE OUT DEFEATS—GERMAN SHELLS DEFECTIVE.

By Montgomery Schuyler.

To war correspondent just returning from the "war zone" to the United States, as I did last night, the feeling of doubt as to the ultimate outcome of the war which still seems to prevail here to some extent, is the most extraordinary shock. I did not suppose that there was anyone who still considered the victory of the Central Powers possible. For in Europe that possibility was finally dismissed a few weeks after the beginning of the Verdun attacks, just as soon as it was conclusively shown that the allied forces could withstand practically immovably the fiercest forward movements of the German forces.

The next feeling experienced is one of astonishment that the recent great advances of the Russian armies seem to have been unexpected in the United States. To one who has passed a considerable part of last Spring with the Russians in their trenches and on their first lines, the great advance was not only expected but had even been postponed after the Russian preparations had all been completed in order to have absolutely concerted action in conjunction with the armies of the other countries.

Early in May I received permission to leave Petrograd for the headquarters of the Armies of the Northern Front, and after some time spent with General Kuropatkin, the commander in chief, whom I had known in Petrograd at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, when he was the Minister of War, I was sent by him to the headquarters of the different armies of the front, and while with each of the armies I spent much time on the actual firing lines and in their immediate rear for the purpose of judging, if possible, what might be expected of the troops in the event of any general concerted action.

CONDITIONS ENTIRELY CHANGED.

I found the situation entirely changed since the time of my last visit to Russia, which was during the first year of the war when I was sent to Petrograd on a special mission by our government. At that time, as the result of the well known ammunition scandals which has since resulted in the arrest and the imprisonmen of General Sukhomlinoff, Minister of War for some time previous to and for the first year of the war, the Russian armies had been gradually forced backward, fighting bravely but fruitlessly with their bare hands against well armed forces, never broken, but giving way to the force of circumstances, until their retreat had assumed such proportions that it was widely heralded, and no doubt believed by many, that Russia was hopelessly out of the war, and that hereafter she might be disregarded as an active factor in the military situation.

I left Russia at that time, just before the results of these retreats had become generally known, but enough had leaked out about corruption and treachery to dishearten any ordinary army. But as a certain general said to a certain correspondent, "We have to kill 2,000,000 Germans before the end of this war, and if the pro-German Russians care to consider themselves as Germans we can add them to the number."

Outside of Petrograd, however, there was even at that time very little pessimism. In such places as the Caucasus and Turkestan I had found a quiet confidence among the officers which contrasted favorably with the terrors of Petrograd, and which seemed to indicate that if the corruption and treachery could be stopped and the troops be supplied with arms and ammunitions again, they would not fail to give good accounts of themselves.

On my return to Russia for the second time during the war I found the pessimism entirely gone except in certain scattered groups in Petrograd, who represent anything rather than the true Russian spirit, and the way in which that country is taking the war. In all the time that I have spent on the front during the past few months I have met only one officer who seemed to have the slightest doubt about the successful termination of the war and the ability of the Russian armies to take up the offensive whenever they could get new arms and ammunition.

MUNITIONS PILED UP.

Immediately upon the removal of General Sukhomlinoff and the appointment of the able and popular General Poilvanoff to the post of Minister of War, the most active steps were taken to manufacture and purchase the enormous quantities of munitions needed to prepare adequately for a general advance along the whole front at any time when the combined strategy of the Allies should seem to make such action desirable. Nothing was allowed to interfere with the collection and despatch of these munitions, and so well have these orders been carried out that now for the first time, I believe, the Russian armies have all the shells and other explosives that they can require. Every officer with whom I have talked while at the front agreed that there was an abundance of ammunition and that nothing else had ever been lacking.

I was told that the cases of ammunition then being received at the front were marked, "Use this ammunition freely; there is plenty more when needed by you." Certainly there was plenty of firing going on day and night along the whole northern front while I was there and evidently the same satisfactory condition prevail in the armies of General Brussiloff, or they would not be to-day where they are. In fact there was so much firing where I was that it seemed as if ammunition must be indeed plentiful.

I was told by any number of people in a position to know that at no time was the spirit of the Russian troops disturbed, and that they had retreated often feeling perfectly confident that while they must go back on account of the orders they had received, they could have held their positions much longer if they had only been told to do so. This spring the spirit of the troops in my opinion could not be better. They feel that they have plenty of arms and ammunition. A number of needed changes in high command have been made and the present chiefs have the confidence of both the officers and the men. The armies have simply been waiting for the general word of command to advance, and they are eager to wipe out the memories of their last retreats.

Besides these factors, the men have been encouraged by the constantly weakening minor attacks by the German forces along the line, which they tell me were daily becoming less vigorous and effective. The officer in command of the Cossack troops at Dvinsk told me for some months it had been impossible for his men to entice the German cavalry (for whom the Russians have by the way a greater contempt than for any other army) into any action unless they outnumbered the Cossacks at least four to one. This was not said in any boasting manner but quite simply in answer to my question as to why there seemed to be so few engagements of cavalry in that region. Added to this again is the fact that less than 25 per cent. of the German shells fired explode, according to the officers on guard in the front lines of trenches. Whether this is due to the use of new substances for chemicals or to the lack of some necessary substance is not known.

ALLIED COOPERATION PERFECT

Furthermore, for the first time since the beginning of the war the Russian commanders are acting simultaneously and in full co-operation with the general plan of concerted strategy of the other allies. Owing to the distance and the difficulty of proper secret communication the great and fatal weakness of the allied general staffs had been a failure to keep in perfect touch with one another, and this fact has given the German "single track" strategy a great advantage. For some time however the allies have been working together more closely than ever before, and General Brussiloff stated not long ago that in the present campaign he was operating in complete accord with and under the general direction of General Joffre. If this close accord can be maintained, and there are several good reasons for thinking that it can, one of the great advantages of the Teutonic unity will have been discounted.

It is I suppose, no secret that the Germans have never feared any widespread advance except from the Russian side. They apparently believed that their opponents on the western front would be doing their best if they maintained their positions in good order, but that for them to advance to any appreciable extent would be quite impossible. This was the reason for the extraordinary jubilation that prevailed in Germany when it was thought last Autumn that Russia had been permanently knocked out of the war and was ready for a separate peace and of the warning note of pessimism which is seen so clearly in the present dispatches from Berlin attempting to minimize the recent Russian successes.

Official estimates place the number of men actually under arms in Russia at 12,000,000. This figure including of course men who have been called to the colors and have been found unfit for the active work of the first armies but who are working as laborers and teamsters and in the quartermasters and other departments as clerks and in other minor capacities.

The movements in the Caucasus have been of late overshadowed by the importance of the other campaigns but those great armies must not be forgotten. Suspiciously little has been given out of late by the official Russian communiques, a fact which has been found in the past to indicate important developments shortly to be forthcoming. The Grand Duke Nicholas is not given to long reports at any time and still less so when he is working hard.

There is yet to be estimated the importance or the future results of the expedition of some twelve thousand British troops which recently landed at Archangel en route to Tiflis, the headquarters of the Caucasus armies. They were well supplied with tank motor cars for supplying water in large quantities and the object of this expedition is reported to be a dash from Tiflis across the sandy wastes either through Persia or Armenia with a view to effing a junction with the British columns now operating in Mesopotamia.

STORY OF PERSONAL FUEO IN TRENCHES OF NORTH FRANCE

(By Wilbur S. Forrest.)

LONDON, July 8.—The story of the Disgusting Face, or a personal feud in the trenches in northern France, was told here to-day in a letter from a British officer. The letter is divided into three chapters as follows:

I

"The Disgusting Face, trimmed with blond bristles, surmounted by a grey, peaked forage cap which appeared to be more than half filled with some edible matter than in process of mastication, stuck itself over the German parapet in front of by observation station two mornings ago.

"I received the full shock of its ugliness. There the brute stood, squirming his pudgy nose about in enjoyment of the pure morning air and utterly disfiguring the petty landscape.

"I grabbed the infantry outlook's rifle and pumped five shots at the face as quickly as I could pull the trigger and work the lever. The face withdrew.

II.

"Something like an hour later I was again surveying the smiling valley. The Disgusting Face was gone; but in its place a new arrangement of sand bags on the trench parapet and the presence of a sheet of boiler plating attracted my attention—very nearly fatally.

"There was a sort of wink from the middle of the boiler-plate, a sharp crack and then my cap skidded from my head and rolled in the mud at the bottom of the trench.

"Before I had collected my thoughts sufficiently to duck, something said "Phew" right in my ear. Then I ducked, smartly. I got a periscope and saw something look over the top of the boiler-plate and down again, quick as a lizard. The Face again.

III.

"Half an hour later the infantry sentry's periscope was smashed. I got another place in the trench and tried to get sight of the brute from that. Within five minutes he had spotted me and shot at me again. A pound or two of gravel went down the back of my neck and I ducked again.

"Later in the day he smashed another periscope. Then he out-Hunned himself by potting the dog. The dog was the mascot of the regiment—a dirty, dusty, doormat dog, but quite a gentlemanly old beast. Lived on bread and bacon and used to drink tea out of the men's dixies. For some unknown reason he hopped over the parapet and next minute 'crack' went the sniper's rifle and the poor old dog was shot through the leg.

"After the shooting of the dog something had to be done. I hunted up a trench mortar officer and we arranged that he should put in four trench bombs while I threw high explosive and shrapnel alternately at ten second intervals.

"So, at 4.25 precisely I and the trench mortar fellow began. And we avenged the poor old doormat. My second H. E. blew the sniper's boiler-plate to blazes; the trench bomb followed almost on top and then I shrapnelled the whole trench for fifty yards on either side. And the trench mortar, by a really glorious fluke, dropped forty yards left of its target, right through the roof of an unsuspecting dugout and sent the whole show sky high—occupants included.

"Altogether, the doormat, the periscopes and my hat were pretty well avenged."

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

WHAT DOES THE FUTURE HOLD FOR YOU IF HEALTH GIVES WAY?

In dollars and cents, what is the worth of the brawn of your arm; what is the value of the staying power that permits continuous labor—what are they worth to you?

Suppose you did something so foolish as to reduce your strength, vitality or judgment one half, and it were impossible to get them back—how much would you pay to regain the lost portion?

When you let yourself run down, you reduce your chances for success in life—if sleeplessness comes you score lower still—should appetite or digestion fail you are stared in the face by physical bankruptcy.

Don't let it go so far, take Ferrozone, it has cured thousands and it will cure you; it builds up bodily strength, makes muscles like steel, replaces Spring tiredness by energy and new life. Ferrozone rebuilds sick folks because it contains the strengthening elements that every run-down system requires.

Especially before the hot weather comes, everyone needs a purifying tonic—Ferrozone fills the bill exactly—nothing known that invenates and uplifts so fast.

Future of China is Problematical

What may flow from the death of China's dictator is a problem to stagger the boldest prophet, says the Springfield Republican. It may be that the removal of the strong man will be a source of strength to the nation; in great part the internal disorders which have been increasing since last December have been a revolt against his autocratic rule. His successor, the present Vice-President, Li Yuan Hung, is a man of as contrary a type as possible, and so openly in sympathy with the aims of the insurgents that his accession if permitted, may have a quieting effect and permit of a gradual redintegration of a country which of late has seemed to be rapidly falling to pieces.

If China were free to work out her own destinies the death of Yuan Shihkai would seem of happy omen and a change for the better might be hoped for with some confidence. But unluckily the sinister external forces against which he had to contend are still in operation, and the death of the dictator will give satisfaction in quarters by no means friendly to China. While the interpretation of personalities and motives in Oriental countries is always dangerous there is some reason to think that even the usurpations of Yuan were dictated by a sincere patriotism and the feeling that against a menacing peril from outside China's best defence lay in strong autocratic government.

In his view he might have been proved right if the Chinese people had been ready to submit. It is quite conceivible that a vigorous dictatorship during the critical period of organizing defences against the powers that prey was China's great need, transcending for the time even the need of internal reforms. But for this drastic remedy the Chinese people were not ready. A decadent monarchy they had borne very tolerantly, with no pressing demand for reform, save in the south, where the infux of American ideas had spread republicanism. But the republic once established, even nominally. Yuan's successive usurpations provoked widespread discontent and his proposal last December to declare himself emperor was so generally opposed that he was obliged to withdraw it.

That he was moved by personal ambition is not generally believed and is not likely. Nor is his course to be ascribed wholly to a reactionary spirit. Nobody saw more clearly the urgent need for sweeping reforms, and many he had begun to carry into effect. But he did not believe his people ready for democracy, and he believed western civilisation to have in it dangerous seeds of corruption. So far as we can now see, his aim was not to restore the old order but to create a new China, more firmly knit together, more efficient and in many ways more progressive.

But always his main preoccupation was to deal with the peril outside, and at first the greedy nations of Europe, and when these went to war the nearer menace of an armed and militant Japan threatened his country. To Japan Yuan Shih-kai was an uncompromising enemy, and his hatred and distrust were cordially reciprocated. In the same measure Japan warmed to Dr. Sun Yat Sen and the other rebels of the south, less from love of them than because rebellion would weaken China.

From the time when he took office Yuan Shih-kai's life was not a good risk. Though he was always carefully guarded there were various rumors of attempted assassination, and not long ago he was said to be suffering from poison. That may have sprung from the nature of the disease which is said to have caused his death, but few men in the world have had so many enemies as this usurper of rule over 400,000,000 people. It may be said too that there have been few men in history whose life or death has been more momentous to the world; it will be long before the consequences of his loss can be measured.

This Leaves the Skin Free From Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuss is here given. This is painless and usually a single treatment will banish even stubborn growths. To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone.

Canned bananas is the latest delicacy.

"Look at me," exclaimed a lawyer warmly, "I never took a drop of medicine in my life, and I am as strong as any two of your patients put together!" "Well, that's nothing," retorted a physician. "I never went to law in my life, and I'm as rich as any two dozen of your clients put together."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S RUSSIAN SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This illustration will remind you that a Russian blouse suit for your boy is a style that he will look well in and that is as popular to-day as it ever was. It is an excellent design for a tub suit in linen, striped galatea, madras or other of the practical wash fabrics. For better than practical wear it may be developed in beach cloth or your choice of the weaves suitable for a suit that is not to be tubbed. The collar and bloomers are separate in this model and a patent leather belt and a bow tie give attractive finishing touches. The combination effect may be given with bias bands in solid color material trimming the collar and down the side where the closing is made with buttons. A standing collar may be used instead of the flat collar pictured. The lower part of the sleeve has pleats for a finish instead of a cuff or may be gathered to a band cuff as preferred.

The pattern is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. To make in size 4 will require 2¾ yards of material 36 inches wide for a duplicate of the illustration in striped gingham.

The pattern may be obtained by sending 10c to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

NO CHANGE ON WESTERN FRONT

THE ARTILLERY HOWEVER IS ACTIVE

General Situation On The Somme Front is Unchanged

Artillery Duels on Certain Sectors of British Front---French War Office Announced Intermittent Cannonade on Both Sides of the Somme but no Important Infantry Actions---French Penetrate a Salient in the Champagne.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 13.—An intermittent cannonade occurred on the French front on both sides of the Somme last night, but there were no important actions, the War Office announced to-day.

In the Champagne the French penetrated a salient in the German line taking prisoners. In the Argonne a German attack northeast of Bolante was checked by French fire. In the Vosges a German attack south of Carpach was repulsed after a violent grenade combat.

LONDON, July 13.—Artillery duels occurred on certain sectors of the British front last night, but the general situation remained unchanged, General Haig reported this afternoon.

West of Wytchaete and south of the LaBassee Canal the Germans attempted a raid but were driven off. Despite the unfavourable weather aeroplanes on both sides were very active. Several hostile aviators were driven off. One British machine is missing.

80 Big Submarines Are Being Built

Examiner Special:

COPENHAGEN, July 13.—German newspapers assert that eighty submarines of the Deutschland class are now being built, and that twenty will be completed in August.

Canadian Troops Not in Somme Drive

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., July 13.—No Canadian or Australian infantry have taken part in the Somme offensive thus far, but Newfoundland troops have distinguished themselves, according to reports from British headquarters. Canadian artillery has aided in bombardments it is believed here.

Fleet of Undersea Freighters is Likely

Special to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, July 13.—The shattering of the British starvation blockade will soon be attempted by a fleet of giant undersea freighters flying the American flags. Inspired by the success of the German submarine sea freighter Deutschland, Manager Paul Hilken, of the Ozean Rhederei, the Deutschland owners, is forming an American corporation to make undersea ships that will put the Deutschland in the pigmy class. Simon Lake, the United States inventor, will act in an advisory capacity to the new corporation, and permit the use of his patents.

The August Bank Holidays Suspended

LONDON, July 13.—Premier Asquith in announcing the suspension of the August bank holidays in the Commons this afternoon, revealed the determination of the Allies to continue the great Somme offensive for months if necessary to achieve final victory. The suspension of the workers' holidays is by royal proclamation and for the purpose of ensuring a steady supply of war munitions. In announcing this proclamation the Prime Minister declared that while there had been a change of position favourable to the Allies, there was urgent need that the supply of munitions be kept moving in a constant stream to the British front. "We should make it possible to continue the bombardment and assault indefinitely," he told the Commons. A burst of cheers followed this statement. The general suspension of August holidays requested in the royal proclamation, is in line with the request made upon many workers in munition and other war supply industries by David Lloyd George, now Secretary of War, recently. Lloyd George asked the suspension of the July holidays, a request met with general approval by the workmen.

Over 1200 Gallons of Ice Cream Consumed Yesterday

The hottest day and the biggest crowd Peterborough has experienced in several years was responsible for the consumption of 1,000 gallons of ice cream, manufactured by the Peterborough Creamery and several hundred gallons brought in from Toronto and Lindsay to meet the emergency demand. The Peterborough Dairy auto delivery had one of its busiest days rushing from store to booth with fresh supplies of cream. Ald. Edgar stated that 60,000 cones had been supplied by the grocery wholesalers for the day's business.

The ice cream stores were stormed all day long by the sizzled visitors and even the cold cream and sodas offered but momentary relief from the consuming heat.

FLIPPED COIN IN HEART OF BATTLE TO DECIDE MOVE

Pte. Jas Sharman in Letter Home Tells of Hot Corner in Which He Found Himself at Sanctuary Woods.

IN HOSPITAL NOW

Mrs. Jas. Sharman has received the following letter from her husband of the Mounted Rifles, who was shell‖ shocked during the third battle of Ypres:

Somewhere in France.

June 15th, 1916.

My Dearest Wife,—I am writing to you, hoping you are in the very best of health, as I am improving nicely. I should have had to go to the convalescent home to-day, only my "rheumatics" have started on me in the hospital, so I guess they will keep me here maybe two more days before I go, but just send my mail to the same place. The regiment, what's left of it, will forward it on to me.

Well, dearest, don't you think I was lucky to get out of it alive? I will tell you how it happened. The Germans started to bombard us with all kinds of shells and in half an hour we had neither trench nor men left. There were seven of us, four wounded, young Smith and a 1st C. M. R. man. Then young Smith got wounded in the throat and I took out my field dressing and gave him first aid. This was after I had fixed up two other fellows. Then young Smith wanted to get out and get fixed properly, but it was impossible. He asked me to take him out. I knew it was certain death where we were. So I said: "Well, we will toss up; head, we go out; tail, we stay in." It turned up head; so I says: "Come on Smithy, I'll take you out." He was the only one out of the other six to follow, but just as I was starting the German heads showed up and I thought it's all up now. So I shook hands with Smithy and said: "Goodbye; we have been pals together; we die together." So I put a flare in the flare pistol I had found in a bombing post and I let the first one have it right btween the eyes. Then I grabbed hold of Smithy and went over the barbed wire down to the supports. We had to cross through Sanctuary woods, and in doing this I got knocked down with a piece of shrapnel, and the best of it was it knocked me into an old communication trench. So I got up and got hold of Smith again and finally reached an old port. But just then a shell came over and killed eight men who were in a dugout there. I called for a stretcher bearer and one came and fixed us both up.

But the shells were falling fast here, so I says 'Come on, Smithy, we had better beat it from here. But again too late, as a man in the fort said: "Here comes Fritz. We're done." All he machine guns were out of action. Young Smith came about five yards and then turned back because there at the front of us were Germans. I had my rifle and three cartridges, so I go down and let go. Three fell, and then I got up. I ran and got through them and across a field; Fritz firing at me from all directions and machine guns at me. But, thank God, I wasn't to be hit, and I got away and am alive to tell the story. But, dear, when anyone asks me about it, it puts me all of a shake with the very thoughts of it."

MORE PETERBORO MEN LOCATED IN HANDS OF ENEMY

Four More Members of B. Squadron 8th C. M. R. are Prisoners---Recruits Wanted for the 238th Forestry Battalion---May Apply at Recruiting Station----Promotions in 93rd---General Military News.

Four more local members of B. Squadron, 8th C.M.R., are reported in to-day's list as prisoners of war in Germany. Three of these had already been reported missing—Pte. John G. Hadden, Pte. Alex. Benzie, and Pte. Arthur Pritchard. The fourth is Pte. Wm. Footitt, who before enlisting lived near Millbrook, and while in Peterborough resided on McDonnel Street. Pte. Footitt's name brings the list of Peterborough casualties since June 1st up to the 100 mark—an average of between two and three a day for forty-three days.

For the first time the 238th Forestry Battalion is seeking recruits in Peterborough. Captain Ross of that battalion was here yesterday to make arrangements for recruiting for the 238th, and will be at the recruiting station to-morrow night at 10 o'clock. In the meantime Sergt. Stanley will be at the recruiting office to-day and to-morrow, and will be able to supply all information in regard to the unit. Good bushmen are needed, men used to the saw and the axe, millmen, teamsters and handy men generally are wanted. The medical requirements are not so severe as for the firing line, but the pay, separation allowance, and Patriotic Fund, are the same as for other branches of the service. The Forestry Battalion will do lumbering work in the Old Country.

Some of the boys in B Company, 93rd Battalion, send the Examiner the following announcement: "No. 8 Platoon of the 93rd Battalion, better known as Capt. Hall's 'Young Cubs' or the 'Buffs,' are in excellent condition, and waiting patiently the hour for sailing, although they have lost three of their men in the medical inspection. No. 7 Platoon, better known as the 'Timber Wolves,' are ready for whatever is to follow."

The Paymaster's Department of the 93rd Battalion has been busy night and day for the past two weeks. Payment of discharged and transferred men, compilation of a new roll of all the men, with a complete record of each man, completion of an index card for each man, and the comparison of all records with those of the Colonel's Orderly Room, and with those of the Medical Department, and the Quartermaster's, leaves nothing to be desired in the way of work for the eight men of his staff and the Paymaster, himself. The financial affairs of each man have been completed to date and the connection of the Pay Department of the 93rd with Canadian headquarters wound up and a certificate of "all correct" given is, however, the chief feature of the 'last day.' Sergt. Jas. O'Brien, son of Inspector O'Brien, and Pte. Lancaster of Otonabee were recently added to the staff and have done yeoman service. The paystaff is provided with a compartment in the train.

Among the recent promotions announced by the 93rd Battalion are the following:

No. 195434, L.-Sergeant A. E. Giles 'B' Company, to be Sergeant from July 10, 1916.

No. 195597, L.-Cpl. J. F. Eobichon 'C' Company, to be Corporal from July 10th.

No. 195182, Pte. L. Petty, 'A' Company, and Pte. C. Conners, 'C' Company, to be L.C.-Corporals in Bugle Band.

CULMINATING EVENT OF BIG CELEBRATION

At Conclusion of Yesterday's Big Parade, Orangemen Congregated in Central Park Where a Number of Stirring Speeches Were Delivered.

LIST OF LODGES

One of the best parades ever staged in Peterborough under Orange auspices terminated yesterday afternoon in Central Park where a galaxy of speakers awaited in ambush for the return of the perspiring Orangemen. Fire Chief, Howard, as chairman of the meeting took up a position on the band stand surrounded by a whole platoon of oratorical heavyweights. At intervals throughout the meeting the band of the Salvation Army contributed a number of patriotic selections. The meeting opened with the playing of the National Anthem following which Chief Howard in the role of chairman, gave the opening speech of the day.

"We are here to celebrate the 266th Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne said Chief Howard. The victory that was won on that memorable occasion by our forefathers was handed down to us as a legacy, and it is fitting that we, as Orangemen, should show our appreciation by holding forth each year on the 12th day of July, the rights and privileges, that were gained for us at that time, we have gladly shared with all people.

We do take exception to any people or party infringing upon those rights so dearly bought. All we ask is the right to worship our God under own vine and fig-tree without being molested, and when we are so willing to give these concessions to all classes and conditions of people, we consider we are showing the true Christian spirit in the very broadest sense of the term.

WHY WE CELEBRATE.

Some people say to us "Why do you celebrate now that the war is on" and in reply I want to say that if ever there was a time since that memorable event of the 12th July 1690, when Orangemen should celebrate, it is in the year 1916. The very principles that our forefathers fought and died for two and a quarter centuries ago Great Britain and her Allies are fighting to maintain on the field of Flanders in France. It is the freedom of the people for which we contend. In the time of William, Prince of Orange, religious freedom was first, with political and civil freedom as a secondary consideration. To-day, the conditions are reversed, and 50,000 Orangemen are arrayed in this battle to maintain the civil political freedom of the world.

A CIVIC WELCOME.

Ald. F. H. Dobbin followed. The worthy north ward representative was introduced as Chairman of the Reception Committee of the City Council. On behalf of the last named body Ald. Dobbin extended the freedom of city to the visiting Orangemen. His remarks were received with loud applause. Ald. Dobbin commented upon the fraternal spirit manifested by the members and the principles that actuated the organization.

RECRUITING SPEECH.

Ald. Dobbin was followed by Ald. Stratton who made a vigorous recruiting speech. Ald. Stratton's remarks were punctuated with loud applause. He complimented the Order for the good work that had been achieved and said that while a large number of the members had seen fit to join the colours he thought that there was still a few eligible members left.

RANKS DEPLETED.

The next speaker was the Hon. W. F. Maclean of Toronto, Grand Master of the Orange Association who spoke Buffalo Plant Wrecked To-day When Lightening Struck a Shed Filled With Chemicals the Latter Exploding.

FIVE OTHERS HURT

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 13.—Three men were blown to pieces and five others perhaps fatally injured in an explosion which partly wrecked the plant of the Semet Solvey Co., on Military Road beyond the city limits at 9.30 o'clock to-day. Several other workmen were slightly hurt. The men had gone into a shed adjoining the plant to escape a heavy downpour of rain when the structure was struck by lightning. The shed was filled with chemicals which exploded.

Everyone Soon Eating Chocolate Cake

Women of Peterboro Enthuse Over Mrs. Clarry Hunt's Demonstration Yesterday

Hardly a woman who viewed Mrs. Clarry Hunt's baking demonstration yesterday at E. F. Mason's store, but vowed and determined that from then out Chocolate Cake would find a big place on her family menu.

One could hardly blame them, either. Such a light, fluffy creation as Mrs. Hunt turned out was enough to turn the most famous French chef green with envy. The fact is, many a passing male, who risked an eye on the finished masterpiece was caught strolling off with eager gait, and actually wiping his lips. Seemed to be hoping his little woman would have "one of those" when he got home.

Mrs. Hunt will tell you it's easy enough to make excellent chocolate cake if care is used in selecting the ingredients. For instance, no amount of skill and preparation will take the place of a good baking powder. That must be right. Mrs. Hunt, herself, uses Magic Baking Powder exclusively. One can be sure of its purity, for it's made in the largest, cleanest and most sanitary factory of its kind in the British Empire.

To-day Mrs. Hunt expects quite a number of new faces at her demonstrations. For Almond Cake will be her specialty to-day, with Cocoanut Rocks as an additional feature. To-morrow it's Layer Cake and Tea Biscuits. While Saturday—well—if you've got a soft spot beneath your vest for Strawberry Short Cake or Banana Fritters, just make sure your wife attends the Saturday demonstration.

Lance Corporal Drummond Is Prisoner of War

Another Peterboro Boy Reported Missing Has Been Heard From

Lance Corp. C. M. Drummond who left Peterborough with the 8th C.M.R., is a prisoner of war in Germany. Lance Corp. Drummond was officially reported missing some time ago but his mother who resides on Bernardo Avenue has had a card from him stating that he is slightly wounded and a prisoner of war at Stuggart, Germany.

LEANED OUT OF HIS CAB, SHOULDER WAS TORN OFF

STRATFORD, Ont., July 12.—John Bontisky, of Berlin, a fireman on a yard engine of the Grand Trunk, was struck by a passing car and fatally hurt as he leaned out of the window of his cab while switching in the yards here this morning. His arm and shoulder were torn off and he died shortly after being removed to the hospital.

THE BAYARD OF THE TURKS.

The Times of India: Apart from the courage and persistence with which the defence of Kut was conducted by General Townsend, the most notable feature of the siege has undoubtedly been the chivalrous attitude of the Turkish commander Nur-ed-Din. The many stories which have been told of him may be apocryphal but they appear to be founded on some basis of fact. At one time he was said to have proposed a truce while the Turks and English might together attack the marauding Arabs who have played havoc among the forces of either side and have behaved with incredible brutality to those wounded who have fallen into their hands. On another occasion he was reported to have driven a herd of cattle into the beleagured town. These and similar tales may be untrue, but they illustrate the character of a man against whom his enemies have said nothing bitter. Like Nazim Pasha and other Turkish soldiers of the old school, Nur-ed-Din has shown himself a gentleman and a sportsman, and the readiness with which he has handed over all the sick and wounded will ever be remembered to his credit. He has displayed none of the vices of his German allies, but has fought cleanly and honourably, and so far as possible has endeavoured to restrain the Arabs fearlessly punishing those who have been caught disobeying orders.

HE MAKES DEATH STINGLESS.

Full many a literary gem of purest ray serene can be found by those who search with care the columns of the rural press, for there appear the writings of men, and eke of women, whose style has not been smoothed into flat monotony by the iron of convention. They dare to be ingenuous, and when they have a thought—that happens sometimes, even in the country!—they put it on paper in all the courage of their innocence.

A truly charming example of the midst The Banner will turn its coifully clipped from The Banner of Hometown, Penn.:

It is with sorrow that we announce to Mrs. John Whitman, wife of the well known grocer who sells three pounds and a half of sugar for a qaurter. When he was chasing her around the yard in fun the other evening she stepped on an old tomato can and severely lacerated her foot. Should blood poisoning set in and she be removed from our midst hTe Banner will turn its column rules as a tribute to her.

Thus can an editor who is really kind mitigate the apprehensions of a well-regarded neighbour by a promise of post-humorous honours! It would be sad indeed to die from stepping on a tomato can, and not know how the war comes out, but the promise of turned rules would inspire resignation at least. Kings and Queens and Presidents get no more.—New York Times.

N. PERTH MAKES MEREDITH-DUFF REPORT LOOK LIKE A SUPERFLUITY.

Sir William Meredith can put the Meredith-Duff report on the evidence submitted at the shell enquiry in the waste basket.

The people of Canada will put their report on that evidence in the band boxes.

North Perth put in an interim report on the Shell Commission evidence Monday. The result in North Perth is in part a report on the evidence as to the work of the Shell Committee and other Militia Department bungles. That report is prophetic as to what will happen in this province if Sir Robert Borden keeps the Ontario candidates of his party hooked up to Sir Sam Hughes, K. C. B., the Shell Committee, and Hon. Colonel J. Wesley Allison.

Stratford has sent nearly two thousand men to the front. If Sir Sam Hughes were the idol of the Canadian soldiers and their defenders Stratford would be Sir Sam Hughes' stronghold. F. Weington Hay went to Stratford and challenged his opponents to make Sir Sam Hughes the issue. Hon. I. B. Lucas and Hon. W. J. Hanna accepted the challenge. The result of the polling shows that the traducer of Sir Sam Hughes changed a Conservative majority of 638 into a pro-liquor, pro-Rowell, pro anything else except a pro-Hughes majority of 196. Hon. W. J. Hanna and Hon. I. B. Lucas appealed to Stratford. They invoked the great name of Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B. Stratford answered the Lucas-Hanna campaign for the vindication of Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., with a Conservative loss of 744 votes.—Toronto Telegram.

PRESS OPINION ON THE BORDEN CAMP AFFAIR

SPEAKING OF PERTH.

Perhaps the most powerful contributing cause of all, however, was the revolt, that is nation-wide, against Conservatism. From British Columbia to Nova Scotia the people are everywhere turning against a party that is the special exponent of class privilege, trade abstruction and let-well-enough-alone fossilism. When these anachronisms are coupled with the worst forms of corruption that have ever disgraced Canadian public life, an active alliance with the Nationalist group of politicians in Quebec that paralyses recruiting and prevents an aggressive policy for the prosecution of the war, the ghoulish activities of men of the Colonel Allison-type, the kiserish bumptiousness of our Minister of Militia, the namby-pamby weakness of the Borden leadership—all these elements reflect themselves upon the provinces and have made their influence felt in every bye-election and in every provincial election. Witness the results in Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, Westmoreland, N.B., and in Peel and North Perth, Ontario.—The Belleville Ontario.

The order was given in order that the vanity of Sir Sam Hughes might be gratified.—London Advertiser.

Yesterday's visit to Camp Borden was the most ill-timed attempt to reap glorification a man ever made. It, and the rehearsing for it, has had evil effects which nobody knows how to remedy.—Toronto Star.

Keeping men on parade ground for five hours in a hot sun merely to please Canada's bouncing war lord was enough to icite insurrection.—St. Thomas Journal.

The only man who can put a stop to the antics of Sir Sam Hughes is the Premier. Sir Robert Borden—and he won't.—Toronto Globe.

Isn't it about time that Sir Sam Hughes realized that soldiers do not enlist in order to chase around and parade before him? The thing is getting too far fetched for a reasonable set of people to tolerate much longer.—Guelph Mercury.

Sir Sam wanted to have a big review of the soldiers for his own glorification. Yesterday he had that glorification which resulted in the death of one soldier and the prostration of thirty-five. Instead of staying and bringing order out of disorder, he left the camp yesterday and left the officers to pacify the men the best way they could.—Hamilton Times.

PRESS ON REPORT OF ADMIRAL JELLICOE

BRITISH FLEET COMMANDER'S COMMENTARY ON NORTH SEA FIGHT DISCUSSED BY EDITORS

"STRATEGIC RESULTS"

Philadelphia Press:—"Strategical results and not comparative losses are the test of victory, and the strategic result of the battle of Jutland Bank is unmistakable. England's supremacy in he North Sea is unshaken.

"The Outcome"

Baltimore American:—"The report certainly does not add anything material to the neutral world's knowledge of the outcome of the battle of the North Sea."

"LITTLE DIFFERENCE NOW"

Providence Journal:—"It makes little difference now whether Germany's demoralized armament lies at the bottom of the sea or is kept bottled up."

"NECESSARY FACTS".

Hartford Courant:—"It is not likely that we shall have all the necessary facts for a definite conclusion in this matter until the war is over and the records are opened to public inspection."

"DULL READING."

Richmond News-Leader:—"Sir John Jellicoe's report of the Jutland battle will confirm the world's judgment of his fighting qualities, but it will hardly increase his literary fame. The report is dull reading."

"THE BRITISH NAVY"

Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph:—"Taking into consideration the overpowering superiority of their navy as a whole, it is apparent that a series of encounters with the same result as this one would be welcomed by the British."

"JELLICOE VICTOR."

New York Tribune:—"Sir John Jellicoe's estimate of the enemy's losses may be wrong, but right or wrong he remains the victor unless a further challenge comes from the Germans, for his fleet still maintains control of the sea."

DRIVEN LIKE SHEEP.

Maximilian Harden Assails the War Party in Germany.

LONDON, July 10.—"What is hurting us in foreign estimation is the pitiable figure we have been cutting for two years of a nation driven like sheep before the shepherd's crook. Right and left our enemies are barking for a sign that the German nation will accept peace, but you can hear it nowhere. If they could we would be near that peace which today seems possible and which only a miracle can improve."

In this—perhaps the boldest language uttered publicly in Germany since the war began — Maximilian Harden in the Zukunft defiantly assails the war party for insisting upon keeping the country deaf and dumb on the question of the conduct and aims of the war. The article is entitled, "Those Who Are Underground," by whom, of course, Harden means the masses.

Sam Hughes Out Kaisering The Kaiser

(From the Toronto Star.)

The riot at Camp Borden on Monday night ought not to be magnified or made more of than it deserves. It was a regrettable affair from every point of view, creating as it may in some quarters the impression that the soldiers concerned have a lawless disregard for military teachings and a want of respect for the authority of their officers. It is the absolutely wrong way for men to voice their protest against the treatment they complain of.

But the more serious aspect of the affair is the emphasis which it gives to the widespread discontent among both soldiers and civilians with Sir Sam Hughes. The men concerned in it were mostly of those London battalions which were so peremptorily ordered to pack up and go to Camp Borden after having enlisted on the assurance that their training ground would be the London camp. The city of London claims to have spent $100,000 last year in preparing a camp at the request of the Militia Department on the promise that it would be made use of during the war. Contrary to assurances, these battalions were sent to Camp Borden, leaving behind them an angry city and carrying anger with them. They reached a new camp, not in order yet. No sooner had they arrived than, in intense midsummer heat, they were called upon to go through exhausing exercises and work in rehearsal for what?—for a grand ceremonial parade in honour of Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia.

In the rush, in the heat, in the dust and hot sand of the confused new camp, those battalions, without being given a day's time to forget their grievance in being yanked away from London, were required to spend two blistering days in rehearsing honours for the man who had, as they claim, and as London claims, broken faith with them.

There are, unfortunately, many manifestations of the discontent that exists throughout the overseas and militia forces of Canada, here and in England and France, both officers and men, with the arbitrary, violent, and most unreasonable man who plays ducks and drakes and any game he likes with Canada's forces.

The state of affairs reaches a condition that makes it impossible for the Government to continue Sir Sam Hughes in a position which he abuses. He destroys the authority of the general officers in command of divisions, insults them in the presence of their staffs, seeks every occasion to make bombastic speeches and play the Kaiser merely to show off.

The Minister of Militia is a civil Minister of the Crown. Sir Sam Hughes should never have been permitted to arrogate to himself the duties and put on the airs of a commander-in-chief and Kaiser as he has done. It takes the influence of thousands of officers and the influence of thousands of civilians to prevent discontent from breaking out in the Canadian army, which, after all, is a citizen force, in which every man has, and knows he has, certain human rights which no sane man ought to override.

Yesterday's visit to Camp Borden was the most illtimed attempt to reap glorification a man ever made. It, and the rehearsing for it, has had evil effects which nobody knows how to remedy.

There was a time earlier in the war when the erratic kaisering of the Minister of Militia was excused by many in the belief that little else mattered so long as he "got things done." The Star was of that opinion and said so on several occasions. But the war has been under way for nearly two years and everybody is learning that the things he gets done are too often wrongly done and have to be done over again. Instead of co-operating with the British War Office and equipping our troops as British troops are equipped—and as ours finally are equipped before they cross to France—he has from the first persisted that he knows better than the War Office how troops ought to be equipped and armies supplied. So he has adhered to his own ideas as to training, drill, rifles, boots, belts, bicycles, waggons, field kitchens, everything. If a valuation could be made of the supplies sent from Canada and piled up unused in England it would be found to run into the millions. He will learn nothing. There is nobody on earth who can teach or tell him anything. Not even events can instruct him if he suspects events of trying to do so. It should be evident to any man that even though he were wiser than the War Office in all things, yet it is but folly to litter England with war materials from Canada that our soldiers leave there and do not carry to war. Britain has decided, be the decision wise or foolish, that it is necessary to standardize all her vehicles at the front so that parts will be interchangeable and repairs procurable everywhere. No matter! Canada has piled up unused vehicles, bicycles, and chariots of war in England, and Sir Sam Hughes will be teetotally hanged if he does not know more about what's what in such matters than any benighted Briton of them all. All this might be funny if it were only in play. But in the name of reason why should Canada go on spending millions uselessly merely because Sir Sam Hughes thinks he is the most wonderful man that ever lived, and that he is nearer right, no matter how wrong he is, than other men are no matter how right they may be?

Orders are issued without reflection and cancelled without hesitation, so that the troops are always in hot water. It was supposed at first that the contempt exhibited by the Minister of Militia for the feelings and authority of officers who came into public contact with him was due to his disregard for red tape and to his sense of democracy. But as time goes on it is evident that such is not the case. It is all due to his self-feeding vanity, and he will crush a man publicly for the pleasure of showing spectators what his power is. At first his habit of humiliating officers in the presence of their commands was supposed to meet with the approval of men in the ranks, but it is so no longer, and today throughout our forces at home and abroad there is a general discontent with a Minister of Militia who out-kaisers the Kaiser with his pretence to some divine right to play the mischief with the lives, reputations, and fortunes of tens of thousands of men on any sudden whim that may occur to him.

The British Government cannot quarrel with Sir Sam Hughes, because he is Minister of Militia for Canada. But Canada can quarrel with him, and will if the Government does not dispense with his services and end his mad reign.

WAR ON A GIGANTIC SCALE.

The human mind staggers and reels as it attempts to grasp and apply the figures now coming from the battlefields of Europe. Only the other day it was announced that England had four million men under arms. Yesterday came the news from German sources that the Russian infantry now actually on the field of battle on the eastern front numbers 2,740,000 men. The statement comes from London that the German losses since the war began, based on German figures, exceed three million men. The war bulletin from Petrograd last night declared that General Brusiloff's army up to July 10 had taken prisoner 5,620 officers and 266,000 men. Fifty-three years ago the high-water marks on battlefields in the United States was reached at Gettysburg, when the Union army numbered 88,000 men and the Confederate army 73,000 men, and the losses in three days' fighting on both sides killed, wounded and missing aggregated 43,449 men. The German losses in the war thus far of about three million men exceed by more than 200,000 the total strength of the Northern armies engaged in the civil war from 1861 to 1865.—New York Herald.

FOOTPRINTS PROVE GUILT

Contention of State Counsel in the Orpet Case.

Waukegan, Ill., July 13. — Footprints left in the snow in Helm's Woods, where last February the body of Marion Lambert was found, told the story of the tragedy more plainly than words, State Attorney Dady declared yesterday, resuming his argument in the trial of Will H. Orpet, charged with murdering Miss Lambert.

With the aid of a blue print on the wall Mr. Dady traced the footprints as they appeared February 10, the day after Marion's death by cyanide of potassium poisoning.

"At the three oaks," said he "he persuaded Marion to take the poison. He was unable to stand the sight of her death throes and his tracks lead off alone for 144 feet to a cluster of four trees. Here the tracks show how he walked up and down, waiting until he thought she was dead. Then he went back. There is no other explanation for these tracks. He and Marion were absolutely alone in the woods. In this defendant, as he testified, turned back as he was walking away, and returned to the body, we can account for that frightened pacing up and down behind the four trees only by a miracle."

TELLER AND $5,000 MISSING.

MONTREAL, July 13.—The provinces of Quebec and Ontario are being scoured by detectives looking for T. L. Leforest, paying teller of a branch of the Bank of Hochelaga, who last Friday afternoon, it is alleged, left the bank with $4,000 and disappeared with a young woman in an automobile. Leforest was discovered to be $1,000 short in his accounts. He promised to explain it and left the office ostensibly to go to a barber shop.

FIGHTING NOT ONLY DISEASE BUT IGNORANCE

POLICEMEN ARE VERY OFTEN CALLED UPON TO ASSIST

NEW YORK, July 12.—"Oh, please doctor, da baby, he is nod seek any more. He is all right; I am telling you, he is all right—see!"

With this plea a mother in the district of Brooklyn stricken with the dread infantile paralysis today sought to save her baby from the common terror of the foreign settlements—the hospital. Not only must the doctors and nurses engaged in the fight to save human life battle with disease filth, but human ignorance. Mothers fight for their children when the ambulance arrives. The entire neighborhood gathers about the doctors and nurses. Often there are near-riots. The incident of to-day was typical.

In response to the appeals of Mrs. Holmes, who lives on Madison street, the ambulance physician picked up the mite of humanity, to see that he was "all right." He stood the baby up. The little legs were normal. Then as childish awe gave way to fear, the wee bit of humanity burst into tears. But only one eye filled, only one side of the little face moved. In the immobility of the other side is writ, as plainly as in words, the presence of the malady in its milder, more common form. A nod and the nurse has stripped the child and donned the hospital slip. As she unfolds the blanket to wrap around, the mother, with a cry of despair, snatches her baby, and the two half-crazed beings cling to each other in desperation, sobbing wildly. A policeman is summoned and the child hurried away, with the shrieking mother and neighbours, who swarm into the street, following in the wake of the ambulance until it speeds away and disappears.

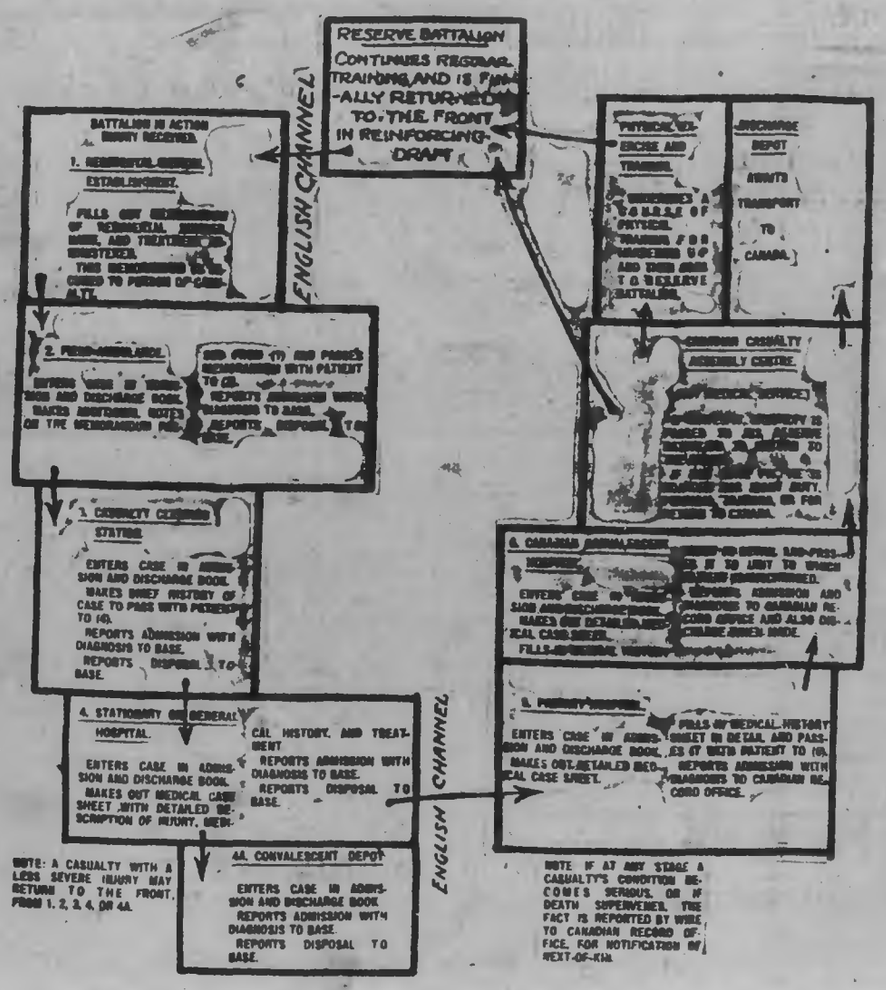
Ignorance, fear and superstition combine to block the work of those who are lighting day and night to stem the plague of poliomyelitis that clutches New York in a death-grip. The light, clean dormitories, corps of skilled nurses and doctors mean nothing to the poor mothers bereft of their young

Two trips were made to the home of I. Zarra, 308 Delancy street, before the child was found, and then only after a battle royal, in which two policemen and a doctor engaged the enraged and frightened clan, was the nurse able to steal away with the unfortunate victim. The street was in an uproar as the ambulance sped away amid wild imprecations. To the hospital attendants it is all in the day's work that they may be stabbed in the back at any moment by a frantic parent. To-day, after a fight, first with a frantic mother, then the father, and finally the neighbours, an ambulance sped down the street; tears streaming down the faces of the nurses from the scenes they had witnessed.

"It's polio, it's polio," yelled the curious crowd of excitable children, with the New York street gamins aptitude for picking up a new street word.

"It's polio," whispered their elders, with blanched faces.

"It's hell," said the young surgeon on the ambulance, and he looked sorrowfully upon the pitiful little bundle that had been carried from the tenement.



HOW CASUALTIES ARE HANDLED BY CANADIAN MEDICAL CORPS—This interesting chart shows how a wounded man is handled by the C.A.M.C. from the time he is injured until he returns to the trenches. The chart will be particularly interesting to those whose loved ones were wounded in recent fighting.

STORY OF A NIGHT ATTACK

OTTAWA, July 13.—Gen. E. W. B. Morrison has written home a graphic account of how headquarters keeps in touch with the firing line. It is dated "from darkest Flanders" and says in part:

"Imagine a small room in a Belgian house that faced on a village street, with a garden in front and fruit trees in the rear. On a trestle table in the room a map about six feet square, illuminated by an electric light operated by a small motor engine installed in a hut across the way. A small table in the corner with my papers and reports. Another table in the other corner, for the brigade major. On the window-sill, on the trestle table, and on the mantel-piece, half a dozen telephones of different makes connected up with the various groups of batteries. Nobody in the room except myself, the brigade major, and the signal officer. All the rest of the staff, thoroughly tired out, were having their first unbroken night's sleep for weeks. Outside a howling rainstorm. Otherwise the quietness of midnight.

START RIGHT ON TIME

"A few minutes before the bombardment is to commence. I light my pipe and put my feet on the trestle table to await events. Sharp on the minute a dull rumble through the storm indicates that our batteries have opened. In 15 minutes the—— group reports over the telephone that the enemy retaliation on their front has commenced.

"At 1.30 the brigade major remarks: 'Well, the infantry attack is launched'—that being the hour specified in the orders. A few remarks pass, and pity is expressed for the poor infantry going forward in the rain and dark. After ten minutes of silence a telephone busses, and another group reports that the enemy are sending up green rockets. That means they are calling for their artillery support from their front line trenches."

LIKE ELECTION REPORTS

"The remainder of the night resembles the receiving of reports of an election, except that the issues involved are life and death instead of political preferment. Two minutes later another telephone busses, announcing that the enemy are sending up red rockets, which, as far as we can understand, is the German equivalent for 'S.O.S.' addressed to their artillery. Ten minutes later, and another of our groups, which is in support, asks if it can turn on certain batteries.

"An hour of silence follows, broken only by occasional reports that the enemy is putting up a tremendous phyotechnic display of flares and rockets."

EXCITING BULLETINS

Gen. Morrison quotes bulletins as they are received. For instance:

2.35 a.m. Red asteroid rockets reported in front of the enemy's line on the left, meaning that they appear to be massing there for a counter-attack.

2.45 p.m. Telephone reports red flares on the right sector. Another reserve group is ordered to take on enemy counter-batteries to the south.

3.15 a.m. Red and green rockets reported at ——trenches. A red flare at trench ——,—— "undoubtedly ours," adds the report. Red rockets here, red flares there. (This is getting exciting!) Red flares on the right sector of the attack—red flares in the centre—red flares all over our zone! Our Infantry have reached their objective! Daylight has come. Outside in the garden the first lark commences to sing ecstatically, as if celebrating the victory.

HEAVY GUNS AT WORK.

"The artillery, which has been "lifting" in front of the infantry as they advance, now establishes its curtain of fire on the enemy's front line trenches, and the roar of the heavies can be heard taking on the enemy's batteries, which have commenced to shell their former front line trenches, which we have captured.

We commence to reduce, to let our guns cool off, and give the overworked gunners a chance to breathe. The telephones buss jubilantly: "Infantry successful all along the line, and consolidating.

5.30 a.m. Message from headquarters: "The artillery have done very well."

6.00 a.m. "Please convey to troops under your command my hearty congratulations"—circular message from G.O.C. Canadian Army Corps. This sent out to all the groups.

MILITARY NEWS

OTTAWA, July 13. — Sir Sam Hughes is out of the city, but it was learned at Militia Headquarters that there was no intention of abandoning Camp Borden or any part of it. Neither was it intended that Western Ontario Battalions should go back to London. On the other hand the authorities will bend all their energies towards improving the camp and making it as comfortable as possible for the men.

SET A TRAP FOR HUBBY

Suspicious Wife Cures Him of the Traditional Failing.

The wife of a Boston man who had the traditional failing—he forgot to mail letters — has cured him. The mail is delivered at their home before the breakfast hour—which is comparatively late. One morning she said to her husband:

"Did you have any mail this morning dear?"

"Only a circular," he answered as he bit into a fine brown slice of toast.

"Hm," said wife. "By the way, did you mail the letters I gave you yesterday?"

"Sure I did," was the righteously indignant reply.

"Well," answered the wife with an eloquent smile, "It's funny, then you had no letters this morning, because one of those I gave you to mail was addressed to you — just as a sort of key."

BALACLAVA OUTDONE BY SCOTS AT LOOS

In a remarkable passage Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons the other day revealed the fate of the premier division in Scotland.

"In the battle of Loos with other divisions, it played a very notable part," he said, "out of the 9,500 with whom it went into that engagement, 6,000 were killed or wounded. Some battalions lost three-quarters of their strength, and nearly all succeeded in achieving the task which was set them. (Cheers.) They gained some of the most important positions, and these were only lost at a later stage when they were handed over to other troops.

"One battalion of this division—a battalion of Cameron Highlanders—went into action about 850 strong, with thirty officers. The colonel and an adjutant and 110 men alone survived, and took and held the objective which they were set to take. (Cheers.)

"The remnant of these troops shattered in the first day's battle, were collected, and 1,200 out of the original 4,000 were asked two days afterwards to make another attack. They went over the parapet and renewed the attack with the utmost elan and spirit. Talk about the charge at Balaclava and the charge of the Fusiliers at Albuera. Those events pale before these deeds, which have been done in the present day by these new divisions raised in the British Island. (Cheers).

"Needless to say, no account of their achievements other than a very jejune account has been published, and that was many months afterwards. The friends of the heroes only know of their glory and of the heavy fighting in which they were engaged through private letters. Four battalions of this primary division of Scotland have been disbanded and merged with other battalions, who are also short, and their places have been taken by a South African brigade. These battalions, which had covered themselves with glory, which had only just been created with such immence effort and labor, are swept away, and the officers and men scattered the dispersed to the winds, whatever their interests and regimental ties were."

THE RUSSIAN PHOENIX.

What Russia is doing now she would have done a year ago but for what is the most horrible form of treachery to the flag—graft in time of war.

The admiration of the world is now given unstintedly to the grandeur of the Russian advance, as it has been given to the steady bravery of the unavailing heroism of the Belgian sacrifice and the Serbian fortitude under immolation. But it increases that admiration to reflect that a year ago Russia did just what she is doing now, only to fail at the moment when triumph was at hand because of an inner enemy that, weaponless, she was driven back from her conquered lands to her own territory; that, undiscouraged by a defeat which was thought to have taken her out of the war, she went patiently to work to grow new armies to replace her slaughtered thousands, to fill her empty arsenals on a colossal scale, and to begin again at the beginning of 1916.

Germany must surely have thought her out of the war, and out for a long time to come. There is a significant bit of news in what our staff correspondent in Russia, Mr. Montgomery Schuyler, wrote upon his return to America—that on the Russian front less than 25 per cent, of the German and Austrian shells explode. No such phenomenon has been noted on the western front. There can be only one explanation. The Germans had their best ammunition on the western front, their poorest on the eastern. Why? Because they did not expect any trouble on the eastern front. It is evident that their munition supply is not as good as it was, and probable that they have been experimenting with new substances. The experimental shells were sent to the place where the necessity of perfect ammunition was least apparent.

They thought, then, that the great defeat of 1915 had relieved them of the peril of the Russian advance, and it is easy to understand the astonishment described by the Berlin correspondent of The Associated Press over "the recuperative power of the Russians and their freely flowing reservoirs of both men and munitions." Brusiloff's victory of 1916 ought to have been. Nichola's victory of 1915. The Russians overwhelmed Bukowina in 1916, and their advance was as terrible and as irresistible as now, until at the moment of victory their munitions gave out, and they gave up all they had won and more too. The Russian bear went back, fighting with bare claws against deadly weapons. It was a heroic spectacle, which has gone without its meed; it is easier to be moved by the heroism of the small and helpless than of the great and powerful, but Russia's heroism was as great in its different way as Belgium's. Russia may be powerful but the individual Russian, fighting with not much more than his fists against modern artillery, is a new Russian. The greatest proof of that momentous fact, however, is given in the reform of conditions and the patient assembling together of new forces and new munitions to give to Russia the victory she earned a year ago and of which she was defrauded.—New York Times.

CHERRY CROP.

Outlook For Yields of the Different Late Varieties.

HAMILTON, July 12.—There will be a great difference in the various late cherry crops this year. It is estimated that there will be a very large quantity of black English cherries, while the white variety will be very scarce. The reason for this condition is that the black cherries blossom considerably later than the others, and have thus escaped much of the wet weather. In the Winona district there will be a bumper crop of sour cherries, while in the neighbourhood of Burlington there are at present very few on the trees. The reason given is that in some districts the farmers did not get an opportunity to spray the trees at the proper time. It is said that in the central part of Halton county there is a blight on the cherries. As a consequence they have fallen from the trees.

93rd BAND SCORED HIT

Concert at Macdonald Park Kingston Pleased Immense Audience

The Kingston Standard says: Citizens who were fortunate enough to enjoy the band concert at Macdonald Park last night, and they were many, are to-day praising very highly the excellence of the entertainment that was so generously given by the members of the band of the 93rd Battalion.

The evening was an ideal one, and the cool and gentle breeze coming from the lake was very refreshing after the heat of yesterday. The park was crowded with people and the mound about the tower was white with humanity. The water before the park was coverd with canoes and motor boats and the green and yellow lights dancing over the water made a beautiful sight. A well known citizen says that he never saw as large a number of motor cars at a band concert before.

The concert was given as a farewell to the citizens of Kingston as the battalion is leaving Barriefield soon. The camp will be losing one of its finest bands. Every one of the numbers received the heartiest applause. The programme was as follows:

March—"Soldiers of the King."
Overture—Raymond.
Cornet Solo—"Sing Me to Sleep."
Selection—"William Tell."
Patrol—"Wee MacGregor."
Trombone Solo—"Asleep in the Deep."
Military Waltz—"Eilleen Alannah."
nah."
"Advance of the Regimnt."
"God Save the King."

Colonel Kent, chairman of the Parks Committee of the City Council, desires, on behalf of the citizens of Kingston, to thank Lieut.-Col. Johnston, O.C., 93rd Battalion, Bandmaster Hughes and the members of the 93rd band for their kindness in giving the citizens this excellent concert. Thanks are also due to Col. Hemming and Major Hamilton for providing motor-trucks to bring the band to the park as no arrangements had been made in the city for this purpose.

ASK BAN ON DUTCH EXPORTS

British Would Stop Shipment of Manufactures to Neutrals.

ROTTEHDAM, July 12. — The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant says that Great Britain has asked Holland to stop the export of manufactured goods to neutral countries, declaring that non-compliance will result in the stoppage of Holland's cotton imports.

The Telegraaf says that the Allies are merely contemplating measures to prevent the export of Dutch cotton goods to Switzerland and Roumania, as it has been proved that such exports are really intended for Germany.

BELFAST HAD NO PARADE; TRIBUTE TO SOLDIER DEAD

BELFAST, July 13.—On account of the war and of their desire to assist the authorities to carry out the regulations established by martial law, the Orangemen omitted the annual procession in celebration of the Battle of the Boyne.

By way of showing respect to those of the Ulster division who have fallen at the front, all business was suspended at noon for five minutes.

Street traffic was at a standstill, blinds were drawn and prayer services were held.

PRETTY CANADIAN WAR WEDDING IN ENGLAND—Major Thomas Craik Irving, D.S.O. (Canadian Engineers, 1st Contingent) and Mrs. Irving, formerly Miss Jessie Murray, who were married on Saturday at Saltwood Parish Church, near Hythe, England. The parents of both bride and bridegroom are Torontonians.

DOLLARS POURED OUT LIKE WATER AT CAMP BORDEN

COST OF THE GREAT MILITARY CENTRE WILL BE ENORMOUS GOVERNMENT OWNS EVERYTHING WITHIN CONFINES OF THE PROPERTY.

Military Headquarters, Camp Borden, July 12.—How much has Camp Borden cost? How much is it going to cost? When will the costing part be over?

These are the three questions that seem natural in connection with the big camp here, but the answer to all is the same: "No one who knows is telling." Someone undoubtedly knows the answer to the first of the trio, but he is not publishing. As to the other two, it is doubtful if there is any person, even the great war lord, Sir Sam Hughes, who can answer them.

Something like three-quarters of a million dollars have already been expended in supplies and materials for equipping the camp proper, according to authentic information. Col. R. S. Lowe, in condemning Toronto wholesalers and manufactnrers for their slowness in filling orders, declared that more than half a million had been spent there on material to date. Anyone who has seen the camp and its fittings can readily believe that, and will be inclined to add on a generous scale too. Then the payroll of the 1,800 odd contractors' men who have been working on the camp, the horse feed, and so on, will run up to a mighty big figure. The men who have been working seven days a week, and fourteen hours a day to put the camp in its present state of preparedness are not working for love alone, and over time and double time mean more money.

CONTRACTORS' FEES.

The contractors who are on the job are not in it for their health, by any means, and while their profits may be considered legitimate, it is something that has to come from the pockets of the people, willy-nilly.

Those who know the original cost of the 20,000 acre tract seem to be scarcer around here than the proverbial hen's teeth. It has been claimed that a round quarter of a million has been spent on the land purchases, and the end seems to be not yet. There has been considerable talk of purchasing the land from the present southern confines of the camp down to the C.P. R. station at Baxter, one mile south on the Canadian Pacific line of Ypres, the new junction that was created when the C.P.R. started to build its spur line into the camp, and is the bane of all trainmen. No one seems to know if this purchase is to go through, and like every other feature in connection with the camp costs, there is an ignorance not unexpected on the part of those who might be designated by being in "high places."

MONEY GALORE.

More superficial survey of the camp is an eye-opener as to what can be accomplished in a short time. It also spells money in gobs, chunks and bucketfuls, not to mention unlimited quantities. To accomplish anything at all, Colonel Lowe had to be given carte blanche, and carte blanche, in a proposition of the magnitude of this military camp means anything up to the two-figured million mark.

Camp Borden has been built to stay. One glimpse of the buildings and general layout of the camp is sufficient to convince even a doubting Thomas of that fact. For years Sir Sam has been preaching military expenditures, and now he has opportunity to put them across on a scale that two years ago would have been utterly impossible. Undoubtedly Camp Borden is needed now, and will be needed after the war, too, for training Central Ontario regiments, if there is to be any militia after the war.

Col. Lowe and the contractors who have been working under him are not the only ones whose bill will be paid from the militia department treasury chest. Both the C.P.R. and the G.T. R. claims will figure in the final settlement. When the camp was first mooted it was supposed to be on the Grand Trunk. Angus, three miles away from here, was the nearest railway centre. Baxter, the nearest C.P. R. station, was five miles and a half away. The C.P.R. jumped in at the first shot out of the gun that announced the purchase of Camp Borden, and on May 9, less than two months ago, the construction gangs started the branch line from Ypres that reached here almost a month ago.

ALL GOVERNMENT OWNED

Within the confines of the camp, every inch of steel, every tie, fishplate, spike and ounce of ballast is supposed to be government property. The huge union depot that has been erected, and the express departments of both Dominion and Canadian Express companies, are also considered government property. The railway companies built them, and paid for their construction gangs on the work, but the government will settle the whole shot in order that the militia department may be supreme within the camp, and administer the railway affairs as it sees fit. When this settlement is made it will run into quite some cash, and so on, but in keeping with its government-owned, militia department controlled policy, these tracks are used by both roads without interference, switching, or other similar charges that might be and would be levied by the operating company were the circumstances other than they are.

Passing up the question of what the buildings of the camp are going to cost, the huge sum of money that is represented by the camp utilities looms up large on the horison of Canadian resources, that acts as the background to the record of building achievement and speedy service represented in the camp.

The Grand Trunk built the first switching line from the camp spur proper in order that Co. Lowe and his contractors might have speedy delivery of supplies and materials. The company has since put in a number of other switching lines in order to serve the supply depot of the Canadian Army Service Corps, Canadian Ordnance Corps men, for whom accommodation is being provided practically equals the population of the city of London. Though the population is equal, it is hardly fair to say that the waterworks system would have to be the same. There are no big manufacturing plants here, no extra mains for fire protection, and so on, but just the same providing water for 60,000 men in sufficient quantities to take cars of their bathing, cooking, drinking, and washing is a proposition the cost of which can readily be imagined by even the greenest in the engineering world.

The same is true of sewage disposal. All the latdines, wash houses, shower baths and so on have to be tapped to sewers and 15 miles of drain had to be dug to provide for the water mains and sewer pipes. Then the septic tanks (a costly undertaking) had to be constructed and a permanent power and pumping station built. The streets of the camping areas are lit by hydro-electric power from the Severn River, as was mentioned in a previous article, and building a street lighting system is a somewhat expensive undertaking as London found out.

There is no issuing of debentures, spread over a number of years, to meet the cost of the utilities that have been installed here. The whole shot is being paid from the Canadian war chest, but as has been said before just how much has been taken from the strong box is an unknown quantity that is on a par with the "X" of algebraic fame.

Beware of Fake Baking Powder Tests

("THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute quantities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

OVERLAND POPULAR IN INDIA

As an evidence of the fact that the demand for their product is pretty much the same all over the world, the Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo, Ohio., points to the ever increasing number of orders received from their dealers abroad. Practically every mail brings requests from some of these far off points urging the factory to rush additional cars to them with all possible speed.

"The only complaint we have to make is that we cannot get cars fast enough over here to satisfy our customers," writes the Overland dealer in Rangoon, the largest city in Burma. "If we could get the cars we could dispose of them as rapidly as some of your big dealers in the States.

"Not long ago two of our salesmen sold 23 Model 75 Overland cars in four days and the same two gentlemen followed this up by turning in orders for nine additional cars in one day. We have sold as high as 63 new cars in a month, which I believe established a record for this territory.

"If the good roads movement over reaches this country we will be able to double and treble our sales in short order. The streets of Rangoon and a few of the nearby towns are not so bad for automobiles but as soon as you leave the town proper you are forced to pick your way over roads that are worse than any I have seen in other countries.

"The Burmese favor the small, light Overland Model 75 in preference to the larger and more expensive machines. The economical advantages of this smaller model appeal to them strongly and once we have demonstrated its ability to travel the so-called roads around Rangoon we have little trouble in closing the Sale."

Many Germans Are Now Ruined By The War

UPPER MIDDLE CLASSES ARE NOW SUFFERING HARDSHIPS.

A Greek merchant who has just returned from Germany, writes.

Germans are very sensitive these days. They are especially sensitive to neutral opinion. Whenever they meet a neutral visitor they anxiously inquire as to what the neutral nations are thinking regarding the outcome of the war.

It was especially obvious to me that all my friends were doing all they could in their futile attempts to impress me as to the plentifulness of food and the other necessities of life in Germany. Their attempts were really pitiful.

Whenever I had occasion to visit one of these old friends it was obvious to me that they were undergoing a great deal of sacrifice in order to prove to me that everything was in abundance in Germany.

Even in restaurants, cafes, beerhouses and other public refreshment establishments, from the waitresses to the proprietors they were all out to "keep faces." Since my journey through Germany I have learned to admire and respect this patient and self sacrificing love of their country. They are daily told that they will win in the end if they only hold on a little while longer. No matter how much they suffer they will not complain—at least not to the strangers.

I remember one instance when I went to a hotel restaurant with an old friend, an old Berliner. He made an excuse and left the table for five minutes. On his return to the table the waitress told me that I could obtain all the meat I desired. At that time the meat days had already been reduced to two days per week. I also knew the amount of meat and butter one is entitled to in Berlin. However, the young woman who waited on us insisted that I should order any amount of meat that I desired.

"You have been reading the English papers," remarked the young woman with a jolly sarcasm.

At the end of the meal when the time came when we both had to present our "meat tickets," I distinctly noticed that the young woman punched two meat allowances on my friend's ticket. It meant to impress me with the plentifulness of food in Berlin, and he had forfeited his second and last meat ration that week.

A friend of old, an importer of Oriental goods in former days, had four sons and two daughters, all engaged in their father's business, and now actually on the verge of starvation Everything was carried away from under him.

Three of his sons were killed, the fourth was taken a prisoner by the Russians from whom he had not heard during the last nine months; his two daughters had labored for some time at some government works. During this short employment the elder girl had lost a hand, while the younger daughter fell a victim to some industrial disease.

Naturally his aged wife had become an invalid.

He told me with tears in his eyes that he had stood in line in front of the government relief kitchen but the line was so long that in four instances out of five, by the time that his turn came, the food gave out. I tried to hide my tears, but when I saw large drops rolling down his wrinkled face as he talked I heartily wept with him.

Two years ago he was worth more than a million marks; to-day, after having lost his six mature children, he has to stand in line in front of a government relief station for a meal, which he missed four times out of six! I loaned him 100 marks.

I can fil many pages relating such pitiful incidents. And yet these men and women I was in the habit of being intimate, belonged to the upper-middle classes of Germany. Who can estimate the sufferings of the poorer classes: the classes that were poor even before the war!

GETTING A BATH IN SENEGAL

Takes Three Days to Secure Necessary Government Permit.

In the French colony of Senegal the capital is a dull, unprogressive town wherein officialism prevails to an extraordinary degree. Two French travellers had a most amusing experience when they wished to obtain a bath. There was at the time no bathing establishment in the capital, but rumour had it that it was possible to purchase a bath at the hospital. Accordingly, the travellers repaired to that institution and made known their want.

"Certainly," said the polite official; "names and birthplaces?"

"But," they objected, "we merely want a bath."

"Quite so," continued the official. "What are your names, and where and when were you born, and are you Government employees, soldiers or officers? No? Well, the rules do not provide for this. Just a moment. I will read them again. Yes; here is your case. You must first make out on stamped paper an application to the Governor of the colony. After favourable notice from his Excellency, you will send another application to the chief colonial physician, who will send for you and examine you."

"But we are not ill."

"Pardon me, gentlemen, but it is the rule. Having examined you, the doctor will give you two non-commissioned officers' bath tickets, to be delivered to the assistant physician."

"Why non-commissioned officers' bath?" asked one of the travellers, becoming more and more interested.

"For this reason. In our accounts we recognize only two categories of persons—officers and civil employees, the latter taking rank with officers or petty officers."

"What period of time will all these formalities consume?" asked one of the travellers.

"Oh, two or three days, provided your application is approved at the Government house."

SAD LETTERS FROM HOME.

In connection with the campaign in the German press aiming to prevent the women folks of the men at the front from discouraging their fighting relatives by means of complaining letters from home, the Cologne Volkeszeitung prints a letter from a correspondent, citing specimens of depressing epistles sent to the soldiers. Not only are the women guilty of this practice, says the writer, but some men are just as bad. Then, as quoted in The London Daily Chronicle, he continues:

"There is scarcely a letter that is not full of weeping and wailing and lachrymose whining. That things at home are not the same as they were before the war, and that our dear ones are having to fight with shortage and deprivation, we out here know well enough. But why must it be always dined into our ears? Do not let us have these yards of whimperings."

Girls write of "the frightful lack of foodstuffs in the towns." A soldier's wife writes: "You simply cannot think what we soldiers' wives have to put up with." A woman writes to her husband of alleged hunger riots in some town or other, ending in conflicts with the police, and bloodshed.

The contributor to the Volkszeitung thinks that if letters from the field have to be submitted to a censorship, "it would be much more useful were there a censor for letters sent to the front, so that the writers of these jeremiads could be punished for their nonsense."

PAPER USED IN MOVIES WITH NEW 'COLD' LIGHT

PARIS, July 12.—The substitution of paper rolls for celluloid films in moving picture machines, made possible by the new "cold" light discovered by the French engineer Dussaud, which is described to the Academy of Science by Professor Branley, with whom Dussaud studied the new light, is obtained by automatic separation of heat rays from luminous rays, which occur together in all sources of light hitherto known to science.

The quest of an absolutely pure light devoid of all heat long has been one of the great problems of modern physics. The electric light is the nearest approach to this ideal, but far from it, as it gives off a certain amount of heat.

M. Dussaud had been working on this problem for many years. The light obtained by his method is so intense that it is possible to throw images from newspaper illustrations, picture postcards and photographic prints on a screen even in a lighted room as clearly and sharply as if they were glass latern slides.

SOME LACONIC VICTORY MESSAGES

GREAT GENERALS VIE IN THE BRIEFNESS OF THEIR DESPATCHES TO RULERS AND GOVERNMENTS.

Great generals seem to be rivals in the briefness with which they chronicle important events. One of the brief despatches of Joffre will forever remain memorable.

For over a month the Germans had been ravaging Belgium; they were pressing on France from the north and the east; after the capture of Liege and Namur they had won bloody battles at Charleroi and near Metz; day after day the French and British armies were falling back south and east of Paris to the valley of the Marne.

How long would the retreat go on? Would the Germans win before the allies could improve their resources? No. A ray of light suddenly illumined the darkness. Joffre had issued an army order that the time for the offensive had arrived, the time for victory or death. And then came that brief but ever famous despatch, in which Joffre stated that the allies had won "incontestable victory."

Lord Howard of Effingham, the admiral of the British fleet which inflicted to great a defeat on the Spanish Armada, is said to have announced his victory on a one-word note to Queen Elizabeth: 'Cantharis,' which, being interpreted, means 'The Spanish fly.'

Some Russian and Polish efforts in laconic despatches are worth recalling. Sobieski was more modestly reverent than Caesar when, in sending to the Pope the Moslem standards captured before Vienna, he write: 'I came, I saw, God conquered," and there was a similar touch in Suvaroff's message to Catherine after his capture of Ismail; "Glory to God and the Empress. Ismail is ours."

ENEMY CAME, WAS BEATEN.

Suvaroff was indulged in this kind of announcement by the Empress. When he was a major he disobeyed orders so that, the opportunity having arisen, he inflicted a signal defeat on the foe. In his despatch he stated:

"As a soldier I deserve death for disobeying orders; as a Russian I have done my duty. The enemy is no more."

To that Catherine replied:

"As a soldier I leave you to the mercy of your commander-in-chief; as a Russian I congratulate you as my lieutenant-colonel."

Not unlike the foregoing were the interchanges of courtesy between the two after the capture of Prague. The famous leader wrote:

"Hurrah! Prague! Suvaroff," to which the Empress replied: "Bravo! Field Marshal! Catherine."

Tufenne also indulged in laconicisms occasionally, the most famous instance being the despatch in which he announced his own condition and the victory at Dunkirk.

"The enemy came, was beaten. I am tired. Good-night."

RECEIPTS AMOUNTED TO ABOUT $500

The ladies of George Street Methodist Church are to be congratulated for the splendid success of their effort toward supplying meals for the many visitors to the city yesterday. The receipts amounted to about five hundred dollars, which means that a splendid net amount will be added to the Treasury fund.

Cool Trip to Rice Lake

The Steamer "Geneva's" Service on the River and Lake a Boon to the City

Capt. Harris of the steamer "Geneva" is putting his popular steamer at the service of the public for Thursday afternoon trips to Gore's Landing. She left her wharf this afternoon at 1.30 carrying a goodly number of excursionists who availed themselves of this chance of getting away from the torrid heat in the city. The river and lake trips of the "Geneva" should be well patronised as the sail is full of interest all the way down, and the cool breeze off the water tonic and refreshing. The steamer is always on time and always arranges to be in good time arriving back home.

Watch the Examiner and street bills for further announcements of the Geneva.

Busy Season At Police Court

To-day's Cases Provided an Aftermath of the Holiday

A long array of drunks, disorderly ones, and law-breakers faced Magistrate Dumble this morning at ten o'clock in the Police Court Halls of Justice to render an account for the unruly manner in which they spent the holiday. Six personages of all ages pleaded guilty to charges of being drunk and disorderly, and were assessed the traditional two dollars, amounting in all to $5.75.

Two local blacklisters admitted being drunk whilst on the prohibited list, and contributed ten dollars apiece to restore the balance of justice. One of them had taken advantage of the large crowds yesterday to make the rounds of the local hostelries, and had become pretty well "dizzied." The other came up on a week's remand, having imported the necessary juice from Port Hope a week ago, and made a distillery of his bedroom.

For driving a horse and buggy on Water Street whilst he was in a drunken condition, another man was fined two dollars. The driver in question did not consider himself to have been drunk, but the evidence of the local police proved his assertion to be inaccurate.

Two happy looking youths, who smiled throughout the morning's proceedings, and responded to their names with an alacrity proper only to soldiers, were charged with being deserters from the 44th Battalion. They were remanded for a week.

CARSON WANTS TO KNOW

LONDON, July 13.—Interpellated in the House of Commons Premier Asquith declined to discuss the conduct of the campaign by the British in Mesopotamia at this time, for State reasons, but said he had no desire to keep back anything. Sir Edward Carson intimated an intention to force a debate on the subject next week.

along the lines of organization work. Mr. Maclean eulogized the Order for the manner in which it had responded to the call of the Empire. This had resulted in a depletion of the ranks of the Orangemen. The speaker urged the members to make an effort to fill up the gaps in the ranks of the Order.

Dealing briefly with the recruiting situation the speaker said that much of the responsibility for assisting the cause by means of men rested with the farmer. The farmer, he said, represented fifty per cent of the population of Canada.

British Women Workers Beat All The World

NEW YORK, July 12.—A despatch from the British Intelligence Department received in New York, gives further extracts from a speech made Thursday night by Mr. Kelloway, of the munitions department, at Bedford. He said:

"Germany has never done anything which equals the work in this country in the way of industrial organization. During the past twelve months, eighty arsenals have been built or adapted, and, with the exception of a very few, are now producing heavy howitzers, big shells, or explosives.

"The weekly output of .303 cartridges is greater by millions than the annual output before the war. There is a certain machine gun being produced by the hundred every week in a factory ordered, planned, and built during the past twelve ...nths, which had never been made this country before 1915.

"France, Russia and Italy have ...n supplied by or through Great ...tain with many of the most im...tant munitions of war. Many ...usand tons of steel have been ...t to France. One leading firm has ...factory devoted entirely to the ...king provision for a particular gun ... the French Government. Russia ...s been supplied with great quanti...s of grenades, rifle cartridges, and ...ns and explosives, and some of ...se have been instrumental in en...ling the Russians to make their great offensive.

Contributions toward the equipment of the Belgian army are continuous. There has been established in a certain district in this country a Belgian village with a Belgian factory, employing Belgian workmen entirely engaged in the production of munitions for the Belgian army.

The Serbian army has been re-equipped very largely from the workshops of the United Kingdom.

There is as much work on one howitzer as for one of our large express locomotives. The Ministry of Munitions is now producing 18-pounders and 16-pounders, 4.5 inch and 6-inch, 8-inch and 9.2 inch howitzers in large numbers. It is a magnificent example of what British engineers can do when well led and organized.

Before this vast output had been secured it was necessary not only to secure factories, machine tools, and material, but labour had also to be trained and mobilized. Over 384,000 men out of 1,600,000 engaged in the trades had joined the army, but against this 184,000 women were engaged in war industries in 1914.

There are to-day 666,000. The total number of war workers was 198,600 in 1914 and now it is 3,600,000.

There are 471 different munition processes upon which women are now engaged. The women in France are doing wonders in muition making but our women workers beat the world."

X RAY MACHINE FOR ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

Peterborough's surgical equipment received a valuable addition during the past week when a new X-Ray machine was installed in St. Joseph's Hospital. The new machine arrived in the city last week, and was set up at the local hospital on Saturday. A demonstration of the new X-Rays in action was made on Monday morning by Dr. Petterdine, of the Gage Institute, College Street, Toronto, and one of the experts on X-Ray work in the Dominion. The formal opening took place before a number of the local medical profession, and a large crowd from the city interested in modern surgery. The new X-Rays is one of the powerful Five Kt. Wattler type, made in Boston, Mass., and was purchased through Ingram and Bell, of Toronto. Local surgeons who have seen the new machine in action declare that it is without doubt the finest one of its kind in the Dominion, and that its equipment and outfit are of the very best.

A large number of patients have already undergone treatment from the new machine, a dozen cases being treated the first day of its instalment.

Man-Eating Sharks Keep Bathers Out of the Water

NEW YORK, July 13.—From Florida to Coney Island to-day there are many in bathing suits but few go into water owing to the presence somewhere along the coast of man eating sharks who have killed three bathers and maimed several more during last few days. Believed excessive heat is bringing sharks north from usual territory near equator.

SEVENTEEN LICENSES ISSUED BY THE CITY

City Gathered in a Revenue of One Hundred and Twenty Dollars

About seventeen special eating house and refreshment booth licenses were issued by the city for the Orange celebration. At five dollars for each license the total sum netted by the city will be in the neighborhood of eighty-five dollars. In addition to this there was a special license for the merry-go-round that was located on the market and twenty-five dollars for the street parade that was staged by La Tena's wild animal show that invaded the city yesterday. This brings the grand total up to one hundred and twenty dollars that was taken in by the city.

Even though it be a glass of water given in the right spirit it shall receive its reward.

Thanking you Mr. Editor and friends.

CHAPLAIN L.O.L. No. 457.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—May I trespass upon your space long enough to express my admiration of the ingenuity of the slackers, the young men who should be in khaki but are not. Many times I have heard it suggested that they should don petticoats that they have no claim on the garments of a man. Such a suggestion is not fair to the women who are all patriotic. However, the slackers have solved the problem by attiring themselves in those skirts with the widely flowing collars—a sort of a neutral outfit that certainly is not a man's garment and that while resembling a women's shirt waist is not that either. I don't know what the skirts are called but would humbly suggest that they should be known as slackers skirts. The only mystery is that a young man who has nerve enough to be seen on the street in such effeminate dress should not have enlisted long ago. It is nerve of that kind that is needed on the firing line. The contrast between the appearance of one of these slackers skirts and a khaki tunic is nauseating at the present time.

Yours,

OBSERVER

FOUR SHARKS SEEN OFF ASBURY PARK

NEW YORK, July 12.—Fishermen who left Asbury Park early yesterday aboard the Tuna reported last night they had sighted four large sharks, one about a mile from the surf. Attempts to capture the monsters which have struck terror to bathers along the Jersey coast, were vain.

Work of enclosing the bathing places in steel nets was rushed yesterday at Asbury Park, and contracts for protecting the Ocean Grove Beach were let. Until these nets are finished no one will be allowed in the water.

City Engineer Swears Patronage Conditions Much Less Evil Now

MONTREAL, July 13.—Chief City Engineer Paul E. Mercier at the Bordeaux sewer probe before Mr. Justice Panneton, told of a change for the better in the matter of patronage evil in Montreal. Under the old regime at the City Hall, he explained, aldermen had the patronage, and not only appointed workmen and foremen, but kept in jobs men who did little or no work, but drew the city's pay envelope. The present system has changed this sort of thing according to Mr. Mercier. When he was asked if the aldermen still hung around for patronage, he replied that they knew it was a waste of time. The evidence of Mr Mercier was the feature of this morning's proceedings. At noon a second witness was put in the box in the person of Onesime Fillon, a city inspector now suspended, on account of the Bordeaux sewer scandals.

The court room was again crowded, and Mr. Justice Panneton decided that owing to the excessive heat, it would be a hardship to sit yesterday afternoon, so at 12.30 the court rose until ten o'clock to-day.

Mr. Mercier said that the results under the new regime were better than the results under the old regime. He observed that the cost of St. Urbain sewers, constructed batween 16th December, 1915 and 29th April, 1916 —winter and summer—was $20.97 per yard, and a comparison between this and the cost of the Bordeaux sewers demonstrated that the latter had cost the city too dear.

In reply to Mr. Albain Germain, counsel for the Menard family, witness told of the way cement could be lost. For instance, it could be lost through the rain, but under a well directed system of cartage that would not happen.

Mr. Germain—"Didn't Mr. Fuse, an inspector, bring to your notice the fact that during twelve days there were forty bags of cement which had to be put on one side as not fit for use?"

"No."

Witness would not say whether the high cost of the Bordeaux works was due to legitimate causes or to bad administration.

In answer to Mr. Horace Gagne, counsel for North End citizens, witness said that under the old system influence was sometimes brought upon the engineers to accept as foremen men who were not competent. Ward aldermen often used their influence.

"Who engaged the workmen?" enquired Mr. Gagne.

"The aldermen of the ward," replied the witness, who added that he was convinced that there had been on public works, persons who did not work, but received salaries from the city. He was also convinced that materials went elsewhere than on the work of sewers. "The high cost of the work was due," said the chief engineer "to a lack of surveillance upon those persons who do not work, but get paid, and to the incompetence of certain employees."

In reply to Mr. Geoffrion, counsel for the city, witness said that Wilfrid Menard, a foreman on the Bordeaux sewers, was recommended by Alderman Menard. Generally, at the present moment, aldermen asked foremen to employ such and such men in preference to somebody else.

Mr. Germain, asked witness if the aldermen went after the patronage still, and witness replied that in many cases they wasted their time.

Onesime Fillon, inspector, said he was suspended on the 7th July from the city's service. Prior to that time he had under his jurisdiction the construction of the Bordeaux ward sewers since the month of August, 1916. Lucien Breault was his assistant inspector. He had the superintendance of the work on Pasteur street, Valmont street, Bois de Boulaugne street, Bourlage street, Persillier and Gouin boule vard. He said he had nothing to do with the nomination of the foremen or workmen. This was left to Engineer Amirault. Alderman Menard had never asked witness to make any recommendations, he said. He explained the system of filling in the trenches, and he said that after the trenches were filled at Bordeaux he gave proprietors permission to cart the earth away.

TWO GIRLS DROWNED AT A WHITBY PICNIC

One Went to Rescue Other, Though a Poor Swimmer - Other Drownings

WHITBY, July 13.—A sad drowning accident occurred here by which Miss Evelyn Elvidge, daughter of Principal and Mrs. W. J. Elvidge of Whitby, and Miss Clara Nevin of Windsor, lost their lives. The young ladies were in attendance at a Sunday school class picnic at the lake shore southwest of the town, and were in swimming. Miss Nevin was a fair swimmer and had been in the water for some time when she apparently took a cramp and being beyond her depth calle dfor help. Miss Elvidge, though able to swim but little, at once went to her assistance, but this only resulted in both girls going down together. Their companions on the shore were unable to give any form of assistance, and had to run some distance to the Hospital for the Insane to obtain help. Dr. Mitchell at once hurried to the scene, and brought the victims of the accident to shore, but after working over them for some time was obliged to declare life extinct.

Miss Elvidge was about sixteen years of age and a very bright High School girl; Miss Nevin was some years older.

Ammonia Tank Explodes With Loss of Lives

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 13.—From six to nine persons are missing, and are believed to have perished in an explosion of an ammonia tank in the butcher shop of Martin Schmidt, in Brooklyn to-day, when at least a score were injured. The ammonia tank let go with terrific force while the street car was passing the shop. The shop and car were completely wrecked.

Little Hope For Deputation

Examiner Special:

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, July 13.—After hearing a delegation of citizens of Berlin who wanted to put off changing the name till after the next municipal election, although the people have already passed a by-law for the change, the Ontario Government promises consideration, but gave no hope of complying with a demand of the delegation. Representatives of Berlin City Council and others favouring a change argued against delay.

DAMAGE ACTION AGAINST TULLYS UNDER WAY TO-DAY

The adjourned sessions of the County Court were resumed to-day before Judge Huycke for the hearing of the civil action for damages against Mrs. Tully and Miss Edith Tully for ill-treating a little girl, Evelyn Glover, daughter of Private Robert Glovert of the 93rd Battalion. In another court judgment was given against the defendants and a fine imposed. The present action is to recover damages for the suffering and loss to the plaintiff.

Mr. F. D. Kerr is representing Evelyn Glover and Mr. G. N. Gordon is counsel for Mrs. Tully and her daughter. The case is proceeding.

Temperature Was 93 in the Shade

Two Degrees Were Added to the Record After the Noon Reading

Yesterday the maximum temperature was ninety-three degrees in the shade. At noon it was ninety-one, but before the afternoon was out two more degrees was added to the official record. Despite this handicap the Orangemen staged one of the best parades that has ever been held in this city. The members turned out between two and three thousand strong, while the influx of visitors to the city was well over the ten thousand mark.

G.T.R. Officials Had Busy Day Here

One side of the operation of train despatching was illustrated here yesterday. The G.T.R. yard was crowded with engines that had brought in the excursion trains and La Tena's Show, and long sidings were packed with coaches and flats. Mr. R. E. Orr, of Lindsay, trainmaster, and Mr. W. J. Fee, road foreman of engines, handled all the rolling stock most efficiently. The schedule for the special trains was carried out to the minute. The officials later superintended the outgoing of La Tena's circus which left at 1 a.m. to-day for Campbellford.

OBITUARY

LAURA McMARTIN.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Miss Laura McMartin, youngest daughter of Mr. Patrick McMartin, Lot 22, Concession 15, Otonabee. The deceased lady was aged twenty-three years and seven months, and had been lingering some time. She is survived by her sorrowing parents, seven sisters and two brothers. The sisters are: Mrs. Patrick Cavanagh, Otonabee; Mrs. Pierce Power, South Monaghan; Mrs. Styles, Toronto; Mrs. Engles, Rochester; Miss Catharine, of Rochester; Gertrude, of Toronto, and Teresa at home. Two brothers, Michael, of Peterborough, and John Francis, of Rochester, also survive.

The funeral will leave the family residence, Otonabee, at 8.30 to-morrow morning, and proceed to the Sacred Heart Church, then to St. Peter's Cemetery.

EDMUND LAYFIELD.

The death took place last evening of Edmund Layfield at his residence, 580 Charlotte street, after an illness covering a period of nine years. The late Mr. Layfield was born 73 years ago, in Leeds, Megantic, and was the son of the late Robert Layfield, of Inverness, Quebec. He came to Peterborough from Sherbrooke, P.Q., with the Canadian General Electric Company, about 26 years ago, and has resided in Peterborough ever since. During his residence here Mr. Layfield has taken a deep, but quiet, interest in civic and general public matters, and was deservedly a much respected citizen. He was a faithful member of St. John's Anglican Church and a staunch Conservative in politics.

During all his illness he was surrounded with tender love and devotion, and as Major Davidson said on his last visit to him, his evening of life had been a long and happy one.

He leaves to mourn his death a loving wife and two daughters, Mrs. T. H. Mather of Syracuse, N. Y., and Miss Jane E. Layfield, at home; and one son, Capt. R. E. Layfield, Quartermaster 80th Battalion, overseas.

The funeral, which will be private, will be held to-morrow afternoon from his late residence. A quiet funeral service will be held in St. John's Church at 2.30 o'clock and then proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

Friends are kindly asked to omit flowers.

What Peblo Means

What the name "Peblo" protects and why such an apparently small thing as an eyeglass should be sold subject to a copyrighted name, was explained to an Examiner representative, by Dr. A. A. Fowler, recently. Peblo lenses are the highest attainment of production in the perfection of eye, glass, lenses. After satisfying himself on that point, Mr. Fowler secured exclusive right to sell these lenses in Peterborough, and to buy Fowler's "Peblo" lenses means that you have glasses of the greatest purity, clearness, and hardness that are made anywhere. That is what "Peblo" means to Dr. Fowler's customers, and why a registered name is worth while.

Dr. Fowler's Optical establishment is kept strictly up to the times. When a new instrument is introduced that gives any more minute diagnosis of a case, than those in use, Dr. Fowler has it installed, as he says, the best is none too good for his patrons. With such an equipment and such high standard goods as his "Peblo" lenses, Fowler's screwless mounts, together with a complete automatic grinding plant, and repair department, makes the service given at the Fowler Optical Parlours strictly first class. So confident is Dr. Fowler of his ability to satisfy every case that he gives an absolute guarantee with every pair of glasses sold. This guarantee is backed by the longest continuous Optical business in Peterborough. A pleasing feature is that in spite of a large increase in price from the manufacturers, Dr. Fowler has maintained before war-prices, giving his customers the benefit of his very large buying orders. 1d1w

Good Work Of The Police

Mr. J. H. Spence, District Master of the Orange Order, and Chairman of the Celebration Committee which took part in formulating the programme for yesterday's celebration, has addressed a letter to Chief of Police Thompson, in commendation of the good work performed by the police department in connection with yesterday's event. The police had a busy day between the Orange celebration and the three-ringed show that visited the city. Very few arrests were made.

ITALY NEEDS BIG GUNS

All That Is Required to Break Through on Isonzo Front.

LONDON, July 13.—The Times military correspondent writes that the Isonzo front is not at the moment the principal point of interest, but may become so again. The Austrian position, he says, is strong, but presents points of weakness.

"Considering the progress already made by the Italians," he adds, "I imagine Gen. Cadorna needs nothing but a superior force of guns to break through as soon as circumstances allow him to devote his whole attention to this front, once more. I think that the only question is one of paying the price to succeed."

The correspondent describes the Alpine warfare and says: "It is all very marvellous and very perfect. The Italians also are adepts in trench building and have brought the art of mountain fighting to a degree of perfection never attained before. The Germans trained their Alpine corps here before going to Serbia. The Italians have made many prisoners and from them it certainly is proved that German artillery has been and is now co-operating with the Austrians."

ARMS PLANT CUTS HOURS

Berlin Factory Puts 4,000 Women Workers on 8-Hour Day.

THE HAGUE, July 12.—The Berlin Arms Manufactory has reduced the work of its 4,000 women employees to eight hours daily. The Vorwarts urges that all similar establishments follow its example, as long hours, combined with underfeeding, are proving most injurious to the women.

That the war diet is injurious to health is denied by Dr. Thiele of Chemnitz, who, according to The Clinical Weekly, has examined 1,055 children and found them on the average an inch taller and more than two kilograms heavier than pre-war children, while their general health is unimpaired.

HER COOLNESS AT THREAT OF DEATH SAVES JEWELRY

FIRING OF PISTOL AND SHOUTING CAUSES WASHINGTON HEIGHTS BURGLAR TO FLEE WITH ONLY $200 IN LOOT.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Mrs. E. Benjamin Ramsdell, whose husband is medical officer for the New York Fire Department, was awakened about two o'clock yesterday morning by a burglar in her bedroom on the second floor of her dwelling, at No. 342 Convent Avenue, Washington Heights. She heard him walking upstairs and saw his dim form enter her room. He had an electric flash lamp and suddenly threw its bright rays into her face.

"Make a noise and I'll blow out your brains," he said as he drew the soft brim of his straw hat further down on his face. Mrs. Ramsdell then noted that the lower part of his face was masked with a white handkerchief.

"Where's the money?" the thief demanded, pressing a revolver to Mrs. Ramsdell's face.

"If you promise not to hurt me, you can have everything of value in the house," said Mrs. Ramsdell when she had recovered some of her composure. She explained later that she believed it better to use diplomacy with a burglar so well armed.

"All right, that's a bargain, but one cry from you and all's off," he said. "Where's the money?"

"We don't keep much money in the house, but you will find some jewelry in a bureau drawer in the alcove."

DISTURBS FRENCH BULL PUP.

The burglar went to the bedroom door and closed it before entering the alcove. There he disturbed a French bull pup that mistook him for a member of the family, apparently, because he began to play about his feet.

"Call that dog off or I'll let daylight through him," demanded the burglar. Mrs. Ramsdell called to the pup and he ran to her.

The burglar opened several drawers and rummaged about and then returned to the bed, angry.

"I can't find any jewels," he said. "Now, you get up and get them for me."

Mrs. Ramsdell pleaded inability to rise and told him he would find them in the second small drawer on the right hand side of the bureau. The burglar returned to the alcove and Mrs. Ramsdell heard him feeling among the cases containing jewelry. Then she silently left the bed, went to the door, unlocked it noiselessly, and ran up to the third floor, which is occupied by her son, C. Homer Ramsdell, of the law firm of Ryan, Wheeler and Ramsdell, No. 2 Rector street, and by the family servants.

SEIZES BASEBALL BAT.

Arousing her son, Mrs. Ramsdell told him a burglar was in her room. Mr. Ramsdell seized a baseball bat, the only kind of a weapon he could find in his room, opened a front window and began to call for the police.

His cries awakened his father, who had been asleep in a rear room on the second floor, and Dr. Ramsdell leaped from bed, seized a pistol and ran down stairs and began to shoot, from a window, hoping to attract the attention of a policeman.

In the commotion which quickly spread through the neighbourhood, the burglar escaped. He probably ran down stairs and out of the house as soon as he discovered that Mrs. Ramsdell had left the room.

The neighbourhood was highly excited in a few minutes. A policeman arrived, but the burglar apparently had gone in the opposite direction. He had obtained about $200 worth of jewelry, hut had overlooked jewels of much greater value that had been in small leather cases in the back part of the drawer.

Entrance to the residence was obtained by false keys to the two front doors. Both doors had been locked when the family retired.

VICTROLA FOR 52ND BATTERY

Yesterday's Enterprise of Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E. Was a Great Success

The Regent and Members of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., desire to thank all those who kindly assisted them in their work for their booth on the 12th. Sincere thanks are due to Mr. Conway for the loan of the tent, also to all those who so liberally supplied the booth with pies and cakes, especially the relations and friends of the men of the 52nd Battery. It will be most gratifying to them to know that sufficient money was raised to assure the purchase of an instrument as handsome as that recently sent to the 93rd Battalion by this Chapter, with a liberal supply of records.

Special Meeting Of City Council

The City Council will hold a special meeting this evening to consider the local military situation. Prospects for a new battalion for Peterborough are said to be fairly good. To-morrow His Worship Mayor Duffus expects to visit Kingston in connection with the matter.

Militia Department Expected to Make Announcement Regarding New Peterboro Battalion

His Worship Mayor Duffus has returned to the city, after an absence of a couple of days, which were spent in an endeavour to present Peterborough's claim for military recognition in the form, if possible, of authorization for a new battalion. The Mayor interviewed Major-General Sir Sam. Hughes, Col. Hemming, Officer Commanding the 3rd Division, and Lieut.-Col. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion. While a definite statement was not forthcoming from the authorities, it was intimated that Peterborough would not be overlooked, and that an announcement of the Militia Department's intention would be made shortly. To-morrow Mayor Duffus will again visit Kingston in connection with the above mentioned matter.

While in Kingston the Mayor visited the 93rd Battalion, which he proudly states, has made a record for itself while in Kingston. Only one per cent. of the entire Battalion failed to pass the recent final examination.

Wilfrid Menard, Former City Foreman, Admits Lending Dynamite —No Entries Made to Keep Record

Swears He Gave Receipt When Father Brought Explosive Back.

MONTREAL, July 14.—Wilfrid Menard, a city foreman, suspended since the Bordeaux sewer affair became public, and now enlisted as a soldier, appeared at the Panneton Probe, sercitier of the subpoena sent to Valcartier Camp for him, and told how the city materials were given away and loaned by him while he was receiving the city's pay to protect the city's interests. The information was pulled from witness by Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city in the investigation. Little by little he told his story. He admitted that he had not only ordered city stone and earth to be carted to the Menard wharves and to other citizens, but how he had "loaned" dynamite to his father and cement to others. The city's materials, he said, had not been entered in a book; he trusted to his memory in the case of the dynamite he lost [illegible] he had worked on the works Pasteur Street, Viel Street, Bourdages Street.

In reply to Mr. Geoffrion, witness said he was named foreman by late city engineer, Mr. Georges Jan[illegible]

Mr. Geoffrion: "Have you knowledge of being recommended your brother, the alderman?"

Witness: "I do not know."

BRITISH TROOPS SWEPT THROUGH GERMAN LINES

NUMBER OF IMPORTANT VILLAGES CAPTURED

British Troops Broke The German Lines On Four Mile Front

Captured Several Important Villages in Smashing Blow and Advanced More Than a Mile---The Gain is the Greatest Scored for the Anglo-French Offensive Since the Great Assault, Thirteen Days Ago.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES

LONDON, July 14.—British troops broke the German line on a four-mile front at dawn to-day with a smashing blow that swept the British lines into the villages of Longueval and Bazentin-Legrand, and cleared the Trones Wood, an advance of more than a mile. The gain is the greatest scored for the Anglo-French offensive since the opening of the great assault thirteen days ago.

"At dawn we attacked the enemy's second system of defense," said an official bulletin from General Haig, given out at 11 a.m. "We broke in hostile positions on a four-mile front capturing several strongly defended localities. Heavy fighting continues."

ALLIES ON THE MOVE.

LONDON, July 14.—Lloyd George in the Commons said that the Allies are now across the watershed on the western front, and victory is commencing to flow in their direction.

Monster Shark Was Killed

Special to The Examiner:

KEYPORT, N.J., July 14.—A monster shark containing part of a human body, was killed here. It is eleven feet long and is the same one which killed two bathers here.

The shark, weighing 300 pounds and eleven feet long, was killed near the mouth of Matawan Creek, N.J. and is undoubtedly the same fish which yesterday invaded the creek and killed two bathers.

ENGLAND HAS TWO BASEBALL LEAGUES

LONDON, July 13.—Baseball has gripped England and is now being played in many parts of the country before big crowds. The presence of large numbers of Canadian soldiers has awakened great interest. THE FLY IN AMBER.

(From The Orillia Packet.)

"She had a face divinely fair,
A face to make an artist glad;
She had a wealth of Auburn hair,
And, Oh, the figure that she had!
Her soulful eyes were big and brown,
A rounded softness graced her arms,
I fancied that in all the town
No girl could boast of rarer charms.

"Her fingers tapered and were white.
I paused to gaze a little while,
And fancied that the day was bright
Because she had so sweet a smile.
But all my happy fancies fled,
And gloomily I went my way,
When to a passing friend she said—
'I seen your brother yesterday.'"

Dr. D. S. Abbott, Pure Food and Drug Commissioner for Texas, condemns the use of egg albumen in Baking Powder.

Interstate Grocer, St. Louis, Jan. 24, 1914.

"Albumen is not a necessary constituent of baking powder," states Dr. Abbott in discussing his decision. "Its use in baking powder is to produce a foam when water is added, for the purpose of deceiving the consumer with respect to its quality. In this respect albumen serves a fraudulent purpose."

According to the Department's statement, albumen in powder forms a slight membrane over the mixture made when water is added to the powder, and, as the gas is generated from the powder, it is held beneath the membrane, thereby causing the mixture to rise rapidly, whereas there may be less gas really generated from the powder than is generated in other brands of powder where the egg albumen is not used. Because of the very small quantity that is used, it serves as no healthy ingredient, and hence the department has forbidden its use.

The Russians Capture Two Thousand Prisoners

Desperate Fighting to West of the Lower Stripa in Galicia is Announced by Petrograd War Office---Artillery Duel on the Stokhod in Volhynia---55,000 German Munition Workers Out on Strike---Were Employed as Munition and Aerodrome Workmen at Berlin and Johannisthal; Protest Against Dr. Liebnecht's Sentence.

PETROGRAD, July 14.—The capture of more than 2,000 prisoners by the Russians in desperate fighting to the west of the Lower Stripa, in Galicia, is announced by the War Office.

On the Stokhod, in Volhynia, there has been an artillery duel.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The statement says:

"On the Dvina, above and below Friedrichstadt, we carried out successful reconnaissances.

"On the Stokhod there has been an artillery duel. Some squadrons of enemy aircraft flew behind our lines dropping bombs and firing machine guns.

"In Galicia, in the region west of the Lower Stripa, desperate fighting has occurred in many places, the enemy launching energetic counter-attacks. We took more than 2,000 prisoners, and captured a gun and some machine guns.

"On Tuesday our torpedo craft in the western part of the Black Sea captured a Turkish steamer with a carga of petroleum and barley and brought it into port. Other torpedo craft on Wednesday destroyed at the mouth of the River Mellen, west of Ergheli, another steamer in town of two tugs.

"Caucasus front—West of the Erzerum line we carried out a successful offensive. The Turks vainly attempted to launch counter-attacks."

GERMANS ON STRIKE.

AMSTERDAM, July 14.—The Socialist newspaper, Tribune, asserts that 55,000 workmen employed in munitions factories and electrical works in Berlin, and in an aerodrome at Johannisthal, have gone on strike as a protest against the prison sentence imposed on Dr. Karl Liebkecht, the Socialist leader, for participation in the May Day demonstration at Berlin.

The owners of these great united shows have ever held closely to the successful policies of their famous forefathers and the traditional glories of their brilliant processional street display has remained undimmed, standing second to none for more than a half century. In those fortunate locals of Coup and Lent's regular coming, this spectacular pageant is a recognized, warmly anticipated event when it glowingly foretells of the exhibition whose advent is announced, whose wonders will be revealed in Peterborough, Thursday, July 20th.

Two More Are Killed By Man-Eating Shark

SEA MONSTERS TERRIFY SUMMER POPULATION ALONG THE NEW JERSEY COAST.

Matawan, N. J., July 13.—Lester Stillwell, 12 years of age, was killed by a man eating shark while bathing in an arm of Raritan Bay, near here yesterday afternoon. Stanley Fisher, 21 years of age, who went to his assistance, was so badly injured in a desperate struggle with the nine-foot sea monster, and died while being taken to the Long Branch hospital. Joseph Dunn, 12 years of age, bathing some distance away, in the same inlet, was attacked by a shark and one of his legs was so badly injured that it will probably have to be amputated.

This is the third time within two weeks that sharks have claimed the lives of bathers along the New Jersey coast. Charles E. Van Sant, a youth of Philadelphia, was killed by one of Beach Haven, N.J., on July 2. Chas. Bruder of Spring Lake, N.J., was attacked and both of his legs taken off by a shark on July 6. He died while the men who went to his rescue were carrying him ashore.

The summer population along the New Jersey coast has become terror-stricken and few persons now are venturing into the water at the beach resorts which have not been protected by steel nets. Motor boat patrols carrying armed men have been established at various points to hunt the man-eaters.

Instead of using barley and rice for thickening soup, try oatmeal occasionally.

The housekeeper who wishes to save trouble should insist on fruit for all desserts during the summer months.

The Joy of a Vacation may be turned to the sorrow that comes from indigestion. The battle with hotel menus is a losing one for the man with a weak stomach. Happy is the man who listens to the call of the wild—who goes fishing, hunting and canoeing—who takes with him Triscuit, the Shredded Whole Wheat wafer. Triscuit is made of the whole wheat, steam-cooked, shredded and baked. A tasty Summer snack, supplying the greatest amount of nutriment in smallest bulk. Delicious with butter, soft cheese or marmalades.

Investigation Has Been Ordered

Mystery Surrounds The Death of Infant Near Westwood

Coroner Dr. Greer yesterday afternoon empanelled a jury at Comstock's undertaking parlours to inquire into the death of a male infant by the name of Douglas, whose parents live near Westwood.

The child was born on July 4th, under proper medical supervision, and attendance, and when a little over a day old died under circumstances that caused an investigation by the Provincial Detective Bureau, which resulted in the exhuming of the body. It was brought to Peterborough.

ORDERED POST MORTEM.

The Coroner's Jury ordered a post mortem and adjourned until Friday evening, July 28th, at 8 o'clock, when the witnesses to prove the contention of the provincial police will be ready.

The mother of the child is in a very delicate condition at her home in Westwood, but it is thought will be ready for examination by the jury when it re-assembles.

The jury is as follows John Anderson (foreman); Duncan Drummond, T. J. Moore, Thos. Detcher, F. Snelgrove, Bruce Patterson, S. Hoolihan, Carl Schmuck, W. J. Routley, T. H. Glover.

How The City's Supplies Were Given Away

Wilfrid Menard, Former City Foreman, Admits Leading Dynamite —No Entries Made to Keep Record

Swears He Gave Receipt When Father Brought Explosive Back.

MONTREAL, July 14.—Wilfrid Menard, a city foreman, suspended since the Bordeaux sewer affair became public, and now enlisted as a soldier, appeared at the Panneton probe, responding to the subpoena sent to Valcartier Camp for him, and told how the city materials were given away and loaned by him while he was receiving the city's pay to protect the city's interests. The informationw as pulled from witness by Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city in the investigation. Little by little he told his story. He admitted that he had not only ordered city stone and earth to be carted to the Menard wharves and to other citizens, but how he had "loaned" dynamite to his father and cement to others. The city's materials, he said, had not been entered in a book; he trusted to his memory in the case of the dynamite he loaned to his father, but he declared that the dynamite was returned by his father, who now had a receipt signed by witness to prove it.

Charles Jubleaut, a city carter at the time the Bordeaux sewers were constructed, testified that he had carted earth from the city's sewer trenches to the properties of Messrs. Aldas Menard, Wilfrid Picard, Legault, Fortier, Valiquette and Brennan. He had carted 400 loads to the property of Aldas Menard, about 60 for Valiquette, two or three loads for Legault, 30 for Fortier, and more than 100 to Mr. Picard. Witness said that he had carted earth to the Menard wharves longer than anywhere else. He also spoke of having heard Gordien Menard, Sr., referring to one of the wharves as "Little Gordien's wharf," meaning his son, Alderman Gordien Menard. He heard him say once that he wanted the wharf to be finished before the alderman's return from Quebec.

In reply to Mr. Albain Germaine, K.C., counsel for the Menard family, the witness said that he had given an affidavit of what he was going to say at the enquete. He admitted that he had talked over with other people what he was going to say at the enquete. He had spoken to Mr. Eugene Picard one night at the house of Mr. Georges Coutlee. Among the people there he mentioned Mr. Lussier. He admitted, too, that he had been against Ald. Menard at the last election. Three days before the last municipal election he was dismissed from the city's employ, because he was told there was no more earth to cart.

Witness said he had been at meetings held recently at the house of Mr. Coutlee to discuss the enquete. Witnesses who were to give evidence were there, and the testimony they were to give was discussed. Witness had been present at two of these meetings, he told Mr. Germaine.

Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city, remarked that the enquete itself was the subject of conversation of the whole of Bordeaux.

Witness declared that during the fall of 1915, he asked Foreman Deslauriers for some earth and he told him that he had not the right to give any. Witness did not work for the city at that time.

Was in Uniform.

Wilfrid Menard, brother of Alderman Menard, appeared in uniform from Valcartier Camp, as the next witness. He said he had been foreman of sewer work in Bordeaux since 1st April, 1915, and before that time he was assistant foreman. He was suspended about the middle of April. He had worked on the works on Pasteur Street, Viel Street, and Bourdages Street.

In reply to Mr. Geoffrion, witness said he was named foreman by the late city engineer, Mr. Georges Janin.

Mr. Geoffrion: "Have you any knowledge of being recommended by your brother, the alderman?"

Witness: "I do not know."

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 to 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends may say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and many thin men and women we believe can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepare it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy, flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive, all leading druggists in this vicinity sell it in large home-forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in each large box.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 76 St. Antoine St., Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper

Jelly cake should have the edges pared off carefully to make it roll easily.

When the knives of the food chopper become dull and discolored run a small piece of sandsoap through the chopper. This will sharpen and brighten the knives at the same time. The pulverized sand soap may then be used for scouring.

CANADIAN WAR WIVES

Too Many Want to Live in England, Says Paper

Many soldiers' wives have been leaving Canada to live in England as they believe they can live cheaper there. Among the number have been many from Hamilton, it being stated that about 150 have gone from here, says the Hamilton Herald. The local patriotic branch at the opening of the war assisted many across. This practice has, however, been stopped as many find that they cannot live for less in the old country than here, and as the patriotic allowance is stopped it is much better for soldiers' wives to live here. The practice is being discouraged by the local authorities. It is this which is responsible in a large measure for the fact that so many of the casualties appear as having their next of kin in the old country.

A Careful Irish Soldier

An Irish soldier had lost his left eye in action, but was allowed to have a glass eye in its place. Being a typical "absent-minded beggar," he appeared on parade one day minus his left "lamp."

"Nolan," said the officer, "you are not properly dressed. Why is your artificial eye not in its proper place?"

"Sure, sir," replied Nolan, "I left it in my box to keep an eye on my kit while I'm on parade."

C.M.R. AS INFANTRY

"Of course we none of us liked the change from cavalry to infantry," said an officer of the Canadian Mounted Rifles in hospital, speaking to a representative of the Canadian Gazette, "but though the men grumbled a bit at first, they picked up their new work quickly. They had come over to fight, they said, and if they could not fight as cavalry they were quite ready to fight as infantry. Colonel Harry Baker, of Sherbrooke, who headed the 5th C.M.R., deserved much credit. His regiment has been highly commended, and it is spoken of as one of the best battalions in the —— Canadian Division. Colonel Baker, like other commanders, went on the excellent principle that you must look after the men and let the officers look after themselves. It is a sound idea, and the men were devoted to him."

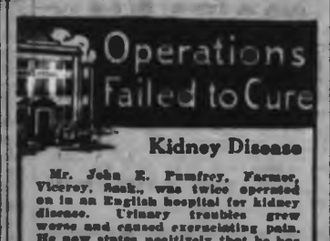
Another officer of the C.M.R. spoke also of the change from being cavalry to infantry. The only Canadian cavalry left, he said, were the two permanent regiments, the R.C.D.'s and Strathcona's Horse, and also the Fort Garry Horse. He went on to speak of the difficulties and confusion caused at first by the change. The men did not understand infantry drill, and at first it seemed as if not only was their cavalry equipment wasted, but also their year of training. But that year of training stood them in good stead, and they rapidly learned their new duties. Indeed, the regiments were already earning good reputations as excellent infantry battalions.

FRENCH CANADA AND WAR

Her Leaders Declare Purpose of Allies and Canada's Duty

Writing of recruiting efforts in French Canada Sir Max Aitken says: Nor was the support of the French-Canadian politicians to the recruiting movement lacking. Mr. Oliver Asselin, one of the coadjutors of Mr. Henri Bourassa of the Nationalist journal, Le Devoir, declared that the cause of the Allies must be supported, and himself offered to raise a further regiment for overseas service, appealing to the memory "Of the France of Joan of Arc, the immortal France of our ancestors, France that the world can never forget." His offer was accepted and the late malcontent, as "Major" Asselin, set about raising the 163rd Battalion.

"It is the pride and the privilege of French Canada," declared Hon. Mr. Casgrain, "that in this great cause we shall assume our full share of the burdens imposed on our common Empire." "We come to this House," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in January, 1916, "with one aim only; to contribute, as far as may be in our power, to the final and complete victory of the Allies over Germany. Our supreme aspiration is that Belgium shall again be free, and as prosperous as she was—if that be possible in view of the awful destruction she has suffered. It is our aim, also, that France shall have her lost territory and her natural boundaries restored to her and that old England shall retain, unimpaired and undiminished as ever, her prestige and her power in the world."



Mr. John E. Pumfrey, Farmer, Viceroy, Sask., was twice operated on in an English hospital for kidney disease. Urinary troubles grew worse and caused excruciating pain. He now states positively that he has been cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and is enjoying excellent health.

This is further proof that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, by their combined action, cure the most serious and complicated ailments of the kidneys. Prove this for yourself.

IS YOUR HEALTH WORTH $5.00?

Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."—Mrs. JENNIE MOYER, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacements, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, backache or bearing-down pains, need the tonic-strengthening properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice, write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

INDIAN RECRUITING

Red Men Make Very Capable and Cheerful Soldiers

Many of the Indian recruits for the Canadian overseas forces have come from the Muskoka, Parry Sound and Algoma districts. Out of a total population of four thousand of the Six Nations Indians in Western Ontario no fewer than three hundred are with the colors. Many others volunteered, but were refused for various reasons. The brown soldiers are great shots and many of them are used for sniping. There are no better in the Imperial army. Many of the Indians who have been refused have a tendency to consumption, but it is thought that if they were used as "snipers" and not confined to barracks or trenches their tendency to consumption would not develop. However, the risk has been considered too great.

All the officers of the Indian battalion, the 114th Haldimand, are Indians except one, and they are a magnificent body of men. It has been found convenient, if not necessary, to have Indian officers for many of the Ojibways especially cannot speak English. Besides the Indians like having their own officers. They march splendidly, much better than the average white troops, and at the end of a long day's route march they come into camp shouting and singing, and are in better spirits than when they set out. They are great chorus singers, and most of them have mouth organs which they play skilfully. Up to the middle of 1916 exactly 667 Indians had enlisted from the province of Ontario. They were distributed as follows: Ojibways 323, Iroquois, 294, and Delawares50. There were 65 from Quebec, including Iroquois 43, Ojibways 12, Micmacs 4, Hurons 3 and Abenakis 2. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta sent 94 Sioux and Crees; 32 Micmacs from the Maritime Provinces, and five others from British Columbia and the Yukon.

QUAINT WAR ECONOMIES

Using One Lump of Sugar Instead of Two

The most curious example of war economy, as practised in London, is that two of the greatest London stores have dropped apostrophes in their announcements and catalogues. A large tea shop firm issued advice for economies by way of a notice on their tea tables. One suggestion is that if people who formerly took two lumps of sugar would now take only one there would be a considerable saving to the nation and assistance in carrying on the war. Some of the customers have acted on the advice, but, fearful that they might embarrass the firm by making their economy a matter of profit to them, make a habit of unblushingly pocketing the second lump to be used at home. Empty tin cans have now a value, and one firm has exchanged a pound of their coffee for one and a half dozen coffee tins.

Portugal's Diplomat

Senhor Texeira Gomes, the Minister of the Portuguese Republic in London, was brought into the limelight by reason of Germany's declaration of war against his country. Senhor Gomes is a man of many accomplishments, and it is difficult to say in which capacity he works hardest—as business Minister looking after not only diplomatic affairs, but also all his country's Consuls in Britain; as scientific student; or as a man of letters. He is both novelist and dramatist.

IRISH IN TRENCHES

Real Spirit of Race Shown by Recruiting and Fighting

Grattan O'Leary writes in The Ottawa Journal as follows: Casement's attempt to land arms and ammunition in Ireland to aid an uprising against England has parallels in history, but the parallel ends with the attempt. The conditions prevailing in Ireland are not the conditions which would have welcomed the arrival of Wolf Tone and Hoche. For a month before Casement landed there were reports from Ireland of seditious speeches and Sinn Fein rioting. The writer has before him a copy of the Freeman's Journal, the oldest, greatest and most influential newspaper in Ireland. The so-called rioting of the Sinn Feiners is dismissed in a paragraph, as just an ordinary news story of a comparatively unimportant event—the noisy shouting of a few youngsters who were promptly looked after by the police. It would be foolish to set oneself up at this distance as a final judge of the actual conditions prevailing in Ireland. But there are certain facts, official and unchallengable, which give the lie to the reports in some American newspapers that any important section of the Irish people are for Germany in this war. There is first of all the official fact that more than 150,000 recruits had been obtained in Ireland—from a population only half as great as that of Canada. This does not take into account the great number of Irish reservists who went back to their old regiments, Irishmen who joined British regiments in Scotland and England, nor Irishmen who are in the navy. There are three complete Irish divisions on the firing line, an Irish brigade recruited on the Tyne, Irish battalions from London, Liverpool, and Manchester. Not one solitary member of the Irish Nationalist Party, the accredited spokesmen of the Irish people, but has supported the British cause. A brother, a son and a nephew of the Irish leader are at the front, as are seven members of the party itself. Taken all in all it is not too high an estimate to say that a quarter of a million Irishmen are to-day enrolled under the Empire's flag; and twenty-two Victoria Crosses since the war began tells the story of how they fight. In the face of these facts; in the light of the undying glory won by the Tenth Irish Division in the Hell of Suvla Bay, who can say that Roger Casement, and not John Redmond and Sir Edward Carson, spoke for the heart of the Emerald Isle?

JOKE ON THE SOLDIER

Girl Cousin Played a Pleasant One on Tommy

One of the Tommies, who writes home regularly from "Somewhere in Flanders," recently received an answer to one of his letters from a girl cousin. In her letter she promised him "a present, which would supply both him and his messmates with a good blow-out." He spread the good news amongst his comrades, who, of course, were delighted. Some days later he was ordered to appear at the master-at-arms' office to sign for a parcel. "It's landed!" he yelled, joyfully. "Sharpen your teeth, me lads!"

After signing he was handed his parcel, which, on being hurriedly opened, was found to contain a cheap mouth-organ with a label attached, "You can blow out to your heart's content!" He had to stand a lot of "kid" about it, but he took it all cheerfully, and made the best of the present by entertaining his comrades to a good "blow-out" of the popular tunes so dear to the hearts of the Tommies.

The Boy Kitchener

As a boy Horatio Herbert Kitchener impressed observers in different ways. An old friend of the family describes him as a "manly, active and spirited little fellow, who could not keep quiet, and consequently, like all boys of his kind, used to get into scrapes, but had great luck in getting out of them." Another says: "He was a smart, intelligent, growing-up lad, promising to be a smart youngster and taciturn, good at books, but at talking a bad fellow." A third remembers him as "quiet in outdoor games and gymnastics." To a fourth he was "a shy, self-contained boy, who early showed a talent for figures."

NAVALISM IS DIFFERENT FROM HUN MILITARISM

Urging Alliance With Britain, United States Writer Draws Distinctions —Sea Power Defensive

Dr. George L. Beer, of New York City, the leading political economist, argues for an agreement between Great Britain and the United States. He says: "There is no likelihood of friction provided we do not adopt the re-actionary policy of using the Monroe Doctrine and Pan-Americanism to secure by treaty or otherwise special and exclusive privileges that would shut the door to British commerce. If we frankly agree to a self-denying ordinance to this effect and at the same time assume responsibility—as apparently we are to do—for some measure of order and justice in the disturbed parts of Central and South America, England's extensive economic interests in these regions, created by centuries of enterprise, would be amply safeguarded. Under such conditions, the Monroe Doctrine would unquestionably secure the British Empire's full support.

Political Effects Differ

"But aside both from the general obligation of every State to see that justice and order obtain in the world and also from the demands of national self-interest, there is one additional most potent argument for an Anglo-American alliance. Hitherto, not as a result of any virtue innate in them, but rather by the fortunate accident of position, the English-speaking peoples have been able to escape the burdens and dangers of large military establishments. Apparently if they do not co-operate in protective measures neither will be thus fortunate in the future. The advantage of an Anglo-American alliance is that its main reliance would be on invincible sea power. Except to a very minor degree none of the insidious dangers of militarism are to be feared from a strong navy. Even in the most powerful navies comparatively few men are required. The British navy, abnormally enlarged as it was already before the war due to the German peril, included then only 150,000 men. Hence its political influence must be relatively negligible. Moreover, a fleet is essentially a defensive weapon. Sea power can prevent an opponent from being victorious and is thus frequently the decisive factor in hostilities, but in an offensive war its is merely the adjunct of the army. 'Navalism' and 'Marinism' are misleading—and incidentally barbarous—terms that have been invented since the war to divert attention from something radically different—German militarism.

For World's Benefit

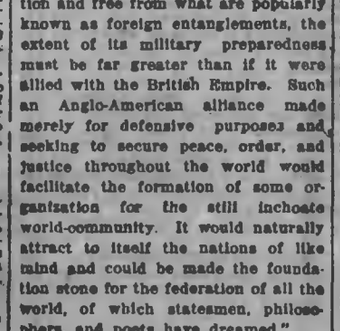
"It is almost axiomatic that the military and naval forces of any nation should be commensurate not only with its policies but also with its alliances and less formal understandings with other states. It is evident that if the United States remains in isolation and free from what are popularly known as foreign entanglements, the extent of its military preparedness must be far greater than if it were allied with the British Empire. Such an Anglo-American alliance made merely for defensive purposes and seeking to secure peace, order, and justice throughout the world would facilitate the formation of some organization for the still inchoate world-community. It would naturally attract to itself the nations of like mind and could be made the foundation stone for the federation of all the world, of which statesmen, philosophers, and poets have dreamed."

Austria's Iron Coinage

The Austro-Hungarian government has issued more iron coins. For some time iron ten heller (two cents) pieces have been coined, but few of them are in circulation, as they are hoarded as war souvenirs. The new iron coins are twenty heller pieces. They bear the new Austro-Hungarian coat of arms and are a little larger than Canadian ten-cent pieces.

German Cities Sell Eggs

In many Bavarian cities the authorities have taken charge of the sale of eggs, to prevent extortion by farmers and speculators. The start was made by the city of Amberg which confiscated 11,962 eggs brought to market and sold them at 2½ cents apiece. A "strictly fresh" lot was sold at three cents apiece.



Clean to handle. Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and General Stores.

BIG STATION BUFFETS

Possesses Work Hard to Give Travelling Soldiers Comfort

The idea of providing free buffets originated with Lady Limerick. In the early days of the war, while helping the Belgian Reception Committee at Victoria Station, she saw the first British soldiers arrive from the trenches, weary, mud-stained, and with no one to greet them. Lady Limerick was so touched by the men's fatigue and loneliness that she immediately went up to one man and shook his hand. Thereafter Lady Limerick and Miss Butler took the soldiers into the refreshment room nightly, provided them with tea and coffee, and piloted them to Euston or other stations for their trains.

There are free buffets now at most of the London stations, and at Liverpool, Preston, Folkestone, North Wall and Kingsbridge (Dublin), and other places. Limerick Junction, where soldiers were paying 6 cents for a cup of tea, and where the free buffet has catered for over 7,000 men in a month, is declared by Lady Limerick to be "the coldest railway station in the kingdom." Buffets at Holyhead and Southampton are badly needed.

The buffet at London Bridge serves normally 40,000 men monthly; 4,300 were served in one day at Christmas. When troops are expected the night staff serves suppers at one in the morning. All the workers are voluntary. Lady Randolph Churchill and Lady Maud Warrender give devoted service. Lady Limerick is often there all night, and has washed the buffet out with a mop in the small hours. With two helpers she once made up 800 bags of sandwiches and cakes in twenty-five minutes at 6 a.m. for a departing troop train. Queen Alexandra has twiced served the soldiers at London Bridge.

The men are given hot coffee, tea, sandwiches, cakes, fruit, chocolate, mufflers, mittens, writing paper, and a pencil; a box of cigarettes is given to men on their way to the front. The buffets are supported by public gifts in money or kind.

HUN BUTCHERY IN CHINA

Unbiassed Story of Kaiser's Ideals in Practice

Prof. W. P. M. Kennedy, Dept. of History, University of Toronto, writes: We are liable to consider German methods in the present war something exceptional. The following quotation from The New York Herald's special correspondent (February 19, 1901), may help to throw light on the situation: "It is to the Germans that we must award the laurels of outrage in the campaign. There was something peculiarly cold-blooded about their proceedings. They arrived when the country ought to have been settling down, to avenge the murder of their Minister, and to carry out the mandate of the Kaiser. After marching into Pekin, leaving their path stained with the blood of hundreds of innocent people who had just ventured to return to their homes, the Germans established a reign of military terror. In their section of the city every day there were executions. One day sixty-eight people were shot. They did not hesitate to resort to Oriental methods for the purpose of extracting evidence from witnesses. The treatment of their prisoners as I can personally testify from what I saw, was most brutal." It is interesting to note that a few weeks after the date of this issue of The New York Herald, the Kaiser spoke (on April 27, 1901) of German policy, and said: "The German fatherland is so rich in ideals."

Here's Mother

Mrs. Margaret Meredith, whose choral ode was performed at Kingsway Hall in aid of wounded soldiers, is a daughter-in-law of the great novelist, George Meredith, and daughter of John Maclean, the engineer associated with De Lesseps in the construction of the Suez Canal. Her son has won the Military Cross.

CORRIDORS TWO MILES LONG IN WAR OFFICE

Huge Offices Long Since Outgrown —Peep at Vital Centre of Empire's War-making

Sir Reginald Brade, secretary of the War Office, gave facilities, through one of his staff as escort, to see something of the huge war machine in full swing under the pressure of one of the greatest wars with which it has ever had to cope. It was an experience of several hours, exploring the labyrinths of the vast institution, fairly vibrating with energy at every point and yet proceeding with precision and efficiency in meeting the big part it is taking in the conduct of the war.

Some idea of the immensity of this war establishment may be had from the fact that its corridors are two miles long—a good brisk walk of an hour. And along these two miles is a good sized city of people, over 4,000 engaged in the infinite details of this war work, great and small, all the way from Lord Kitchener, secretary of state for war, down to boy scouts and girl messengers. And this is only the central establishemnt, for the war exigencies have outgrown even this huge building, and many outside buildings, business blocks and other premises have been taken in as War Office.

Outgrown: Subdivided

The sudden extension of censoring as a precaution of military defense has called into service a large army of censors, and a number of large business premises in various quarters have been acquired for the military censors' branch. Three or four other branches are at other points, and practically the whole ordnance branch has grown into a separate government department, with a Cabinet Minister, Lloyd-George, at its head.

The Big Men

Yet the War Office still remains the throbbing centre of the war work; here the larger questions of strategy and the campaigns in various theatres of the war are worked out; here the army council and the Imperial general staff hold their meetings, and here the many branches of military work ramify from the headquarters of Lord Kitchener, General Sir W. Robertson, chief of the Imperial staff; Lieut-General Sir H. Sclater, adjutant-general to the forces; Lieut.-General Sir F. Cowans, quartermaster-general, and the two members of Parliament who represent the civilian branch and keep the war branch in touch with Parliament, Mr. Tennant, Parliamentary under-secretary for war, and Mr. Foster, financial secretary for war, with Sir Reginald Brade as secretary of the War Office and of the War Council.

Speed and System

It is difficult to get into the War Office, and more difficult to get out—like the continental railway system. Guards turn away all those without papers from authorized sources, stating a definite purpose for the visit and a fixed time. Passing this barrier, one's name and address are taken and a permit issued, and the addresses are always available if Scotland Yard wishes to investigate the antecedents of anyone making unauthorized inquiries.

Within the building there is an air of work under high pressure and with rigid military discipline, with many officers in uniform, old soldiers and girl messengers also in unform, the girls in brown khaki dress and blouse with brass buttons and a brass device on the collar.

HONORS SOUTH AFRICA

Gorgeous Caskets From New Zealand For Botha and Smuts

The city of Auckland, New Zealand, determined to send, as a proof of their admiration for the conquest of German Southwest Africa, presents to Generals Botha and Smuts, and these have been prepared. To General Botha goes an address on vellum, exquisitely illuminated, and enclosed in a silver casket that stands on a base of three New Zealand woods—rewarewa, Wairangi purau, and wavy manuka. Above is a block of greenstone on silver feet, and the casket itself is ornamented with the Dominion coat-of-arms, a carved Maori wharé, and the South African and New Zealand flags crossed. Other ornamentations include representations of fern leaves, kiwis, and tikis in silver. On the lid of the casket is a mounted trooper in solid gold. The monogram of the recipient is done on gold, and gold-bordered panels bear representations of Mount Egmont and Mitre Peak, the two famous New Zealand mountains. A similar casket and address has been prepared for General Smuts.

"Gas-pipe Cavalry"

When the history of the war comes to be written it will be found what a great part cycles have played in the game. We hear little enough about the matter now, but it would astonish a good many folk if the number of machines now in service were known and the great numbers still in the process of manufacture. For many years military opinion did not seem at all favorable to the bicycle, but the wonderfully-changed conditions of warfare since last our experts had real practice have altered a good many views. A considerable proportion of the army are now known in the service as the "Gas-pipe Cavalry," and they will be heard of for certain before the campaign is over.

DISLOYAL SIKHS BALKED

Native Loyalty Too Much For Returned Revolutionaries

Returning from the Viceroyship, Lord Hardinge had something to say of the aftermath of Canada's troubles with certain Hindoos. He narrated that in the winter of 1914-15 about 7,000 Sikhs returned to India from the western part of the United States and Canada. They were imbued with revolutionary ideas and were doubtless under the impression that the whole country was ready to rise. They made their way up country and arrived in the Punjab. They committed all sorts of excesses, not stopping at murder. This was in February, 1915.

Not only did they fail to subvert the population, but when the Government took in hand the task of suppressing disorders and hunting down the perpetrators, it was invariably assisted by Sikh peasants, who, in numberless cases, themselves seized and handed over the guilty parties to the authorities in the Punjab. These returned Sikhs were undoubtedly parties to a conspiracy which had for its object to cause a general rising and seize in the first instance, Ferozepore Arsenal. It was through the unfailing loyalty of the native population to the British Rajah that the conspiracy came to nought.

German Sacrifices

According to semi-official statistics just published, the district of Heidelberg, Germany, contains no less than sixty families who have sent six or more soldiers each to the front. The exact number of the defenders of the Fatherland furnished by these families was 375. One-third of them have been killed on the different fronts, but there are still forty families in and around Heidelberg who together have 250 men, or almost a whole company in the field.

INDIANS ACHIEVE SUCCESS.

Several excellent teachers among both whites and Indians have been bred on Iroquois reservations, says the Christian Herald. One young woman, Nellie Patterson Gansworth, has distinguished herself along the lines of arts and crafts. She won a scholarship at Philadelphia Museum and Schools of Industrial Arts.

A Mohawk girl, the granddaughter of Chief Running Deer, has achieved European fame in the art of dancing. Miss Deer has appeared for the royal families of Bavaria, Norway, Saxony, Denmark, Hungary and Russia, and has received several medals bearing royal arms. Another Mohawk, Oskenonton, has a fine baritone voice and is studying grand opera in New York.

There are a number of splendid bands among the Iroquis, and fine band masters. Probably the best known organization was the American Indian Concert and, conducted by David Russell Hill, an Onondago. For two years this band toured the principal cities of Germany, Austria and France, and also won several gold medals in tournaments held in this country.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

July 16, 1916.

Paul at Athens. Acts 17: 16-34.

Golden Text: In him we live, and move and have our being. Acts 17: 28.

1. Verse 16. How can any true man at this time, see the folly and sin which thousands so eagerly follow, without his spirit being stirred?

2. Verse 17. Notwithstanding that we all have trades and callings to pursue, should we or not, and why, make our chief concern the tremendous issues involved in spiritual truth?

3. Verses 18-21. The Epicureans and the Stoics had a contrary philosophy of life; state breifly what they each taught?

4. Which brings the more lasting happiness and develops the nobler character, and why, a life devoted to service for others or a life devoted to the pleasures of sense? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

5. Verses 18-21. Should we, or not, and why, lend a respectful ear to all new theories of life, and eternity, or reject them without examination?

6. Verse 22. Which is the better man, and why, an active sceptic or an indifferent and thoughtless so called Christian?

7. Which is preferable, and why, to be ever speculating about God, or to have no thought concerning Him?

8. What evidence is there that belief in and longing for God, are peculiar to Christianity?

9. Verse 23. What evidence is there that a heathen, who has never come into touch with Christianity, may find out and know the true God?

10. Verse 28. Why would you say that it is possible for a man who knows God to be the means of imparting that knowledge to another who desires to know Him?

11. Verse 24. God does fill heaven and earth with His presence: would you say therefrore, and why, that He dwells in temples that are made in which to worship Him?

12. Verse 25. What reason is there to believe that in heaven we shall be able to see God in any different way from what it is our privilege to see Him now?

13. Verse 26. What is the evidence that all races of men sprang from the same original stock?

14. Would you say or not and why, that God has had anything to do with the national, and geographical divisions of the globe as they exist to-day?

15. Verses 27, 28. What is both the chief joy and object of life, and why?

16. Verses 27, 28. Why is it possible for every man to find God if He will but seek Him, and what would you say are the conditions for seeking and finding Him?

17. How do you conceive of the thought, and how would you express it, that "In Him we live and move and have our being?" Can you illustrate your thought with air that is both in us and around us?

18. Verse 29. Would you say or not, and why, that no work of art can represent God to any practical advantage?

19. Verses 30, 31. What makes the need for repentance?

20. Verse 32. What reason is there for some to mock when they heard of the resurrection?

21. Verses 33, 34. Would you say, or not, and why, that all who were true to God accepted Paul's message, and that all who were untrue to God rejected it?

KIN HALT LICENSE FOR MAN 85, and Bride 75

NEW YORK, July 12.—Rilando Sammis is eighty-five years old and walks with the aid of two canes. Ianthia Cocklin is seventy-five. Yesterday they went to the Town Hall at Huntington, L. I., and asked for a marriage license.

The clerk refused. He said that a son and a son-in-law of the venerable Mr. Sammis had protested against the issuing of a license. Mr. Sammis, who is a wealthy Northport, farmer, denounced his son and son-in-law as "busybodies" and said he would get a lawyer and compel the clerk to let him get married.

IMPORTANCE OF FRUIT INDUSTRY

(1) Gaspereaux Valley, King's Co.
(2) Starr's Point, King's Co., N.S.
(3) Packing Room at Hillcrest, N.S.

IT is said $144,000,000 has been invested in Canadian fruit production so that this is one of our great national industries. In a year of average production 16,000,000 bushels of Canadian apples are marketed, of which Ontario alone ships on an average 2,000 car-loads into the prairie provinces.

Most famous of all orchard areas is the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia nine miles wide and eighty miles long. With the Dominion Atlantic railway running through the valley the growers have ideal packing and shipping facilities. 60 p.c. of the crop being handled co-operatively by one central association. Plums and pears are also grown here on a commercial scale.

Ontario is the proud possessor of the original McIntosh Red Tree which still stands at Dundela. Large apple orchard districts are found (1) Along the lake shore line of the C.P.R. (2) West of Toronto bordering on Lake Erie and Lake Huron. (3) In the Georgian Bay District, and (4) in the Niagara Peninsula which also produces 96 p.c. of the grape crop and at least 75 p.c. of the Ontario peach crop. Plums and pears are grown wherever apples are produced in Ontario.

British Columbia has developed its fruit industry during quite recent years, the number of fruit trees increasing from 650,000 in 1901 to approximately 3,000,000 in 1913; and the production of apples from 210,000 bushels in 1910 to 737,750 bushels in 1915. The principal fruit-producing section of the Province is the Okanagan Valley, where fruit is packed and marketed largely in a co-operative way, similar to that in vogue in Nova Scotia. There is also a large apple section in the Kootenay Lake District and on the Lower Mainland. Pears and plums are also grown very successfully in these sections of the province already mentioned, and peaches have been planted quite extensively in the southern part of the Okanagan Valley.

Between 1,250,000 and 1,500,000 barrels of Canadian apples are consumed outside of Canada every year, and most of these in Great Britain. The growers of Nova Scotia and Ontario cater especially to the Old Country market, though some British Columbia fruit also reaches it. Nova Scotia has been developing, for some years past, a trade in South America and South Africa, with very satisfactory results. British Columbia exports considerable quantities to Australia and has even experimented with China and Japan.

Should any pressure of circumstances interfere with the export fruit trade, a very serious situation would present itself, for it would be necessary either to double the consumption of fruit in Canada, or to allow tremendous quantities to waste in the orchards. The severity of the situation would only be lessened by concerted co-operation on the part of the consuming public and those who cater to its demands.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on glutten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralise any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia, is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralising the acidity of the food contents and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid —the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

LIKELY TO BE HANGED

When this war ends and the day of reckoning comes, no doubt many Hun criminals will escape their just deserts. In the joy of peace we shall be magnanimous. Not all will hang who deserve hanging.

But there are two Germans that neither the British nor Russians will ever consent to pardon. These are General von Dassel and Dr. Aschenbach, the commandant and the medical officer respectively who were in charge of the German prison camp of Wittenberg. These two shall assuredly swing. For this is the law and the vengeance of nations.

When Grant accepted the surrender of the Confederate General Lee under the historic apple-tree in Appomatox Courtyard at the close of the American Civil War, like the chivalrous Southern he was, pleaded for an amnesty.

"None shall be molested," promised Grant, "save only one man. He must die."

"And his name?" queried Lee.

"That I know not," answered Grant "but I mean the man, whoever he may prove to be, who has had charge of our prisoners at Andersonville.

And as Grant said, so it was, Andersonville was the Wittenberg of the Southern American States. The commandant of that prison camp starved the Northern prisoners' flogged them, tortured them, shot them, allowed them to die of preventable diseases, just as the commandant of the Black Hole of Whittenberg flogged and tortured and shot, and permitted to perish of typhus, the unfortunates under his charge.

The name of the man responsible for the Andersonville horrors was, as we have seen, not even known to General Grant when he made up his mind to have him hanged. But he was soon run to earth. And who do you think he turned out to be Not a Southener. Not an American even. But a German, by name Carl Wirs. The brute fought hard for his life. The hyphenated Americans of those days subscribed large sums of money for his defence.

He was given a long trial. But in the end he was found guilty and hanged on November 10th, 1865, just seven months after Lee's surrender ended the war.

Wirs was the one and only criminal executed after the conclusion of the war by the North for crimes committed during that terrible conflict. It is for us to see that certainly not fewer than two are hanged—Dassal and Aschenbeak. Doubtless there are others who richly deserve hanging, many others; but of these two we must make sure.

There are plenty of precedents for our acting after this manner. The torture of hapless prisoners of war has always been accounted as one of the vilest of crimes, and as calling for most condign punishment.

We can even, if we like, cite the Hun's own example, for after the war between Prussia and Austria in 1866 the Prussians tried by court-martial and promptly hanged, the Austrian Colonel Vogel for alleged cruelty to their prisoners of war at Neubrunn. And Vogel, even by the Prussian's own showing, had not committed one-fiftieth part of the abominations that have been proved against the unspeakable Dassal and the iron-crossed bedecked Aschenbach.

Those who wish to know full details of their brutality should get a copy of the official report, entitled "The Horrors of Wittenberg". It costs only a penny.

We Britishers have ever shown ourselves merciful to fallen foes, but we promptly put to death Surajah Dowlad, the young Nawab of Bengal, for having caused the tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta. And it is doubtful if even that ghastly business and even if we accepted the ordinary published account of it being strictly accurate—exceeded in horror some of the worst days in the Wittenberg black hole.

GOVERNMENT GETS HUGE SEARCHLIGHT

German Inventor Sells Patent to United States as Result of the War.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., July 12.—The United States navy has come into possession of one of the largest searchlights ever manufactured as the result of the European war and the result of the European war and the arrest of the German inventor of the searchlight at Liverpool, England, in 1914. Heinrich Beck, the inventor, who has been assisting in the building of the searchlight at the Schenectady plant of the General Electric Works, was not allowed by the British to go to Belgium and Germany soon after the beginning of the European war. He then returned to the United States and opened negotiations which have led to the purchase of his patent rights by the government.

The new searchlight has a mirror five fet in diameter and sends out a violet-white shaft of light, which can be discerned at a distance of 200 miles when atmospheric conditions are good.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hamsberger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

OTTAWA BATTALION SHORT.

Men May be Transferred From Regiment in West.

OTTAWA, July 11. — Apparently Ottawa has fallen down in its efforts to raise its most recent regiment, the 207th Battalion. The regiment began recruiting four or five months ago, and to date has about 640 men. It is proposed now to transfer 400 men from one of the Western battalions which is over strength. There are several battalions at Camp Hughes which have three or four hundred more men than are required.

PEANUT COOKIES.

One cupful chopped sugar, 1 egg, 1 cupful chopped peanuts, 5 good tablespoonfuls of flour. Beat egg and sugar until very light; into this stir the nuts and then add the flour. Drop into tip of a spoon on to buttered tins and bake in a medium oven about ten minutes.

Why "Anuric" is an INSURANCE Against Sudden Death.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery, "Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar; besides being absolutely harmless it is endowed with other properties, for it preserves the kidneys in a healthy condition by thoroughly cleansing them. Being so many times more active than lithia, it clears the heart valves of any sandy substances which may clog them and checks the degeneration of the blood-vessels, as well as regulating blood pressure. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life-saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric" put up by Dr. Pierce, in 50-cent packages.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY

Come with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and strenuous instead of tired, weak and faint.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Even a very small girl instinctively knows when a dress has "something different" to its make-up that sets it apart from the models seen in the shops, and mother will do well to foster the spirit of individuality by allowing the "wee lady" to express her opinion about a style chosen.

It is really surprising how many beautiful effects may be achieved in spite of the extreme simplicity of the styles for children with just a cute closing outline or other detail feature. The illustration, No. 7,818, proves this.

The girl in the picture is ready for "anywhere" dressed up in this little frock, with its novel closing at the left side to yoke depth and for which loops and ball buttons are used. The lower edges of the waist body are gathered under a belt, where the skirt, with an under box platt at each side, is joined. The pattern includes bloomers, which button to an underwaist fastening at back. Contrasting goods are used for the neat collar, cuffs and belt, and scalloping daintily finishes the collar and cuffs.

The pattern is cut in sizes 2 to 8 years. To make in size 4 will require 3 yards of 36 inch material for dress and bloomers, with ½ yard of contrasting goods in 27 inch and ¼ yard of 36 inch material for the underwaist.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication for No. 7,818.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

BRITISH TROOPS MAKE A BIG GAIN

SPLENDID ADVANCE TOWARDS BAPAUME

Bazentin and Longeville Captured By British in Splendid Drive

Early Morning Attack Was Entirely Successful---British Broke Through German Second Line Defenses to a Depth of a Mile on a Four Mile Front --- Charged Forward at Dawn and Brilliantly Acheived Their Objective.

FRENCH LEFT WING ALSO ADVANCES

LONDON, July 14.—Later despatches from Press headquarters on the front announced the capture and retention of Longueval, Bazentin and Legrand, and the complete clearing of Trones Wood in the early hours of the fighting. The blow was struck at the very sector of the battle front where the Germans had assembled their heaviest bodies of reinforcements. The early bulletins, though very meagre, indicated that one of the greatest battles of the Allied offensive is being waged in the wooded region northeast of Albert. The British advance apparently was in the direction of Martinpuch Heights, and the plateau dominating the road leading to Bapaume, the immediate objective of the British attack. The village of Longueval lies at the intersection of the Bapaume-Bray and Albert-Combles highways, and but seven miles southwest of Bapaume. Bazentin Legrand lies immediately east of Contalmaison, whose capture by the British was admitted in Berlin yesterday, and slightly northwest of Trones Wood. The French left wing pushed forward at the same time, according to an unofficial report from Paris, straightening the French line between Hardecourt and Guillemont, and threatening the village of Maurepas. A despatch filed at Paris at midnight said that the British pushed clear through the Mametz Wood, where desperate fighting has been going on, to the Longueval road, and were but five hundred yards from the village. The remaining distance was covered with a rush when the offensive was resumed at daybreak. The German position at Pozieras on the Bapaume highway, has been rendered extremely critical by the British advance, Paris reported.

British Drive Is Continuing Successfully

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, July 14.—British troops are continuing their advance in their new drive north of the Somme, and have captured the village of Bazentine Le Petit, north of Longueval, according to special despatches from headquarters this afternoon. Practically all the village of Ovillers on the British left is now in British hands and furious fighting is going no in the outskirts. Many prisoners were taken including a German regimental commander. Bazentine Le Petit lies less than a mile from Martinpuch Heights, toward which the British are advancing. The British repulsed several counter attacks in heavy fighting this afternoon.

Enthusiastic Celebration of Bastille Day

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 14.—Paris celebrated Bastile Day, the birthday of French liberty to-day with a spirit of gaiety and optimism unprecedented since the war began. Hundreds of thousands thronged the boulevards and cheered with unbounded enthusiasm as Russian, Belgian, British, Canadian, Australian and French troops marched from the Invalides across the famous Alexander Bridge which was erected to commemorate the formation of the Franco-Russian alliance. Bastile Day was celebrated in the Allied trenches from the North Sea to Switzerland by additional rations and comforts for every man. The soldiers of Belgian and French armies were given extra champagne and cigarettes also.

No Important Fighting On French Front

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 14.—No important fighting occurred on the French front in the Somme region last night, the War Office stated to-day. On the northeastern front of Verdun there was active artillery fighting on the Souville sector. North of the Aisne French machine gun fire checked two German attempts to advance. Elsewhere the night passed quietly.

Rioters Cause Some Trouble in Cork

Special to the Examiner:

CORK, Ireland, July 14.—Several hundred rioters paraded the streets here early to-day booing and hissing the British soldiers and smashing windows of the chief recruiting office. They had previously inscribed on the gate and pillars of the Tar Works the words "Up with the republic."

Soldiers finally dispersed the rioters.

An Early Bid For Piece From Austria

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 14.—An early bid for peace is expected from Austria. Recent arrivals from Vienna report the country in dire straits for all necessities.

Berlin Admits That British Are Attacking

BERLIN, July 14.—The War Office this afternoon reported that the British are attacking with great violence in the direction of Longueval and have suffered heavy losses. The battle was continuing when the latest reports reached Berlin. Not only on the British front, but on both sides of the Somme, fighting is most stubborn, the German War Office declared, announcing also the repulse of French attacks southwest of Peronne.

Big Victory For Russian Forces

PETROGRAD, July 14.—The forces under Grand Duke Nicholas in the Caucasus have captured a while line of Turkish fortified postions west of Erzerum, it was officially announced. The Turks are retreating westward.

CABLE ANNOUNCES LIEUT. MATTHEWS PRISONER OF WAR

Peterboro Artillery Officer Wounded and in the Hands of the Germans Accordidg to Intelligence Received From London.

WAS REPORTED MISSING

The good news that Lieut. Harold Matthews of the 2nd Battery is a prisoner in Germany has been received by his father, Mr. T. F. Matthews. The news came from the agent of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., in London, Eng., in the shape of a cablegram which read as follows:

"News of Harold. Wounded in Germany. Trying to locate. Will advise immediately."

Lieut. Matthews was officially reported missing six weeks ago and as no further word was received the worst was feared.

WILL MANAGE PETERBORO HOTEL

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Colson Will Jointly Manage the Oriental Hotel

RENFREW, July 14. — Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Colson left here yesterday for Peterborough, where they are to jointly manage the Oriental Hotel. They have been here for the past two years, and much of the good reputation which Renfrew's fine temperance house enjoys is due to their excellent management. Before leaving they were presented with gifts by the hotel staff and by the directors of the Renfrew Hotel Company.

WM. LAVERY INJURED IN GETTING OFF CAR

An accident of a rather serious nature and which might have been attended with more serious consequences, occurred at the Mecca of Peterborough's traffic, to wit the corner of Charlotte and George streets, last evening at 6.25. William Lavery, who resides at the corner of George and Romaine street, was standing on the vestibule of the south bound George street car, No. 33, and in attempting to get off the local tramway a trifle too soon, he was thrown headlong to the pavement, receiving a bad cut in his head and severely bruising his shoulder. The unfortunate man was unconscious for fifteen minutes after the fall. Dr. Neal was called and rendered first aid to the injured man, who was removed to his home on George street south. The whole affair was an accident and it should be a lesson to Peterborough's street car travellers to retain their seats until the cars have stopped.

LANCE CORP P. SMITH OF 93RD BATTALION DIES AT KINGSTON

Well Known Member of Peterboro Unit Passes Away in Kingston Military Hospital Following Attack of Pneumonia---Funeral Will Take Place Here--Recruits for the Forestry Battalion---To-day's Military News.

Lance-Corp. Percy Smith, of the 93rd Battalion, passed away in the Military Hospital, Kingston, yesterday, following an attack of pneumonia. The young soldier, who was one of the first to join the 93rd Battalion here, enlisting in August of last year, was a native of Norwich, England, and had no relatives in Peterborough. Since coming to Peterborough Lance-Corp. Smith resided at 421 Sheridan street, and before that was employed on a farm a few miles out of the city. He was a keen reliable soldier, and very anxious to get to the front. His death is the fifth in the battalion since the 93rd was organized.

The body will be brought to Peterborough this evening, and the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, in all probability from the Armouries. Major R. T. Hounsell of the 57th Regiment is making the arrangements for the funeral. The pall-bearers will be chosen from among the soldiers at present in the city, including a number of the 74th Battery. While a full military funeral will be impossible under the circumstances, the authorities are making every effort to pay as much respect as possible to the deceased soldier.

COBOURG HEAVY BATTERY.

Gunner McLeish of the Cobourg Heavy Battery, will be in the city from Saturday, July 15th, until Wednesday next, and anyone desirous of enlisting in this Heavy Artillery Overseas draft can see him at the Recruiting Office, George Street, or at his home 162 Adelaide Avenue, on the days mentioned. This draft will proceed overseas as soon as recruited.

The Kingston Standard Says:

Yesterday morning, a number of the men of the 93rd battalion got together and organized a good-natured special parade in honour of the 12th. They secured a few fifes and a number of drummers and with Orange lilies in their caps they made a circuit of the lines of the 93rd, followed by a large number regardless of faith or nationality. It was the last chance the boys of the 93rd will have to organize such a parade in Barriefield camp, and for this reason, everybody joined in the celebration The old time tunes, and the old time songs were played and sang, and for an hour there was a merry time around the lines of the Peterborough battalion.

President Canadian Club,
Hamilton, Ont.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the N. C. and men of "B" section, 5th Field Ambulance, Capt. W. F. Nicholson, Temporary Commander, I wish to express the deepest appreciation on the foresight of your association in forwarding for our use, fresh preserved fruits, which we received quite recently, and which are being consumed with a relish that gives testimony to the splendid resourcefulness of the Canadian Club of Hamilton. As far as we are aware the consignment was put up by the women of Hamilton and district.

For their benefit I might be permitted to say that the preserves are so superior to the usual canned stuff issued, that those of us privileged to partake of both, compare them as syrup to vinegar. This comparison is not made as a means of depreciation the quality of the latter, but merely to illustrate the vast difference in home-made goods and the manufactured article, as we out here find them.

Before closing, I would draw your attention to the enclosed label. It was stripped from a jar containing black currants put up by the ladies of First Congregational Church. To them as well as to the others engaged in the work of preserving, and to the fruit growers through whom this was possible, and to your wonderful organization, the boys of "B" section again give hearty thanks.

Believe me, I am,
Most sincerely yours,
A. F. Patterson,
Staff Sergeant.

This is a glorious work. We hope the women of this district will not be found wanting. Preserve fruits for the returned Soldiers' Homes.

A number of Peterborough men have signed on for the new 238th Forestry Battalion. Capt. Ross of that battalion will be at the recruiting rooms to-night and a draft will leave for Ottawa to-morrow night. Sergt. Stanley is assisting in the recruiting for the battalion.

Serious Turn In Epidemic

Sharp Increase In Number of Cases and in The Deaths

NO HALT IN THE FIGHT FOR KOVEL

GUNNER M. GORHAM, Peterborough member of the 52nd Battery. Before enlisting Gunner Gorham was an employee of the Examiner.

General Brusiloff's Tremendous Blows are Being Continued Without Apparent Lull or Hesitation —A Fine Strategic Prize.

WORSE FIGHT TO COME

LONDON, July 13.—The most violent fighting in the great allied offensive is on the eastern front, where General Brussiloff's tremendous blows are being continued without apparent lull or hesitation. Temporarily the Austro-Germans appear to have hailed the Russian advance along the Stokhod. Both sides are reported to be hurling huge reinforcements of men and guns into this titanic struggle, the prize of which is the immensely important strategic town of Kovel.

Further to the south a battle of almost equal intensity is raging on the lower Stripa where the Russians are striking north in an effort to crush General von Bothmer and flank the entire Austro-German line.

The Austrians admit that the Russians penetrated von Bothmer's front at some points, but assert that they were driven out again in counter-attacks. The Russians claim to have taken 2,000 prisoners, but make no mention of a gain in territory.

AWAITING KOVEL DECISION

A Petrograd despatch says: "The campaign in the south-west appears to be awaiting a decision in the struggle before Kovel, where the battles are increasing in intensity. Both sides are throwing more troops into this section, designated the "Lutsk breech" which extends a hundred miles along the Stokhod River.

"Already there is said to have been noted the presence there of the tenth Prussian corps from Rheims and the fifth Bavarian from Arras, both newly brought up. The latest effort of the Austro-German forces to regain a foothold on the east shore of the Stokhod at Grovakherka, immediately south of the Kovel-Sarny railroad, has been repulsed.

"A new success for the armies of Grand Duke Nicholas is recorded in the retaking of Mamakhatum. The Russian advance westward of Erserum reached this point several weeks ago, but t was later abandoned. The Turks, upon reoccupying this place, characterized it as the gateway to the Erserum-Sivas line, operating to the base of their armies in the south."

WORSE TO COME.

A Berlin despatch says:

"The Austro-German retirement from the Csartorysk salient, just south of the Pinsk swamps, having been completed, the opposing armies have come to grips all along the line of the Stokhod River, where von Linsingen has elected to stand and cover the approach to Kovel.

"Heavy fighting is already in progress along the Stokhod, but apparently it is merely an earnest of what later may be expected in the persistent and desperate campaign of the Russian commander, General Brussiloff, to reach this important railway junction regardless of losses.

"The retirement according to advices from Austrian headquarters, was for strategic purposes and the achievement is considered one of high degree. The Russians had worked well around the flanks of the old positions and if material and units were to be saved the retirement over an almost roadless country had to be effected at a good pace. As it was, the Austro-German forces barely reached the positions behind the Stokhod before the Russians were hammering at the crossings."

NO CONFIRMATION OF REPORT ABOUT SIR SAM HUGHES

Does Not Intend to Resign and on the Other Hand is Planning for a Trip to England Next Week.

WAITING FOR REPORT

The receipts of the day were $215.00. The Canadian Kitchener League are preparing for another shipment to the trenches and ask all those with socks on hand to kindly turn them in as soon as possible as the ladies wish these to go forward at a very early date.

Lindsay Crowd Invade City Last Evening

A large crowd of excursionists from Lindsay invaded this city at six o'clock last evening, it being the annual excursion of St. Mary's Catholic Young Men's Club and a large crowd of Lindsayites took advantage of the beautiful weather to make the eighty mile over the Lindsay-Peterborough waterway, on the steamer "Stoney Lake". They returned by a special G.T.R. train last evening at nine o'clock, four crowded coaches taking Lipdsay back her own.

A Suggestion for Next Walk Here

Although it may be several years before Peterborough is selected for the next 12th of July celebration several citizens residing in the north end of the city have suggested that an arrangement be made by the Street Railway Company and the marshalls of the parade that the car service be not unduly interrupted. The 12th is usually one of the warmest days of the year and its a long trial from Auburn.

TOO MANY COMMISSIONS.

The people of the west are said to have become weary of the commissions which the Hearst government has used. Commissions have been doing the work of the government. Commissions have been appointed for nearly every phase of the public service. They are costly, and unpopular. The people do not like them, and don't want any more of them. Will the Hearst government take notice? —Kingston Whig.

UNIVERSAL OBLIGATION.

Boston Advertiser: Until Americans generally are willing to agree that only those who choose to do so may pay taxes, or serve on juries, or obey the health laws, or comply with the school laws, there is absolutely no excuse for our present system of providing for our national defence. The obligations of a citizen to help in the work of maintaining the national safety are just as clear, just as unavoidable, just as much a matter of proper compulsion, if necessity demands it, as the work of paying the expenses of running the Government, certainly.

THE NATION PAYS.

"We will absorb the expenditure for leasing the land," says Sir Sam Hughes to the London delegation which went to Ottawa to protest against the removal of battalions in violation of Sir Sam's promises.

Who are "we" Sir Sam is not generously paying this money out of his pocket. Neither are the members of the Government. It is the country, the nation, which will pay the money, if it is "absorbed," and there is only that word of very doubtful worth to guarantee London from this loss.

Sir Sam Hughes has no more right to use the nation's money to pay for his own whims and fancies or to liquidate his personal debts of honour than has a banker to squander the funds intrusted to his care.

Sir Sam is bold, there is no denying that, but he falls far short of Sir James Whitney's ideal, "Bold enough to be honest."—London Advertiser.

WHAT HUGHES REVIEWS COST.

The cost of a day's remuneration and keep for 30,000 soldiers is at least $60,000.

The cost of a ceremonial review covering three days in preparation and presentation, and many more days in "after effects" is therefore five times $60,000. This is without taking into account capital charges and operating expenses.

The grand Sam Hughes review at Camp Borden cost the country at least $400,000. The cost of private cars for friends and scores of "incidentals" are not included.

In the case of the eight battalions transferred from London to Camp Borden, they were reviewed by Sir Sam Hughes only two weeks ago. They went through their paces and were complimented by the minister. They were "reviewed" sufficiently to last them for at least a month.

But Sir Sam Hughes would not have it so. On a few hours' notice he packed the London troops up to Borden, where they found an unprepared camp, where they were put through a gruelling rehearsal on a dusty plain without water to wet their cracking throats.

Four or five days of precious training time were taken from the men.

The morale of the troops has been seriously undermined.

Recruiting has suffered seriously.

Hundreds of good soldiers have been lost to the army.

An expense of $300,000 has been added to the country's bill of expense—with what results?

Sir Sam Hughes was permitted to use the Ontario troops as a toy for the delight of himself and his "swell" friends. He did not even get the gratification expected, for the men made it most uncomfortable for him. London Advertiser.

REDMOND INDIGNANT.

At this distance it seems as if John Redmond was justified in his objections to the statements made to the House of Lords by Lord Lansdowne. It is hardly conceivable that the plans outlined by Lord Lansdowne for the provisional government for Ireland were those drawn up and laid before the different Irish factions by Lloyd George. We do not think Lloyd George, who was appointed not merely to find a solution for the Irish trouble, but to bring the elements of the Irish together, suggested a plan that would involve little short of a continuance of military rule in Ireland. He would have known that this would not have been satisfactory to the Nationalists.

Mr. Redmond has maintained a highly admirable attitude towards the Irish matter during and since the Sinn Fein outbreak. He has consistently avoided embarrassing the efforts of the government to solve the difficulty. His attitude has enhanced the high opinion in which he has been held as a result of his course throughout the war. And when he states that Lord Lansdowne's speech in the House of Lords is an insult to the Irish people, it is only necessary to read the summary of that speech cabled yesterday to agree with him.

The tenor of Lord Lansdowne's statement was that in his opinion, there was still serious danger of an uprising in Ireland. No such danger apparently exists. The Sinn Fein movement was carried out by a small number. It did not have any general support. That the British government is confident that there will be no recurrence of the trouble is indicated by the announcement that the recommendation of the commission which investigated the rebellion for the release of a large number of Irish prisoners held in England will be speedily adopted.

Apparently Lord Lansdowne is afraid something will happen to the large properties he holds in Ireland, and he was also overly anxious to placate his fellow anti-Home Rulers in the Lords.—Ottawa Free Press.

Conditions Following The Outbreak of War

An interview with the Chairman of American Relief in Berlin furnished many interesting details regarding conditions there following the outbreak of the war in 1914. The young lady who acted in this capacity was an acquaintance of Mrs. Gerard, wife of the United States Ambassador to Germany, and was studying music in Berlin when war broke out.

Being one of an exceedingly small number of Americans able to keep their heads in the panic which ensued she was asked to identify herself with the embassy and regulate the exodus of Americans from Germany of whom there were approximately 22,000 at that time. Of that number there were probably fewer than 200 who were not consumed with a mad desire to get home to the United States on the very instant. It was stated that for fifteen years after the outbreak of the war not a single cable got through to the American Embassy in Germany from the United States, and the riotous throng of Americans who, for the first time in their lives were brought to realize that money was not all powerful, were clamoring at the doors of the embassy for steamer passage; for word from relatives in the United States, and for money. The supreme necessity of the hour was a cool head, and a capable personality to instill into the minds of the maddened, clamoring throng that they were in no danger, and that they would eventually get home safely.

When the cables finally commenced to arrive at the embassy, among which of course were official instructions to the ambassador, many cables read, Ascertain the whereabouts of and report concerning the following, then would follow the names of thousands of Americans who were supposed to be travelling in Europe. In the transmission of these cables the names, of course, became very badly mixed up, and the work of locating the people asked about was stupendous. About this time, too, cables arrived concerning the death of Mrs. Wilson and this seemed to intensify the gloom already settled so heavily upon the American population.

The only available means of getting to the United States direct was by the Holland-American line, which provided one boat a week, and there were placed at the disposal of the American embassy; two trains per week, each holding approximately 800 people. There was therefore, an exceedingly impatient crowd left behind each trip.

The reports given out by the Germans regarding conditions in England as to bombardment by Zeppelins and as to panics resulting therefrom were such as to render it almost impossible to persuade the Americans to go home via England.

Mrs. Gerard has been criticised for not doing as much as the Americans seemed to expect from a person of her great wealth and Ambassador Gerard has been criticised for losing his temper at the importunities of his fellow citizens, but the facts of the case seem to be that the class of Americans usually to be found touring Europe are those who have never before experienced any manner of discipline whatever, and when they were confronted by a situation in which money could not assist them were helpless, and to quote the actual words were "rude and ungovernable beyond all comprehension". They almost mobbed the United States Embassy, crowding on the embassy grounds in thousands, refusing entrance to members of the embassy staff, and on one occasion refusing to permit the entrance of Mrs. Gerard herself who was trying to get in and who getting caught in the crowd sank down and for a few moments was trampled upon. The crowd at first refused her passage believing it to be merely a ruse of one of their numbers to obtain entrance to the embassy.

Familiar Echo To The Port McNicoll Real Estate Boom

The following reference to the real estate slump at Port McNicoll from the Owen Sound Sun provides another illustration of an old, old story:

"The real estate situation at Port McNicoll, on which some light was cast in the discussion at the June meeting of the Simcoe County Council, should be the basis for some study on the part of the legislators of the Province. It was brought out in the discussion that the village area contains over 10,000 worthless lots. Of the 11,000 pieces of Real Estate into which the town site is divided, it is estimated that only five or six hundred of these lots are of any value whatever or even have a reasonable prospect of becoming so. All this worthless property was unloaded in Eastern Canada, principally in Toronto and Montreal, and thousands of people paid out their good money to the Real Estate manipulators.

"The Township of Tay, in which Port McNicoll is situated, is asking the Provincial Legislature for a special legislation which will give the township relief from the burden imposed upon the municipality by the collapse of the Port McNicoll real estate boom and the Simcoe County Council will send a memorial to the Government in support of the application of the Townships. The total taxes received from Port McNicoll property amounted to only $1,500.00 last year, while $800.00 was paid out for advertising the lots which were placed on tax sale because the taxes had not been paid. It is estimated that this year the cost of advertising the tax sale will amount to about $1,500.00 or the entire amount of the taxes received from Port McNicoll. The township wants to avoid the necessity of spending this money and contemplates a short cut by which the lots may be taken up again as farm land by the original owners.

"But, if relief is to be given to the township, what is to be done about the thousands of people who have been induced to invest their savings in these worthless lots? While it is impossible to have this money returned to the purchasers, surely some legislation could be enacted which would prevent any repetition of real estate conditions such as is now experienced at Port McNicoll.

"The present population is said to be only between three and four hundred and the Port is losing ground rather than gaining. It was hoped that the C.P.R. would influence industries to locate at Port McNicholl, but it is apparent that the big railway company have realized that Port McNicoll is to a very large extent a mistake and evidently they do not contemplate squandering any more money in that direction. The Port McNicoll real estate boom should be taken as a lesson and there is no doubt that legislation could be put through which could prevent the development of another situation of this kind."

The Guelph Mercury comments as follows on this particular bubble bursting:

"The people who were fleeced in the Port McNicoll proposition were out to get something for nothing. They knew what they were buying—at least if they did not they should have. They knew that the place was a small village, and they bought up farm land there that had been carved into city lots. No matter what size the place may be, it is worthy of note that real estate promoters always sell city lots—never village property.

"To all this the powers that be in Ontario winked. It does seem a ridiculous proposition now, though, that the council of the township in which this property is situated, should be called upon to spend as much in advertising a tax sale as the total received from the entire tax roll. It looks like a case where our laws are as unalterable as those of the Medes and the Persians, while the peculiar situation should make them somewhat elastic in dealing with an abnormal situation.

12 ON VICE SQUAD WILL BE ACCUSED

NEW YORK, July 14.—Ten policemen of the so-called "vice squad," in addition to two arraigned on Wednesday, are to be accused by the District Attorney's office, Mr. Swann stated, but he made it very plain that he has found no evidence of any general graft conditions in the Police Department.

"I have great admiration for the men of that department and for its head, Commissioner Woods," said Mr. Swann. "These cases we are now about to prosecute are individual cases confined to a very small body of policemen. We have no charge to make that the Police Department is full of graft. It is not, and everybody who knows anything about the department and its present direction knows it is not."

Detective Lieutenants David J. Foley and William J. Enright, who have been engaged in the suppression of the "white slave" traffic for many months, were arrested and held in $6,000 bail each under an indictment charging perjury. It alleges that the two policemen falsely swore that they had entered a place of evil repute in West Thirtieth Street, in December, 1914, when conducted to that place by Joseph Smith, a negro, whom they testified they found "soliciting" for the establishment.

The indictment charges that Foley did not enter that house on that occasion or on any other, and that Enright went only to the vestibule, where he delivered a coat for Smith, pretending he was a tailor. The perjury is alleged to have been committed in the sworn evidence given by the detectives when they appeared before Magistrate Paul Krotel, on December 10, 1914, to prosecute Smith, who was convicted and sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

Both Enright and Foley are men of long, creditable service and excellent records in the Police Department. Their accusers are for the most part police "stool pigeons," used by the accused and other policemen for years to obtain evidence against proprietors of illicit resorts. James E. Smith, Assistant District Attorney, who is in charge of the investigation, stated that the evidence to be presented against policemen will include much that shows petty grafting upon men and women. There is no charge of grafting against Enright or Foley.

One of the matters presented to Mr. Smith by his witnesses was the ball given at Arlington Hall, April 10, 1915. Mr. Smith has a contract signed by Enright and the proprietor of that hall, and Mr. Smith stated that no money was paid for the use of the hall. He said that his investigations had disclosed that tickets in bunches that cost $25 had been very widely purchased by men known as gamblers, and that tickets in $10 bunches had been purchased by persons alleged to be identified with the "white slave" traffic. The proceeds of that ball were $1,100, said Mr. Smith, and a few weeks later Lieutenant Enright became the proprietor of a handsome motor boat.

Lieutenant Foley had twice received honorable mention for saving life, once in the rescue of a man from drowning in the East River and on another occasion for saving life at a fire. He is married and lives in Rosebank, S. I.

Quick Delivery to the Trenches And The Prison Camps

Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association Has Arranged an Interesting System for Supplying Delicacies, Especially Perishable Goods to The Soldier Boys

In connection with the need of soldiers at the front receiving fresh food to supplement their Army Rations, a returned Colonel said:

"Yes, we often sent to stores in London for delicacies for our Mess, and I wish the same privilege could be extended to the Non-Coms and Privates as well, for it means so much to be able to get such articles as butter, biscuits, cake or other perishable articles, fresh. Canada is such a long way from the Front, that it is only possible to get these goods from some nearby point, and we found that the facilities in London excellent for supplying all we wanted."

The British soldier is sent food delicacies such as the Colonel spoke of, regularly to supplement his humdrum army rations, and he expects these comforts; in fact he would not be the cheery, optimistic individual he is, if he did not get these little comforts from 'ome. But the Canadian soldier is not so fortunate for he is such a long way from his people, that it is impossible for his parcels to arrive regularly, and the numerous delays and various handlings, injure the contents. The articles of comfort made by loving hands suffer considerably on the journey from Canada, and the only way that he can be placed on an equal footing with the British soldier is by having sent many perishable goods direct from London.

Our readers will be interested in the work of the Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association, in Montreal, who have overcome the difficulties and ship parcels to the boys at the front, direct from the large stores the Colonel spoke of. Several reliable business men got together, and realizing the difficulties in shipping from Canada, arranged to represent, in Canada, the four big stores in London, who specialize in supplying field comforts to soldiers in the field. After considerable expense and initial outlay, they have made it possible to send anything that the boys need in their trying work, direct from London, and in this they are utilizing the vast experience and wide selection of samples placed at their disposal by such firms as Harrods, Army and Navy Co-operative Society, John Barker and Comany, and Selfridge and Company. These firms do an enormous business, and since the war have given special attention to the needs of soldiers.

Working on the selection of boxes that the firms in London have found to be popular with soldiers, the Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association have issued very interesting catalogues, describing all kinds of boxes and their contents, ranging in price from $1.50 to $36.75, including postage. In addition to the wide range there is to choose from, the Association has a full line of samples, just as they are packed in London, and can make up any kind of box that may be asked for. Usually the boxes that are listed are those that are demanded, but occasionally some special combination of articles is desired and thus with the samples on hand it is possible to meet this request.

It is not the intention of the Association to suggest that the little articles from home should be stopped, quite and reverse they believe that it is impossible to give too many good things to the boys, but owing to the distance from Canada to the fighting line, it is impossible to rely on a regular delivery, and know that the goods will arrive fresh. This can only be accomplished by shipping from some near point as London, and it is these advantages that the Association offers to those who have boys at the front.

With each box that the Association sends off is enclosed a return post card addressed to the sender, so that he will know when it is received and what the boy thinks of the selection.

In this connection it is interesting to see the numerous replies that have been received, and especially those who have written direct to the Association, a presonal note to thank them. One of particular interest we give below. It is from Private Mitchell, 1st South African Regiment (816 Shuter Street, Montreal):—

"'Somewhere in France,'
May 12th, 1916.

"Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association, Montreal.

"Dear Sirs:

"I received your most handsome parcel yesterday for which I heartily thank you. I can assure you I appreciate your kindness very much. It is a real pleasure to receive such comforts, as most of the articles sent are quite unobtainable where I am.

"Again thanking you and wishing you every success in your good work.

"I remain,
"Yours sincerely,
(Signed) "R. MITCHELL."

The method employed by the Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association is to receive orders in Canada, and have them filled in London The shipping from there to even the Trenches requires about thirty-six hours. This ensures such perishable goods as butter, biscuits, cake, being received in perfect condition. They carry a full line of samples at their store in Montreal, and any selection of articles may be made up into a box.

The Association has in the past two months developed an extensive busines with many relatives and friends who have boys at the front. They originally had an office at 26 Victoria Square, Montreal, but in addition to this, they have recently opened up a store in the main shopping street, at 509 St. Catherine Street West, in the Drummond Building. The Canadian Patriotic Fund have their office above in the same building.

It is interesting to note that the Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association is able through the Prisoners of War Help Committee, to send parcels to the boys in the camps in Germany by the shortest route. Such articles as bread requiring but a few days to arrive, and are sent through Berne, Switzerland.

The completeness of the organization is emphasized by the fact that the much appreciated smokes are also featured in the literature, and the well-known "Player's" and "Black Cat" cigarettes and other well-known lines are sent direct through a bonded warehouse, thus saving the high Government duty.

There is no doubt that the work of the Canadian Soldiers' Supply Association is much needed and will commend itself to anybody who has boys at the front. We cannot think that those who have boys overseas will not think it necessary to send such delicacies as they list regularly.

We feel certain that the literature will interest everybody and we suggest that our readers write for copies, which the Association would be pleased to forward on request.

Human Body in Stomach of Shark Caught in Trap

NEW YORK July 13.—A monster shark, whose stomach contained part of a human body, was killed at Keyport, N.J., today according to information received at the weather bureau here from the observer at Long Branch, N.J.

The shark, weighing 300 pounds, and eleven feet long, was killed near the mouth of Matawan creek, N.J., and is undoubtedly the same fish, which yesterday invaded the creek, and killed two bathers.

The shark was caught in a fish trap.

Richard Edrman, one of the party hunting the man-eater, reported this afternoon that he saw the shark's fin within ten feet of the spot where the bathers were attacked yesterday. Two large charges of dynamite were dropped immediately and men, armed with rifles, lined the banks of the creek and shot the sea monster as he was blown to the surface.

SCORES FISHING.

New York, July 13. — With great chunks of raw beef dangling from grappling hooks, several score of men were fishing along the Jersey shore this afternoon for the man-eating shark or sharks that have terrorized bathers at Atlantic coast resorts.

Other squads sped up and down the coast in motor boats, armed with rifles, and keeping a sharp lookout for the man-eaters that have killed four bathers and badly mangled a fifth within a week.

A wire net was thrown across Matawan Creek, the twenty-foot Jersey stream penetrated by the shark that yesterday caused two deaths and inflicted serious injuries on a third bather. The shark fishers believe that the man-eater may be trapped upstream and killed when he attempts to reenter the waters of Raritan Bay.

At Coney Island, Brighton Beach, Rockaway, and other resorts, the beaches were practically deserted this afternoon.

ADVISORY BOARD OF THE LIBERALS CALLED TO MEET

OTTAWA, Ont., July 13. —Official announcement was made this morning from Liberal party headquarters that beginning on Tuesday next the National Liberal Advisory Committee which was organized last autumn will meet in Ottawa to discuss the reports of the sub-committee appointed to consider many matters of national importance. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will preside.

The announcement is as follows:

"A meeting of the National Liberal Advisory Committee will be held in Ottawa beginning on Tuesday next. The first day will be devoted to meetings of the various sub-committees and other important business. This main committee, composed of 56 members representative of Liberalism from the Atlantic to the Pacific, was organized under the direction of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in December last to promote the spread of Liberalism, to assist in shaping the policy of the party, and generally to develop efficiency in the ranks.

New Era Expected.

"Explaining his reasons for establishing the committee Sir Wilfrid felt that the conditions resulting from the war would bring about a new political and economic era in Canada and it was necessary that the Liberal party should direct itself to a careful study of the very serious and important problems with which the country would be faced.

"Apart from the great problems created by the war, reforms of many long standing abuses were necessary. There never was a time in the history of Canada when it was more imperitive that the best minds of the community should give the most serious thought to political and financial conditions and problems, and in this respect Liberalism should be in the van Liberalism would be direct in its duty if it did not look into the future and be prepared for a solution of the grave difficulties confronting the country.

"There was necessity also, Sir Wilfrid said, for more aggressive and earnest work in spreading the doctrines and principles of Liberalism, in bringing about cohesion of the interests of the party in the various Provinces, and generally in welding Liberalism into a strong, effective fighting force for the good of the country The attainment of these objects he considered would be greatly facilitated if not best acomplished by the appointment of a committee of able Liberals to act as an advisory body which would be respresentative of Liberalism throughout Canada, both outside and inside Parliament. He emphasized the point that one of the underlying principles of the plan was to igve Liberals outside of Parliament a voice in the active councils and direction of the party, which he thought was very much to be desired.

"But for the war, Sir Wilfrid said, it had been his intention to call a general convention of the party for June, 1915, similar to that held in 1893, and he holds the view that it would be desirable to call such a convention at which the full voice of Liberalism from the Atlantic to the Pacific may have expression when the time is opportune after the war.

While War is On.

"At the meeting of the advisory committee in December last, a resolution was unanimously passed, emphasizing the opinion that so long as the war lasts the Liberal party should continue as it has from the first to give its chief attention to the tremendous struggle in which the country is engaged, that to, and it should continue whilst exercising a vigilant supervision of the conduct of the Government, both in military and civil matters, and in the meantime the members of the committee should actively apply themselves to the study of the important questions and problems which the country will have to face when peace is restored.

"This was a forerunner of the stand Sir Wilfrid took in the extension of the life of Parliament.

"The various sub-committees appointed to study the questions of the national finances, problems of rural life, the establishment of a rural credit system, the welfare of returned soldiers, technical education, control of limited liability companies, bankruptcy and social reform and health legislation, and railway and transportation problems, have been hard at work and are now ready to submit interim reports for discussion further consideration at a future meeting."

TWO GENERALS REMOVED.

Austrian Archduke and Gen. Von Pflanzer Suffer for Defeats.

ROME, July 13.—At a Council of War presided over by the Kaiser it was decided to remove Archduke Frederick and Gen. Von Pflanzer from their commands on the ground that they were responsible for the Teuton defeats in Galacia, says the Agenzia Nazionale.

Gen Von Pflanzer was in command of the Austro-Hungarian troops that were so decisively defeated in Bukowina.

SAW WARSHIPS AFTER FIGHT;

New York, July 12—Commander Nobumasa Suetsugu of the Japanese navy, arrived yesterday from London, on the American liner Philadelphia, on his way back to Japan with the data of the North Sea naval battle to place before his government. He was not a witness to the fight off Jutland, but saw the British warships when they returned to their home ports.

"I visited the warships Tiger, Lion, New Zealand, Princess Royal, and Warspite," the commander said, "and examined the damage which had been done to them by the German shells. The Warspite had suffered the most, but was not damaged as much as I had been led to believe. I did not see the Marlborough."

When asked for his opinion on the markmanship of the two fleets Commander Suetsugo replied: "The German ships shot very well, and the British ships were also good."

He is the first naval officer to arrive in the United States with first hand evidence that the Warspite was not sunk, which has been the claim made by the German admiralty. The commander, who had been attached to the embassy in London as special Navy at Attache, will leave for Yokohama via Seattle during the week.

British Losses Increased By Utter Disregard of Danger

French Winter With Army Before Peronne Says Soldiers of France Have Learned to Risk Lives Only When Necessity Demands It.

CAN SEE INTO PERONNE

By George Le Hir in the Now York Times:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY BEFORE PERONNE, July 9.—"There, gentlemen, we have reached our destination—a couple of miles before us lies, Peronne," said the officer who conducted us through a weary maze of muddy trenches as we came to a low earth-covered shack—a poste d'observation—on the southern slopes of the great Saterre Plateau which two weeks ago was thought by the Germans to be an impregnable barrier against all offensive toward the River Somme, which rounds its northern side.

For three long hours we had plodded through the stick mud, stumbling at intervals against the narrow trench sides. Half an hour ago our guide electrified us with the quiet words: "Here was where the attack begun." It was a long, narrow trench evidently freshly dug, fully fifty yards in front of the deeper permanent trenches. Yet so well had the work been done by the victorious troops that the lines of trenches and boyaus dug in the aftermath of the battle seemed in nowise inferior to those constructed during the period of comparative inaction.

The most remarkable feature of our pilgrimage was the entire absence of any traces of the battle. We knew that every foot of the ground was stained with French or German blood, yet no human bodies were visible. The guide told us that two hours after the Germans' first line position was in French hands the wounded already had been treated at advanced postes de secours. Stretcher bearers had made no distinction, despite the continuous fire, and had gathered friend and foe alike with calm, unhurried rapidity. Our observation post is right on the crest of the plateau. From either side telephone wires radiate, and we realise the necessity of earth being piled above the roof, for here we are in plain view of the German gunners across the river, and any more sumptuous building would instantly be reduced to fragments.

SCENE OF DESOLATION.

As far as the eye can see the view is utterly the same; utterly monotonous, nothing but desolate slopes that once were a thickly populated French countryside. The complete inhumanity of outlook strikes one tremendously. Here two great armies are at death grips, yea apart from the incessant tumult of cannonade and the never-ending rows of little smoke clouds—new ones forming before the preceding ones have time to melt—one might be thousands of miles from civilization. Our maps are of little assistance. Here should be Feuillers, there Flaucourt, further an Assevilliers, but one can distinguish nothing save heaps of blackened stones that appear through the glasses. Even the roads have been swept away by the bombardment. Nothing but ditch-like trench lines mark the presence of humans.

"We see the edges of Peronne behind the hill on which we are standing but down to our left in the valley the semicircle of bursting shells mark the last German defences barring the river crossing. There in front of Biaches our troops are nearest to the immediate goal.

"At present there is a lull. In the words of the official communique, 'we are consolidating our progress,' which means that the heavy artillery is being pushed forward laboriously, while the infantry is digging trenches on the ground captured yesterday morning.

"Suddenly voices cried: 'Look over there, you can see soldiers.' About half a mile before us one sees groups of men like ants working busily on the hillside. Through the glasses one sees that they are sheltering themselves with extraordinary care. Some have strange oblong shields like the ancient Roman legionaries. Others are grouped under a kind of casemate on wheels whose roof touches the ground in front rising in a curve behind to give room for the workers. Still others hide behind a ripple of ground or hillocks.

AT WORK FURIOUSLY.

"All are working furiously with picks and shovels. I have been told that the British losses have been heightened by an utter disregard of danger. Even when not engaged in attacks our Allies seem still not to realise the necessity of unremitting caution. But the French have learned the lesson that Verdun hammered home—that the best soldier is he who regards his life as belonging to France, something precious never to be risked save when sheer necessity demands it. That combined with the magnificent artillery service is the reason why the French losses in this battle have been less than half—I speak from intimate knowledge—those in any previous French offensive in proportion to the number of troops engaged.

"Before closing let me note striking difference in the spirit of troops between this battle and what I saw at Verdun. There the fighting was marked by utter determination, grim and savage; here there is no less confidence, but it is accompanied by a cheerfulness that amounts to gayety. One realizes that after all the offensive is the form of war best suited to the French temperament. Their first stroke has succeeded beyond expectation and the effort now preparing will probably be a worthy sequel. Its progress I hope to describe in a later dispatch."

AUTOS MORE WELCOME THAN NEW BABIES

Viscountess Helmsly Gives This Explanation for Falling Birth Rate

London, June 19 (By Mail) — Babies refuse to come into a world full of automobiles, for the simple reason that new autos usually are more welcome than new babies. Babies and autos don't go together. Muriel Viscountess Helmsley gives this explanation for the falling birth rate in England.

Autos, according to the Viscountess, create an appetite for amusement and as babies furnish little amusement in the twentieth century way of thinking they are considered an interference with the pleasures that the automobile affords.

Viscountess Helmsley says further: 'The lamentable decline in the birth rate is due to the selfishness of women. They feel that with increasing family ties they may be unable to maintain their social status, while at the same time they might find their outdoor activities crippled.

"The craze for amusement has been a growing deterrent to family life, but with the limitation of gasoline supplies by the military and the partial suppression of automobiles, the problem ought to adjust itself."

ELEVATOR BOY IS HELD IN THEFT OF $5 000 GEMS

Jewelry Recovered, the Detectives on Detectives on the Case Declare

NEW YORK, July 14.—John Powell, a negro elevator boy, was arrested, charged with stealing jewelery valued at $5,000 from Mrs. D. C. Macarow and her two daughters at the Collingwood hotel, in East Thirty sixth street.

The negro's fondness for displaying jewels led to his arrest. A few days ago he went to a pawn broker on 125th street and asked for an appraisal on four rings and two pins. In his tie the negro wore a big pin, which the pawn broker estimated to be worth several hundred dollars, and instead of giving the appraisal the dealer sent for Policeman Thomson and Griffen, who followed Powell.

The police learned that the robbery had not been reported at hadquarters but that an agency was on the case. Mrs. Macarow and her daughters arrived at the hotel on June 20, and recently went to the Netherlands Hotel. Mr. Macarow is president of a bank in Montreal.

Powell had been employed in the hotel for three years and because of his reputation for faithfulness, he earned passkeys. He had been at work regularly since the burglary. The police learned that the jewellery lost by Mrs. Macarow was four rings and two pins.

In their investigation, the police said they had learned that there have been thirty thefts in the hotel in the last three years. Powell was taken to police headquarters. The police said they had recovered Mrs. Macarow's jewellery.

The boy or girl who has a poor complexion should cultivate a taste for figs, prunes, greens, oranges, lemons and other fruit.

New Hay On Market Sells at $10 a Ton

The new crop is coming on the market at $10 a ton. The last of the old hay was offered here about a week ago at $14, and the first green hay sold at that figure. But the weight of an unusually heavy crop has depressed the market to the $10 figure. So much is there in this district that there will be no necessity, it is said, of importing supplies this year. The high prices that obtained all winter held firmly until the promise of a heavy new crop started the downward trend.

The Infant Paralysis Menace The Germ Cannot Be Found

An Epidemic in Brooklyn and New York at the Present Time—Is Also in Some Canadian Cities.

In view of the outbreak of infantile paralysis in New York and Brooklyn, and recently in Montreal, the following article from the Toronto Globe will be read with interest:

New York is wrestling with its second serious outbreak of infantile paralysis. The first took place in 1907, and on that occasion the disease attacked 2,500 children, of whom only five per cent. died. The present epidemic is more serious, for, although up to the middle of last week only 800 cases had been reported in New York and Brooklyn, of the children stricken a fourth have died. Ninety per cent. of the victims are under five years of age, and the bulk of them are infants. The disease was first reported toward the end of May among the children of a few Italian families in the foreign quarter of Brooklyn. It spread at first slowly, but during the past two weeks the increase has been so great that in New York and Brooklyn yellow placards have been posted containing the following warning:

"Infantile paralysis is very prevalent in this part of the city. On some streets many children are ill.

"Keep your children off the streets as much as possible and be sure to keep them out of the houses on which the Board of Health has put a sign.

"This is a disease which babies and young children get; many of them die; and many who do not become paralyzed for life.

"Don't let your children go to parties or picnics or outings.

"Don't let them play with any children who have sickness at home.

"The daily papers will tell you in what houses the disease is.

"If your child is sick, send for your doctor at once, or send word to the Board of Health."

The disease has gained a foothold in a dozen States, and has reached Canada. Five cases are reported to have occurred in Montreal, probably introduced from New England, where Massachusetts alone has about fifty cases.

Infantile paralysis is a germ disease, but ten years of laboratory work have failed to render the germ recognisable. It is so small that it passes readily through the pores of filters made of unglazed porcelain, which ordinary bacteria cannot pass. The germ is invariably present in the nose and throat of patients ill with infantile paralysis, for, though it has not been seen, its presence has been proved by experiments conducted with monkeys as the subjects. Bearing in mind the way cerebro-spinal meningitis is spread, a number of investigators began examining the bacteria in the noses and throats of patients ill with infantile paralysis. Some of them washed out the nasal passages of their patients with sterile salt solution and injected this into monkeys. Some of the monkeys thus injected developed typical paralysis. Examination of the spinal cord of these monkeys showed typical lesions of the disease; evidently this was where the poison acted. In spite of this, the most careful microscopic examination failed to show the presence of any recognizable germ in these lesions. Pieces of such a spinal cord, rubbed up with sterile salt solution and injected into other monkeys, promptly produced typical paralysis. A mixture of the spinal cord and salt solution was filtered through a Berkefeld filter. When the clear, watery filtrate was tested on monkeys it was found that the injection produced paralysis; in other words, the poison had passed through the pores of the unglazed porcelain. The same was found to hold true for the nasal washings from patients ill with infantile paralysis; the germ passed through the filter. This, then, accounted for the fact that nothing could be seen of the germs, even under a powerful bacteriological microscope; the germs were far too minute. It has been found possible to carry the infection through quite a series of monkeys, using the nasal washings, or the crushed-up spinal cord from one infected monkey for the injection into the next normal monkey, and so on. This proves conclusively that the poison of the disease is a living germ.

No cure for the dread disease has yet been discovered. All that medical skill and care can do is so to treat the patient that the use of the limbs may not be altogether lost, and that the bodies of the children attacked shall not be permanently deformed by failure to place them in positions in which pressure is removed from temporarily paralyzed muscles. The only means of avoiding the disease is by the practice of absolute cleanliness, and especially by keeping the hands of the infant or its nurse away from the child's mouth when the disease is in the neighbourhood. It is spread by contact, and the house fly is believed to be a possible carrier.

Seventeen Hundred To Share in Estate

Over Million and Half of Property Held by Hetty Green to be Distributed.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 14. — An accounting by the trustees of the estate of Sylvia and Ann Howland, which was released for distribution to heirs by the death of Mrs. Hetty Green, was made public and showed property valued at $1,635,557. This estate, by direction of the testator, who had allowed Mrs. Green the use of its income during her life, is to be divided among the lineal descendants of Gideon Howland of this city. How the division is to be made was not stated.

Col. E. H. R. Green, son of Mrs. Green, said recently there were 1,700 living descendants of Gideon Howland entitled to a share in the estate.

The Apple Crop In East Will Be Poor

OTTAWA, July 13.—The following information has been received by telegram at the office of the Fruit Commissioner, this morning, relative to the apple situation in Ontario:

East of Toronto the crop is very disappointing and will not exceed that of 1915. There has been very serious development of scab, and a heavy dropping of fruit in all sections. Unsprayed orchards are practically worthless on account of poor quality. There has also been some damage by hail in the Cobourg district. In western and northern parts of the Province there is a medium crop, but the quality, particularly in Western Ontario, is good only in well sprayed orchards.

YOUNG GIRLS RESCUE TWO YOUNGER BROTHERS

Pluck of Isabel Heath and Dorothy Webster Praised by Others.

Stratford, July 14. — But for the prompt heroism of Misses Isabel Heath and Dorothy Webster, girls of fifteen years, the lives of two younger bathers, Marion Kenner and Wilhelmina McGregor, would have been lost in the river yesterday. The last named attempted to swim out to a diving board with the Kenner girl on her back. Both went down, and were almost gone with. Misses Heath and Webster swam out and located their comrades, struggling back to safety, each with a girl in tow. The plucky rescue won high praise from other bathers.

Burglars Blow Gemless Safe

ORANGE INTRUDERS AFTER CARRYING RECEPTACLE TO BASEMENT, GET LITTLE FOR THEIR PAINS.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Burglars who blew open a safe in the residence of Nicholas Bruning, an importer, at No. 42 Fairview avenue, Orange, N. J., early yesterday obtained little reward for their boldness. Mr. and Mrs. Brunning are at Shelter Island for a few weeks and Mrs. Bruning had taken with her most of her jewels and other valuables.

Police dogs in the yard failed to keep the burglars out or to arouse the neighbors who were in charge of the property during Mr. Bruning's absence. A small safe was carried from the second floor to the basement and blown open with nitro-glycerine.

PTE. KENDRY TELLS OF A NARROW ESCAPE

Peterboro Boy With the 2nd Battalion Describes Some of the Fighting Around Ypres—Sends Home a Souvenir in the Shape of a Shoulder-Strap from a German Prisoner

Following is a copy of a very interesting letter from Pte. Roscoe Kendrey, one of the few Peterborough boys left on duty with the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F.:

Somewhere in Belgium, June 19.

My Dear Mother,— Your very welcome letter of May 28th received all O.K. and so glad to hear from you again.

No doubt you will be anxious to know if I am still safe since last writing you, as so many things have happened since that time. Likely you have read in the daily papers of the fighting we have been in, and I have much to be thankful for that I am still alive. Gee, the bombardment was fierce and so much heavy stuff. But Fritz had more to contend with from shells than we did. The next a.m. about 3.30 I was in the trench or what remained of it, for the shells had sure ploughed it up some and the prisoners were there then. I took three to the Brigade Headquarters, also got a few more souvenirs. Am enclosing one in this letter for you. It is the shoulder strap of one of the prisoners which I took off the 13th Wurtemburger Regt. Am also enclosing a clipping from one of the English papers with an account of the scrap. One of the prisoners could talk very good English and said he was glad to be taken. Also said if the rest over there knew the Canadians treated them so well they would be all over and give up. But it seems their officers tell them if they surrender to the "Canucks" they will only get killed anyway. Saw some funny sights that morning, as well as awful ones—one in particular was a wounded "Jock" making his way to the dressing station and a Fritz prisoner with his arm around him helping him along. "Comrades in arms."

Had about the closest shave our first night in that I've had since coming to France. While we were making our way to the position where we were going to dig in we got caught in the open with artillery fire. We were crawling along on hands and knees and as this was the ground over which the battalion had charged that morning naturally Fritz was nervous, so he kept sending up star shells and finally the artillery stand to. Gee, when I saw that you should have seen me do the snake act into a little ditch. Machine guns and rifle bullets were pouring over us then and then the big stuff started to come. From the time their artillery signal went up until the first shells came it was not more than fifteen seconds. Well a Jock crawled in beside me in the ditch and a "coal box" (6-inch high explosive) shell ploughed through right beside us. The concussion killed Jock and I have been to the M. D. about my left ear, the drum of which is broken with the concussion. The same shell claimed ten other victims.

At the present I am at the 1st Division Grenade School taking a seven days' course. It is quite interesting and lots of things to learn, eight from each battalion of 1st division. I had taken a course on this once before when we first came to France about 17 months ago, but you see there are always new kinds of bombs, grenades, etc., coming out, and one must keep up with the times. Ha! ha! Now I'll have to close for this time. But love to all at home as if named and a large share for yourself.

Your loving son,
ROSCOE.

Haying Keeps Farmers Busy

"Make hay while the sun shines" is what the farmers are telling themselves these days, when their new hay is ripe, and when a heavy fall of rain would ruin it. All through the country the hay, under splendid weather conditions which prevailed during the past few weeks, has ripened and is now ready to be cut, in fact a great deal of it has been cut and every day farmers are working from sunrise until after it is dark cutting their crops and storing them in their barns.

The market square has presented a desolate appearance for some days past, scarcely half a dozen farmers coming in with produce, and on Saturday waggons are driven and watched over by women with hardly a man in sight, for no cautious farmer would leave his crop standing in the field, taking chances that fortune would keep rain off a few days longer after so much dry weather.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I wish to express my opinion that much credit is due to Mr. Armstrong for the fine appearance and music rendered by his piccalo band on July 12th; also his son, William of Toronto; also his two grandsons, Eldon Armstrong of Toronto and Willie Magee of Burnham street, city. The two brave little boys who stood the heat and long march on the 12th. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Feet of 150 Men Frozen in Alpine Summer Campaign

NEW YORK, July 13.—How one hundred and fifty Italian infantrymen were invalided by freezing their feet in midsummer was told yesterday by a passenger arriving on the French liner La Touraine. He asked that his name be withheld.

"While walking near the Pisa Railway station," he said, "I noticed what I thought was a freight train approaching. There were three tiers of floors to each car. When the train stopped I saw the occupants were soldiers, attired in sheep and goat skins.

"I learned the men were suffering from frozen feet. They were members of a battalion of Alpine infantry, and had gone to a point far above the snow line in an attempt to surprise an Austrian force that in no other manner could be ousted from its positions.

"They had been carefully drilled in walking on all fours and acting the part of goats and sheep.

"Two days after leaving camp remnants of the command began to return. They failed in their undertaking because of a terrific storm and because sharp pieces of ice tore their flannel leggins and exposed their feet."

Fine Jewelry Stolen From a Canadian

NEW YORK NEGRO CHARGED WITH THEFT FROM MONTREAL IS LOCKED UP.

New York, July 13.—Charged with the theft of five pieces of jewellery valued at $5,000, the property of Mrs. D. C. MacArrow, wife of the General Manager of the Merchants Bank of Canada, John Powell, a young negro elevator operator, was locked up in police headquarters. He is held on charges of burglary and grand larceny.

Mrs. MacArrow came to the city in the middle of June and stopped at an uptown hotel where Powell was employed up until last night as the chief elevator operator. On the night of June 20th her rooms were entered, apparently by means of a pass key, and the jewellery stolen.

Two of the stolen gems were highly prized by Mrs. MacArrow owing to their workmanship and design. One was a Maltese cross set with diamonds and other stones and the other was a brooch. She promptly notified the police, with the result that Powell was arrested, charged with the theft.

SPEED AMERICAN NAVY INCREASE

Recommendation Will Urge Completing Five-Year Programme in Three.

Washington, July 14.— An increase of the navy along a three-year continuing plan, in place of the five-year programme originally adopted in the House, will be proposed in the Senate as a result of conferences held by members of the Senate Naval Affairs Sub-Committee with Secretary Daniels and heads of divisions of the Navy Department.

By January 1, 1919, the United States navy will be comprised of the following ships, if the recommendation is adopted:

Twenty-seven battleships of the first line.
Six battle cruisers.
Twenty-five battleships of the second line.
Ten armoured cruisers.
Thirteen scout cruisers.
Five first class cruisers.
Three second calss cruisers.
Ten third class cruisers.
One hundred and eight destroyers.
Eighteen fleet submarines.
One hundred and fifty-seven coast submarines.
Six monitors.
Twenty gunboats.
Four supply ships, fifteen fuel ships.
Four transports, three tenders to torpedo vessels.
Eight vessels of special types and two ammunition ships.

"What a lovely stone," remarked a city acquaintance, on noticing a magnificent diamond in the company promoter's tie; "where did you get it?" "Ah, you remember Jacobs, who died six months ago, eh?" was the reply. "Well, Jacobs left fifty pounds in his will for me to put a stone up to his memory and—this is it!"

Partial Eclipse of The Moon To-night

To-night there will be a partial eclipse of the moon visible from all parts of the American continent. The eclipse of the sun on July 29 will not be visible in this hemisphere. The amount of the moons' disc to be darkened to-night will be much greater than that of January 19.

The moon will enter the penumbral shadow about 18 minutes after nine o'clock on the evening of the 14th, but as this partial shadow still contains a great deal of light no darkening of the moon's limb will be really perceptible until the moon actually enters the completely dark shadow, which it will do about an hour later, at 10.19. The middle of the eclipse will occur at 11.46 and the moon will leave the shadow at thirteen minutes past midnight.

A Great Selling To-Morrow

MIDDIES $1.19

THE BEST VALUES WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO OFFER IN A GOOD MANY MONTHS

YOU will probably wonder how Middies of this kind, to be offered To-Morrow at $1.19 can be made at this price. It is only because the Middies were bought from a manufacturer who specialises in this character of merchandise that these values were made possible. Where the ordinary manufacturer would buy one piece of material. This manufacturer buys a hundred. Where the ordinary manufacturer would make ten dozen Middies, this manufacturer would make a thousand.

And so, by saving a little here and there, and cutting down our own profit to the very lowest ebb, we are able to bring to you these Middies at $1.19 which ordinarily should cost $1.75 or more.

They are made of the finest of middy cloth, with sport stripe collars and trimming, or all-white if you wish, and belts and new idea pockets. Impossible to describe all the styles, but we will say that never before have we had such styles at double the price.

Every Middy fresh and right out of the box. Any woman anxious to secure an extraordinary value will be quick to grasp this unusual buying occasion.

Our 1.25 Middy 95c

Would you have thought it possible to buy such Middies as these for 95c and when Middies are in greatest demand. But that is our way of doing things. We make every effort to get you the kind of Middies you want at the lowest price possible.

Unusual Middies 85c

All in white in a pretty yachting style. Braid trimmed and short sleeves with set-in V. In either girls or ladies sizes. It is an unusual Sale Price and means a considerable saving for you.

Council Will See Operation Of New Chlorination Plant

On Thursday, July 20th the new chlorination plant at the pumping station which has been operating for some time will be demonstrated to the members of the Council and other officials. It was installed at the order of the Provincial Board of Health as a safeguard against contamination of the water. Local opinion and that of the Utilities Commisson was satisfied that Peterborough's water supply was free from pollution and the monthly tests have substantiated that view. But the Provincial Board of Health is taking no chances, and instructed the Commission to instal a light chlorine spray. Citizens have been unaware of this change unless they were informed of it. Certainly the sense of taste finds no evidence of the minute percentage of chlorine, but after learning of its presence their sensory powers will be whetted and reinforced by the imagination they will doubtless discover traces of chlorine frequently and even prominently.

SKELETONS OF INDIANS HORNED AND VERY TALL

Interesting Discoveries Made Along the Valley of the Susquehanna

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., July 14.—Prof. A. B. Skinner of the American Indian Museum, Prof. W. K. Moorehead of the Phillips Andover Academy, and Dr. George Donohue, Pennsylvania State Historian, who have been conducting a party of scientists' research along the Valley of the Susquehanna, have uncovered an Indian mound at Tioga Point, on the upper portion of Queen Ester's Flats, on what is known as the Murray farm, a short distance from Sayre, P., which promises rich additions to Indian lore. In the mound uncovered were found the bones of sixty-eight men which are believed to have been burid seven hundred years ago. The average height of these men when the skeletons were assembled was seven feet, while many were much taller. Further evidence of their gigantic size was found in large cells or axes hewn from stone buried in the grave. On some of the skulls two inches above the perfectly-formed forehead were protrudences of hope, evidently horns that had been there since birth. Members of the expedition say that it is the first discovery of its kind on record.

FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBORO

Mrs. Wadely Will Appear Here Under The Stage Name of "Barbara Tennant"

Mrs. Wadely, a former resident of this city, is appearing as "Barbara Tennant" in the "Dollar Mark," which is being shown to-day and to-morrow at the Red Mill theatre. Mrs. Wadely is well known here and appearance in the above mentioned film production should be of interest to the patrons of the Red Mill Theatre.

USUAL OFFENSES AT POLICE COURT

Two cases of drunkenness came before His Worship at the Police Court this morning and both parties pleading guilty, were asked for the usual donation to the judicial treasury. One was a local youth whose appearances in the dock are oftener than good conduct calls for and the other a one-legged individual from Sudbury whose plea for mercy Magistrate Dumble failed to see.

WHY SPELLING IS BAD.

FAULT LIES WITH PARENTS QUITE AS MUCH AS WITH TEACHERS.

Business men, exasperated by grown job hunters who can't spell, are quick to blame the public schools. They reason justly that spelling is a cardinal accomplishment, one can't get along without it, it lies at the base of knowledge, and therefore public school graduates should have it. By the same process of reasoning they ask why the young people can't write a plain, regular hand and why they can't add a column of figures quickly. No one can blame the business man, who supports the schools, for his exasperation but it is only fair to consider the case from the side of the teacher also.

One of the chief reasons that many young people are poor spellers, poor writers, and ill-informed on the things of every-day business life is because the parents look to the schools to do all the teaching. The fact is that a child can't learn to spell in school. He may pore over a spelling lesson for an hour and then be called upon to write or recite the words from memory, but unless he is a reader outside of school hours, unless he absorbs the spelling of words unconsciously by contact with the printed page, he will never be a good speller. The parents must realize how little actual attention their children gets even in the best regulated schoolroom. In fairness to the schools it must be remembered that they cannot educate a child; they can only give him a chance; the proper surroundings and the leader, for education. If the child is to get the education he must do the work himself.

To reaffirm the stand that school work must be supplemented by home work and coaching, it is only necessary to go into th experience of any well-educated person and ascertain whether he obtained his knowledge in the school room or for himself. Or take the example of a child who enters the first grade of the school already knowing the alphabet and the sounds of the various letters and combinations. The records of the children will show that one thus equipped will advance more rapidly and will become a better reader and speller than one who enters knowing nothing of letters. Parents should not consider it irksome to oversee their children's elementary education, and they may be assured that if they do not they are exposing them to the dangers of ignorance.—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

MRS. BESANT DEBARRED FROM ENTERING BOMBAY

SHE IS ONE OF LEADERS OF MOVEMENT FOR HOME RULE FOR INDIA

LONDON, July 14.—Mrs. Annie Besant, one of the leaders of the movement for home rule for India, has been prohibited under the defence of India act from entering the Bombay Presidency, says a Bombay despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Mrs. Annie Besant was elected President of the Theosophical Society at London in 1907. She has made several tours in America.

CASE AGAINST TULLYS STILL PROCEEDING

The hearing of the civil action for damages against Mrs. Tully and Miss Edith Tully for the alleged ill-treatment of Evelyn Glover, daughter of Private Robert Glover of the 93rd Battalion, was proceeding all day at the County Court before His Honour Judge Huycke. The action is to recover damages for the suffering and ill-treatment of the little girl during the five weeks she lived in the home of the defendants. Several witnesses were called on both sides, including the young girl, herself. At this morning's session remnants of the child's clothing were shown which she is alleged to have worn during the cold spell on and about January 22.

Revenue Has Increased By 20 Millions

OTTAWA, Ont., July 14.—The revenue of the Dominion for the first quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30 was 56 millions as compared with 36 millions for the same three months last year. The ordinary and capital expenditures for the three months has been twenty-seven millions, a slight decrease owing to growing revenues. A portion of the war expenditure is now being paid out of revenue.

WILL SAIL FROM MONTREAL ON HUNT FOR MURDERERS

WINNIPEG, July 14.—Assigned to the dangerous and difficult task of capturing the murderers of Radford and Street, two New York explorers who were killed by Eskimos in the fall of 1914 in the Arctic regions, Captain F. H. French of the Mounted Police, will sail from Montreal on July 29, on the Hudson's Bay steamer Nascopie, with two N. C. O.'s and four constables.

Captain French knows the country well and is fully alive to the situation. The trip it is expected will take three years to accomplish. Two husky dog teams will be employed in the work. They are at present in Regina and will shortly be forwarded to Montreal. Capt. French, according to reports furnished by a trapper, may be confronted by a force of from 300 to 1,000 Eskimos when he arrives at his destination, but that will not prevent him from carrying out his duties. Eskimos in the district to which he is going to, have already threatened to kill any police who may attempt to arrest the murderers. The expedition under the command of Capt. French will make its first point of landing at Chesterfield Inlet. From that place the country is one bristling with travelling difficulties. Capt. French is a nephew of Viscount French of the British army. He was in Winnipeg to-day for a few hours on his way to Ottawa.

Russia Will Take It Out of Turks

(Correspondence of the London Morning Post.)

It is a matter of common knowledge in the Emperor Nicholas' dominions, that factories for the manufacture of munitions of war and military equipment have sprung up like mushrooms in the more thickly populated districts of the huge empire. The same kind of transformations of the workshops of ordinary civil life into arsenals as have taken place in the British Isles and France are helping to fit out the huge Russian hosts for their final trial of strength with the armies of the central powers. On every side is to be seen evidences of the determination of our ally to put his weight in the final stages of the mighty conflict. The gratifying successes of General Brussiloff and his legions have come to a certain extent as a surprise to the people in this country. But they will have caused no surprise to anyone who has seen for himself the resolve of this great nation to overcome its early difficulties.

The reports which have been brought by visitors to Archangel during the past two or three months go to show that most successful efforts have been made to improve the facilities of that now all-important port and of its railway connection with the interior of Russia. The somewhat belated decision to complete the Merman railway and thus to get full benefit out of the ice free ports of Alexandrovsk and Kola alike in summer and winter, is further evidence of the determination of the imperial government to utilise to the full those means of communication which must be regarded as indispensable if vast armies, fitted out with all that is needed, are to be kept in the field for the rest of the war.

The military situation in Russia is now so full of promise, and even should the offensive begun so successfully by General Brussiloff, he brought ere long to a standstill there will be no ground for apprehension. For purposes of war the country is becoming stronger from day to day. Its fighting resources in trained soldiers and in war material are ever expanding.

The very elements that are most disposed to criticize the executive are the elements that are most determined to see their country emerge victorious from the struggle in which it is engaged. The nation as a whole is resolved not merely to gain the upper hand, but also to reap substantial benefits in return for the tremendous sacrifices that it has been called upon to make. It means to reap these benefits at the cost of the Ottoman Empire as well as the cost of the Germans and the Dual Monarchy. Not much is heard of Constantinople at the present time. But "Tsargrad" is ever in the minds of the people as a whole, as well as in the mouths of the few red-hot Panslavists, and with that goal in view the community has no mind to hamper the government until the goal has been attained.

The horse is a great sweater, and needs considerable water in his system.

LIGHTNING SHOCKS TWO MEN NEAR FALLS

Strips One of His Shoes and Socks—Sheltering Under a Tree.

Niagra Falls, Ont., July 14.—Silas Dell, a workman employed on the Niagara Falls-Fort Erie Boulevard, is in a serious condition at his home in Chippawa as the result of a lightning shock received during an electrical storm. William Sibett, a foreman of the Boulevard repair gang, whose home is also in Chippawa, was less seriously injured. Dell and Sibett, when the storm came up, sought shelter under a tree. Hardly had they reached it when it was struck by a bolt of lightning. Dell was rendered unconscious, and an examination showed that he had been severely burned. He did not recover consciousness until an hour after the shock. Sibett was rendered unconscious but quickly recovered. The lightning played one of its most freakish stunts when it stripped Dell of his shoes and stockings. Both shoes were split wide open by the bolt. It is believed that the lightning jumped from the tree to his body before grounding.

FEARS HUNGARY WILL QUIT.

Vienna Concerned Over Panic Caused by Russian Advance.

MILAN, July 13.—The situation in Hungary continues grave. Owing to the news of the uninterrupted Russian advance panic reigns. From the Bukowina frontier alarm is spreading over the country. Tumultuous scenes are occurring in Parliament. A Hungarian informant sends accounts of violent scenes in the Hungarian Chamber.

The popular and political disconcent in Hungary, where the opposition and the independent parties are fomenting the anti-Austrian movement, is giving great concern at Vienna, where it is feared that Hungary may at any time make a desperate effort to withdraw from the war.

French Merchant Marine Growing in Spite of Submarine Attacks

In spite of submarine attacks, the French merchant marine, like the British, will show an increase for the first two years of the war. The largest of the French shipping companies has gained twelve per cent. in tonnage over the amount owned at the beginning of the hostilities. Owing to the government, however, having commandeered nearly one half of this company's vessels for war purposes, its efficient tonnage is much less than before the conflict. Freights, however, are correspondingly higher, and this, combined with the revenues derived from the government, make an exceedingly prosperous situation.

Nothing could be better evidence than the present war of the advantage of an imposing merchant fleet as an adjunct to a powerful navy for a great country like France situated between two seas, highways of the world's commerce. French shipbuilders have redoubled their efforts during the war, and have maintained magnificent results, as shown by the report of the Messageries Maritimes, oldest of the French transportation companies, which has just been issued. The tonnage of this company's fleet increased from 284,042 tons in June, 1914, to 319,262 in November, 1915.

Four large units have replaced the five ships lost since August, 1914; the Euphrate, sunk at Scoutra; the Memphis, destroyed by a mine during the withdrawal of Serbian troops; the Yunnan and the Ville de la Ciotat, torpedoed without warning, and the Portugal, a hospital ship, also torpedoed without warning in the Black Sea.

The French government since the beginning of hostilities, has taken possession of 42 per cent. of the company's tonnage for the transportation of troops, munitions and provisions so that the company only has at present available for commerce about 3? per cent. of its tonnage. In spite o this reduction of its fleet, the company, which has a concession for the French mail service to China, Australia, Madagascar and the Levant, has maintained the relations of France with the Far East and Egypt, while keeping open communication at first with Odessa then with Dedeagatch, and finally with Salonica, in order to preserve close connection between the mother country and the expeditionary force in the East.

Moreover, since March, 1915, to assure the transport of the goods necessary for feeding the troops and for the war industries in France, the company doubled the tonnage usually placed at the disposition of the Madagascar government, while other units of its fleet took part in other operations connected with the war. Thus the Sontay and the Himalaya were used to bring the Russian troops from Dalny to Marseilles, and the Sphinx, transformed into an hospital ship, had been used for the expeditionary forces in the East.

Desiring to aid in the national defence as much as possible the Messageries Maritimes did not hesitate to put their workshops at the disposition of the government. Here there was a continuous production of shells, fuses and bombs, while at the same time several naval vessels were repaired. The company has been well supported by its entire staff. The officers and the crew of the Memphis and the Sinai have been praised in naval orders for their services, those of the Annam for their conduct during a bombardment in the Dardanelles and those of the Meinam for engaging an enemy submarine.

Up to date there have been distributed among the personnel of the company three Crosses of the Legion of Honour, one Military Medal, 60 mentions in orders of the day, and numerous promotions, while on the other hand, 86 of its members have fallen in defence of the country. Such is the record of a single French shipping company.

Mighty Russ Citizen Army Works Hand-in-hand With Troops

By William Philip Simms.

Petrograd, June 13 (By Mail)—There are two mighty armies in Russia. One works in the front line trenches, shoots and charges bayonets. The other works back of the line and furnishes the front line what it needs.

One is an army of soldiers. The other is an army of citizens. But both agree under the orders of the general staff. The situation is unique in history.

The main corps of this citizen army is known as the 'All-Russian Zemstvo Union,' and no other nation in the world boasts anything like it. If the troops need new fur coats the general staff tells the Zemstvo union and the Zemstvo union provides them. Or maybe the staff asks for socks and underwear; or boots, or bridges, or daggers, or bath trains, or tanin, or chop axes. Whatever in reason it asks for it gets.

Soldiery and citizenry are working hand in hand. This statement is literal, not merely a figure of speech.

THE "ZEMSTERVO."

The Zemstvo, pronounced "Zemstervo," came into being in 1864, or three years after the serfs were freed and the land divided. It began very modestly and developed slowly, members being elected from three classes: Peasants, the landed gentry, and the urbanites owning shops, factories or other property. Originally a Zemstvo composed of say 60 members, averaged about 20 peasants, 20 gentry and 20 town property owners, but in 1890 the gentry were given by law what by the very nature of things they had had from the start—a preponderant voice.

Russia is divided into 51 provinces, these into districts averaging about ten districts to the province. At present 39 provinces and about 370 districts have Zemstvo organisations.

The district institution once a year sends delegates to a ten-day provincial Zemstvo at which the work of the past year is reviewed, and the work for the coming year is co-ordinated. Further a provincial board of four men is named, these to devote their entire time to this work. The ordinary member of the Zemstvo receives no pay. The four board members are on salary as are the four members of a similar district board who do nothing else but supervise district work.

The Zemstvo has but slight legislative functions — levying local taxes, etc.—and until the war is over its activities were confined to four spheres: Working the roads, supervising schools and aiding the farmers with advice, besides looking after the hospitals and the primary needs of country districts.

SCOPE RESTRICTED

Restricted in scope though the Zemstvo was it was nevertheless the apprenticeship of the people. It furnished the peasants with their first means of participating in public work. Side by side with their former masters these farmers newly out of serfdom, elected there Zemstvo representatives, and labored for the community and for Russia.

Such was the Zemstvo at the beginning of the war.

On August 12, 1914, less than two weeks from the commencement of hostilities, a general meeting of delegates elected by the provincial Zemstvos was held in Moscow. It was then and there decided to form the All-Russian Zemstvo Union "for relief work among the sick and wounded soldiers." And every Zemstvo joined in, save one, this solitary abstainer preferring to work independently.

"Here we are; use us," said the Zemstvo people to the government, and the government accepted. They were to be under the orders of the war department and available only for work in the interior. The limitation was put upon them; they did not specify the limitation.

But the restriction did not hold. The army needed doctors, nurses, hospitals. The Zemstvo had been in the hospital business for 40 years and it went to the army's aid upon the very field of battle and in the very front line trenches.

THINGS WORK RAPIDLY.

After the things moved rapidly. Hospitals in the interior were organized. So were first-aids, distributing centres, bases. "Front Brigades" were formed for handling the wounded, sanitary trains equipped. During October and November, 1914, the union sent the Serbian army 215,000 fur and other garments, paid for by the Russian government but bought by the Zemstvo and handled by them.

In Octob., 1914, General Shuvayev, then the head of the commissary, now minister of war, asked the union to make underwear for the men. The union replied by delivering to the army before the end of the month over 7,500,000 complete suits! And this was only a side order! It was very simple. The Zemstvo is a people's organization. The peasants are in it. So the Zemstvo simply went to a lot of poor women it had known for a long time, and said:

"Make us these articles. We want them for the army."

And over night almost the articles were cut and sewed by Russian seamstresses.

Another order, similarly executed was for wearing apparel to the tune of 17,000,000 pieces. Russian co-operative societies in a large measure filled these orders, societies embracing at least half the population of Russia. And Russia numbers 170,000,000 souls!

So you see quite a small crowd is working for the country.

WATER WAGGON DRIVER GIVES TRADITION A BLOW.

Chicago, July 12.—Tradition received an awful uppercut when the driver of a water waggon was arrested for being soused, spifflicated and otherwise intoxicated, and trying to drive the waggon in that condition. Even a water waggon driver may fall off but ethics require that he should gyrate while off duty.

James Arnold, 40, in a cell at the Chicago avenue station, is cogitating these things and nursing an aching head. He was arrested while trying vainly to pilot a water waggon. He is employed by Clayton A. Martin, a city sprinkling contractor, and the newspaper artists have immortalized him and his waggon in their swearing-off cartoons which appear about the first of every year.

GRAVE PICTURE OF LIFE IN MUNICH DRAWN BY POLICE

London, July 12.— — The Tagliche Rundschau publishes a speech which it says has been delivered at a public meeting by the police president of Munich. It gives an astonishing picture of war conditions in the Bavarian capital.

The police president quoted a soldier who, after a short period of leave in Munich, said that he could "not stand it any longer, and could not go on watching a life of dissipation in such contrast with the sacrifices which had to be borne every day on the field." The police president continued:

"The judgment sounds hard but the feelings of this brave soldier are intelligible. The troops regard their fight as a fight for higher things and for Kultur. One suffers gladly for friends of simplicity and moderation, and one died gladly for German simplicity and German idealism. But it is hard to make sacrifice for extortioners and hunters after enjoyment, for selfish, superficial viveurs, and hoarders of food, and for vain, coquettish women — because they are not worth it.

RICH AND POOR CONTRASTED.

"Let me call attention to the following contrast. On the one hand afternoon concerts in the cafes, where well-dressed women, girls and children, in the company of careless viveurs, riot in luxury. On the other hand, four thousand or five thousand soldiers wives and small shop-keepers gathered together outside the food markets from one o'clock in the morning onwards in order to be able to buy a scrap of meat at a price which they can afford. They wait their turn patiently and without complaining for six hours or eight hours, in any weather, and very scantily clad. And when, as is almost always the case, for three hundred, or four hundred, or five hundred of them, they quietly accept their fate. These poor people practice self-discipline and restraint.

"I call attention to the luxurious living of many rich families for whom the war seems not to exist. They hold their parties just as in times of peace, and avaricious shopkeepers make their gluttony possible by secretly sending them the necessary delicacies.

"I should also like to refer to certain viveurs who managed to prove themselves 'indispensable,' and then, while living in comfort, devoted themselves entirely to sport and amusements. We have succeeded in removing them to the trenches."

The police president said that the life in the bars and night resorts of Munich "cries to heaven," and he violently attacked the "shameless extortion" practised by dealers in food. He declared that immense stocks of food are hoarded up and that the police have lately ordered the destruction of great quantities of vegetables which have been stored in cellars and have gone bad. He said that the life in some of the Bavarian winter resorts was such that the military authorities had forbidden the officers and soldiers to visit them. On a church door in the mountains was the notice:

"Women offensively dressed—that is to say, with skirts too wide or too short—are forbidden to enter the church."

Drinking went on as usual in Munich and there were still people who insisted on consuming eight or ten quarts of beer a day. There was an abundance of literature of the lowest sort, and the boys and girls were being tempted more than ever by the picture palaces and by the sense of independence which they enjoyed now that they were earning good wages.

The police president criticized severely the fashions in women's dresses, and defended his action in instructing the police to arrest women who made themselves too conspicuous. He said that the Berlin newspapers had condemned him but he did not intend to alter his course and he had indeed given the police stronger instructions.

Paralysis Germ Reported Found By N.Y. Physician

Dr. Flexner, Who Is Devoting Energies To Plague, To Address Doctors.

NEW YORK, July 14.—While Health Commissioner Emerson declined to discuss the report that a New York physician had succeeded in isolating the germ of infantile paralysis, great importance was attached by medical men to a meeting of physicians, which will be devoted to a discussion of the disease which has cost more than 250 lives in this city since the epidemic began.

Among the speakers will be Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Foundation, who is devoting his energies to a study of infantile paralysis. It was reported that scientists have progressed so far that they are testing a culture in which they believe they will find traces of the germ and ultimately isolate it.

There was a feeling of optimism in the health department, not only because there were fewer cases being reported, but also because no new areas were invaded, and because all agencies combating the epidemic are working in complete co-operation.

An analysis made by the health department of the reported cases shows that only about one per cent. of the persons affected are over fifteen years of age, while 90 per cent. are children less than five years old. Most of those who have died have been between the ages of one and three years.

INDICATIONS POINT TO GOOD HAY CROP

More good hay has been made out in the country in the last ten days and if the present dry, scorching weather holds for the balance of the season, than in a similar period in years. In a week the bulk of the Ontario clover crop and some of the timothy will be stored away in the barns. The farmers were chary about starting haying this year, fearing a continuance of the wet weather, but now they are making every day count for good. It is doubtful now that they are in the midst of it and can estimate the crop, if a better all round yield of hay has ever been cut. The hay cocks are bigger and thicker than anybody supposed, and the only slim crops are on the low, wet, cold bottom lands.

There was no fall wheat in stook on the 12th of July this year as in some former ones, but it is turning rapidly and a fortnight will see it in shock. Out through Markham, Vaughan and Whitchurch they are talking about their crops as being extra heavy, but it too soon to determine just what the yield will be.

Thousands of acres of buckwheat are being sown, much of it already in, and the grain buyers throughout central Ontario say there will be a big market for this crop, the like of which has not been seen for years.

It looks like a big falling off in the mangold, wurtsel and turnip crop this summer, but many farmers claim that with showery weather from this time on there is no reason why the crop should not be all right. The big growth never begins until the cold weather in any event. Despite all predictions there does not appear to be any very pronounced scarcity of men over other years but every man willing to work can get a job on the farm at good wages.

To avoid the expense of rubber gloves a good substitute is made by dipping old gloves into hot linseed oil. This renders them water-proof.

Confused the Name—It was at a civic banquet in a certain Scottish city, the name of which is immaterial. The "spread" was a most luxurious one. In the graphic words of the local newspaper reporter "the table groaned under its delicious burden." During the repast one of the waiters who was serving the wine approached one of the latest accessions to the Town Council and inquired—"Sauterne, sir?" "Saut herrin" did ye say?" remarked the new-fledged Councillors. "Na, na, nane o' yer saut herrin' for me. I've nae need for them. I've ower guid a natural brooth o' my ain."

PRESENTED WITH SERVICE MEDAL

It is the lot of very few men to be the recipient of a Distinguished Service Medal. Such a medal was to be seen in the window of the Peterborough Bookstore a few days ago. It was presented by the King in Buckingham Palace about four weeks ago to Capt. D. E. McIntyre of the 28th Battalion, who was recommended to receive it for distinguished service and bravery in the present great struggle in France. The event has some local interest, inasmuch as Mrs. McIntyre was a former frequent visitor to Peterborough as Miss Marjory Scott of Galt, and a cousin of Miss Lizzie Scott and Mrs. Paul Trebilcock, and has just been making a short visit in the city at the home of the latter.

The Field Illustrated has an excellent series of articles in its July number dealing with "the greatest old Scottish cow"—the Ayrshire. It gives a fine series of illustrations.

SO CONTRADICTORY.

"Wot'll you 'ave " said Tommy to a French comrade. The Frenchman replied: "I will take the drop of contradiction."

Tommy: "What on earth do you mean "

Frenchman: "Vell, you put in ze whisky to make it strong, ze water to make it weak, ze lemon to make it sour, ze sugar to make it sweet. Zen you say 'Here's to you,' and drink it yourself."

WEDDING BELLS

HICKSON—HOLLAND.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Martin's church, Ennismore on Tuesday, June 20th, when Miss Katie, youngest daughter of Michael Holland, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Richard Hickson, son of Mrs. James Hickson of Ennismore. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGuire.

The bridesmaid was Miss Bonadette Crowley, while the groom was supported by Mr. Leo Killen. At 9 o'clock the bridal party entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Agnes Scollard.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of white embroidered net over silk and a large Panama hat with plumes. The bridesmaid was also becomingly attired in a dress of white voile with hat to match.

After receiving the hearty congratulations of a host of friends the party motored to the bride's home, where about one hundred guests partook of a sumptuous wedding breakfast.

Many beautiful and costly gifts were received which testify to the popularity of the young couple. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome necklace, to the bridesmaid a pendant and to the best man a tie pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Hickson will reside in Ennismore and begun their new life with the best wishes of their many friends.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELLEN HELSON.

Mrs. Ellen Helson passed peacefully away at 8 o'clock last night at 643 Bethune Street, the residence of her son, Mr. George A. Helson, with whom she had made her home for the last eight years. Mrs. Helson had reached the advanced age of 84 years, having been born in the township of Otonabee. She came to reside in this city 34 years ago, and 20 years ago was bereft of her husband. Brought up in a Christian home, Mrs. Helson acquired a strong and unfailing faith in the Master whom she served and taught her children to serve. Such a faith and personality as Mrs. Helson possessed could not fail but radiate outside the family circle, and neighbours and friends found in her a tried and true helper when the hour of trial and suffering was at hand. Following in the footsteps of her Master, she went about doing good, and now has passed to her reward.

Seventy-one years ago deceased became a member of the Methodist Church, and since coming to the city she had been a regular attendant at George Street Church until recently.

Mrs. Helson leaves five daughters and two sons to cherish the memory of one who was a true mother in the highest sense of the word. The daughters, Mrs. Wm. Bonney, Burnley, Ont.; Mrs. E. C. Smith, Edmonton; Mrs. H. M. Gable, York, Pa.; Mrs. F. G. Green, Toronto; and Miss Maud E. Helson, at home. The sons are Alfred M. Helson, Sherbrooke Street, and George A. Helson, Bethune Street. Thomas Metcalf of Guelph, Ont., and Alfred Metcalf, of Rochester, N.Y., are brothers.

The funeral will be held from 643 Bethune Street on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 to Little Lake Cemetery, service at the house at 2 o'clock. Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., will conduct the services.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. John Collins of Hastings, was in the city to-day.

Mr. John McFadden, of Calgary, is visiting at his home in this city.

Miss Annie Duck of Lindsay, spent a short time in this city yesterday.

Mr. Fabion Gulogly, of the Canadian Cereal Co., spent yesterday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowie, Orillia, are visiting Mrs. H. Dickson, 586 Harvey Street, City.

Mrs. Alexander Dixon and family are enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Mud Lake, in the vicinity of Cannington, Ont.

Mrs. C. D. Baker, Toronto, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. G. A. Evans, King Street, has returned home.

Misses Ella and Kathleen Webster, of Fenelon Falls, spent a few days with Miss Mary Dickson, 586 Harvey Street, City.

Mrs. Wm. Mullen, Milbrook, and Mrs. R. Raper, Toronto, spent a few days with Mrs. Wm. Kemp, 548 Bethune Street, City.

The little friends of Kathleen Hubbard will be glad to know she is recovering and hopes soon to be among them again. She is still in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. John McGrath, of Bridgeport, Conn., is here on a visit. Mr. McGrath has been in Bridgeport for the past two years and is in business with his son. He states that business conditions in Bridgeport are very satisfactory.

The many friends of Mr. J. C. Shook will be glad to hear he is up and around again, and made his first appearance at the Oriental desk today after his long illness.

Mrs. Edith M. King and little daughter, Frances from Ardmse, Pa., are spending the summer with Mrs. G. V. Ahern, Jr., 468 Cambridge street, Peterborough.

Trip to Gore's Landing Yesterday

One hundred Thursday half-holidayers took in the trip to Gore's Landing yesterday by the steamer Geneva, which left the George Street Wharf at 1.30 and despoiled its crowd for a few hours in the breezy resort opposite Block's Island. They returned to the city at 10 last night.

LAWN BOWLING

Jack Wyllie and Bob Elliott Win the Doubles.

The final of the Scotch doubles was played on Tuesday night when Wylie and Elliott won from D. H. Moore and E. Walton by the score of 13-10. Moore got away to a good start, and at one time appeared to have the game well in hand, but Wyllie and his partner put up a splendid fight, eventually winning out by 3 points.

The first round of the singles was completed last night and produced some excellent games. The second round will commence to-night and be finished on Saturday night:

The following is the draw for the second round:

B. Everett vs. J. Metheral; J. Buckham vs. J. W. Parkins; E. Walton vs. W. Grant; C. Gould vs. E. Taylor; R. Elliott vs. W. J. Oke; Rev. T. H. Mitchell vs. W. Elliott; T. E. Pratt vs. J. W. Mayneord; J. E. A. Fitzgerald vs. D. Bellegham; Geo. Cairns vs. J. P. Cunningham.

BIRTH.

LACEY.—In Peterborough, on Thursday, July 13, 1916, the wife of Dr. Lacey, 280 Hunter Street West, of a daughter. (Hamilton papers please copy).

DEATH.

HELSON.—At 643 Bethune Street, the residence of her son, Mr. Geo. A. Helson, on Thursday, July 13, 1916, Mrs. Ellen Helson, aged 84. Funeral from the above address on Saturday, July 15, at 2.30 p.m., to Little Lake Cemetery. House service at 2 p.m.

ENEMY ATTACK REPULSED ON THE WESTERN FRONT

The British and French Continue To Hold All Their Gains

Minor Attacks On The Western Front Were All Repulsed

French Curtain of Fire Checked Several Attempted Enemy Advances--Several Violent Artillery Duels Recorded--Russians Captured Several Thousand Turks--Late Despatches Indicate Continued Success for British and French Troops.

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS REPULSED

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 15.—The repulse of minor German attacks northwest and southeast of Verdun was reported by the War Office to-day, but no important actions on the Somme front were chronicled in the official communique. On the west bank of the Meuse the French repulsed a German grenade attack on a trench northeast of Avocourt redoubt. On the east bank of the river, violent artillery duels occurred. In the sector of Fleury the French dispersed several German reconnaissances. In the Apremont forest t French curtain of fire checked several attempted enemy advances.

VICTORY FOR RUSSIANS.

PETROGRAD, July 15.—Russians captured 3,200 Turks, two guns and nineteen machine guns in a victory this week in Mesopotamia.

COUNTER ATTACKS REPULSED.

ROME, July 15.—In trying to regain the positions lost to us the Austrians' counter attacks broke down with heavy losses last night.

BRITISH SUCCESS CONTINUES.

PARIS, July 15.—Late despatches from the front indicate continued success for the British and French troops.

KING CONSTANTINE INJURED.

LONDON, July 15.—King Constantine was injured about the face and legs by jumping from a bridge when the Royal Villa was burned.

AIRCRAFT DROPPED BOMBS.

ROME, July 15.—Hostile aircraft dropped bombs on Padua, with slight damage.

OFFICERS LEAVE FOR FRANCE.

LONDON, July 15.—A large number of Canadian officers have crossed to France.

OBSERVATION BALLOONS DESTROYED.

PARIS, July 15.—Allies' air guns destroyed all German observation balloons on the western front.

RUSSIANS STILL PROGRESSING.

PETROGRAD, July 15.—The Russians are still progressing in the Caucasus, and on the eastern front.

CANADIAN ARTILLERY EFFECTIVE.

OTTAWA, July 15.—Official eye witness says that Canadian guns silenced several enemy batteries.

AUSTRIA'S WAR COST.

It is Now About $128,000,000 a Month —More Revenue Needed.

AMSTERDAM, July 13.—In the course of a speech in the Lower House of the Hungarian Parliament on war profit taxes, says a telegram from Budapest, Johann Teleszy, Hungarian Minister of Finance, said that the twenty-three months of war had cost Hungary an average of from 460,000,000 to 470,000,000 crowns (about $94,000,000) monthly. Naturally the amount had increased during the course of the war, being smaller at the beginning of hostilities, but now ranging from 560,000,000 to 600,000,000 crowns ($120,000,000) monthly.

The cost of the war had primarily been covered by loans, the expenditures not thus met having been covered partly by short time loans from financial institutions, including Austro-Hungarian banks. "This should convince the house," the Minister declared, "that in future we shall need a very considerable increase in the country's revenue."

VERDUN GERMANY'S DOOM.

French Officer Says It Has Made the Kaiser's Army Doubt Itself.

Paris, July 13.—"You have heard the catchword of the trenches, 'We shall get them.' Now we should say rather, 'We have got them,'" said one of the principal chiefs directing the operations of the French on the Somme to Georges de Maiziere, the writer.

"I don't mean to say by that that we are going to drive the Germans out of France and Belgium by a victorious rush to-morrow, but that the Germans now are becoming appalled at the prospect of a third winter campaign," he continued. "The German army is doomed sooner or later, and the reason is—Verdun.

"Verdun will enable us to take Peronne, and everywhere else when the time comes, for Verdun made the Germans doubt themselves, made them feel that there is perhaps something higher than German culture, and that is a French spirit."

"What We Have to Say About Our Competitors"

Knocking has been widely used by salesmen with the result that a possible customer not only does not buy the first salesman's line, but does not purchase that of the second either, being turned against both and all similar products.

As an example take a boiler skimmer. If the second salesman "knocks" the design of and result obtained by the skimmer demonstrated by a first salesman, the chances are that you, as a factory manager, will be turned against mechanical boiler skimmers in general.

Two pages from the book issued by the Egg-O Baking Powder Co., Hamilton, on "What We Have to Say About Our Competitors!"

The best way to treat competitors is to say nothing. In this connection the Egg-O Baking Powder Co., of Hamilton, have issued a book of eight pages. The front page is headed: "What We Have to Say About Our Competitors!" The remaining pages are blank, and it drives home the old lesson that if we cannot say anything good about a person or a competitor or his products, say nothing.

The above is from "The Canadian Manufacturer" JUNE 1916

If your competitor talks about you put him on the pay-roll. Never mind what he says as long as he talks.

Says British Prisoners Are Being Badly Treated

Lord Newton Says Embassy Officials in Berlin Are Barred from Inspecting Camps, and Declares Situation of Interned Aliens in Britain Forms Serious Problem.

LONDON, July 15.—Lord Newton, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, explaining in the House of Lords how 20,000 German prisoners of war are being employed in timber camps and quarries, in making roads and other duties, and how others had been sent to France to be employed in accordance with the provisions of The Hague Convention, said that as a reprisal Germany had sent some British prisoners into Russian territory, where they were being treated badly. He said that officials of the American Embassy in Berlin had been barred from inspecting their camps.

Lord Nedton also commented on the "spirit of stupidity and ignorance fostered by a certain section of the press." All attempts to employ the more than 30,000 interned aliens in Great Britain had proved hopeless, he declared. Lord Newton said he had tried to induce the government to employ some of these men, but was immediately threatened with a strike by something like 100,000 men.

Unless a more intelligent spirit prevailed, Lord Newton asserted, the end of the war would find Great Britain with thousands of these aliens still behind barbed wire, demoralized and broken in health and constituting a serious problem after peace.

FOUR OF ONE FAMILY KILLED ON SAME DAY

Well-Known Athletes in Wednesday's British List of Casualties.

LONDON, July 14. — Casualties: 221 officers, 74 dead and 22 missing; 900 men, 171 dead. Chief suffering regiments: R. A. H. C., Royal Irish Rifles, Machine Gun Corps, Royal Onniskillings, Newfoundland.

Officers dead include: Colonel Annesley, Royal Fusiliers, who captained the regimental polo team in India for many years; Colonel Walter Brown, Wiltshire regiment, who was severely wounded in South Africa; Colonel Arthur Elphinstone, Northumberland Fusiliers, who also served with distinction in the Indian Army; Captain Oswald Brown, Northumberland Fusiliers, English International Footballer; Captain Percy Harkness, West Yorkshires, well-known cross-country rider and motor-cycle gold medalist.

Especial sympathy is extended to the Ayre family, of Newfoundland, four of whose members were killed on July first, namely, Captain Eric Ayre, Second Lieutenant Gerald Ayre, Second Lieutenant Wilfrid Ayre, all three of the Newfoundland regiment, and Captain Bernard Ayre, Norfolk Regiment. Mrs. Chesley Ayre, mother of Eric and Bernard, has lost every member of her family. The four officers were nephews of the late Honorable John, Ayre, Newfoundland Legislative Council.

The Honour Roll also includes: Lieut. H. C. Herder, son of the editor of the Evening Telegram of St. John's, Newfoundland, whose brother, Private Herder Tuesday was brought wounded to England.

Second Lieutenant R. B. Reid, Newfoundland, and son of Sir William Duff Reid, is among the missing.

Ques.: "What is the biggest raw product you use?"

Ans.: "Hard to say without looking it up."

Ques.: "You can't tell? I know, now."

Ans.: "You do? Well! What is it?"

Ques.: "Working Time, my boy, working time—the time every workman sells you every day. How do you check it?"

Ans.: "Check it? Oh, I guess my timekeepers do that."

Ques.: "They're human beings? Of course, Yes—well, now, who checks the timekeeper? And who checks the man who checks the timekeeper? Why not cut out all the guess-work and let a cold-blooded machine do the work? Print unchangeable figures under lock and key in and out shifts, four or six times a day, if necessary, giving Records that form an original PRINTED wage sheet."

Ans.: "Sounds good—what's the answer?"

Ques.: "Well the answer is an International Time Recorder. Your competitors are using it. Thousands of the World's greatest manufacturers are doing likewise. Time is the greatest raw material in the world and if you don't check it's purchase you'll lose, and lose four times a day every day in the year. Widow of Joseph Chamberlain to Wed LONDON, July 12. — The engagement of (Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, widow of the Birmingham statesman, to Rev. William Hartley Carnegie, rector of St. Margaret's and Cannon of Westminster since 1913, was announced to-day.

Mrs. Chamberlain was formerly Miss Mary Endicott, of Boston. Her father was William E. Endicott, secretary of war in President Cleveland's first administration. When Joseph Chamberlain was on a diplomatic mission to Washington in 1887, he met Miss Endicott. They were secretly engaged. In 1888 they were married. She was Mr. Chamberlain's third wife. Mr. Chamberlain, who was born in 1836, and was considerably older than his third wife, died July 2, 1914.

Canon Carnegie was born in Dublin in 1860. He was educated at Oxford. In 1892 he married Albinta Frances, daughter of Sir Thomas Crawley Boevey. He died in 1901. Canon Carnegie was rector of the Cathedral Church of St. Philip in Birmingham, Mr. Chamberlain's native city, in 1903. Later he was made honorary canon of Birmingham.

Japanese Troupe Create Sensation

The "Cagehara Setire Troupe" of ten Japanese equilibrists, are creating about the biggest sensation with the Coup and Lent Circus, which comes to Peterboro on July 20th, of any Oriental group ever imported to America. These wonderful little people appear to defy every law of gravity and nature in the amasingly intricate feats they execute far above the earth. Their head to head balancing atop of slender rods, performed by no other acrobats in the world, is one of the most intense "breath-takers ever accomplished, while the climax of their display, the 'Swinging Monkey Chain' engaging the full company suspended from two lofty perches, assures their distinctive appeal to the devotee of dare-devil stunts for a long time to come.

Prohibition Will Not Stand Test in Scotland

This Is the Opinion of the Liquor Control Board.

GLASGOW, July 15. —Prohibition in Scotland is impractical, in the opinion of the liquor control board. The board stated this in substance to a deputation representing many thousands of women, who signed a petition urging the adoption of prohibition for the period of the war.

Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the board, said that it was not possible to consider prohibition, except as applied to large, self-contained areas. Otherwise the difficulties of control in regard to importation were insuperable. Lord D'Abernon said that the experience in the colonies and in the United States showed that no measure of prohibition could stand unless applied with the cordial consent of a large majority of the people affected.

MUST HAVE BEEN ALIVE.

A poor Scot went to a butcher shop and asked for as much meat as possible for a shilling. The butcher brought him a piece of meat, which, to say the least of it, was well on the way to "walking home." The man took the meat dubiously, and then turned to the butcher and said, "Mon ye might 'a killed it furst."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

FORTUNATE INDEED is the baby who is nursed by its mother and who thus avoids the danger of summer complaint which follows in the track of dirty milk. But the baby must be weaned sooner or later! It cannot go on nursing forever. When shall the baby be weaned? The careful mother will endeavor not to wean the baby in very hot weather; and, while this is of importance, other considerations of equal or even greater moment must be taken into account by the nursing mother. A healthy child should be weaned at the ninth or tenth month. At the sixth or seventh month the front teeth appear. What does this mean? It indicates that the child is getting ready to take care of other food than the mother's milk. In weakly children the eruption of the teeth may be delayed somewhat, but whenever the teeth do appear they must be taken as a sign for new rations.

The weight of the baby, increasing as it should from week to week, is one of the most important indications of the baby's health. If all is going well, the weight increases steadily; if the weight is stationary or if baby is losing weight, it is evidence that the breast milk is unsuitable, and the baby should be weaned, or partly weaned, irrespective of age. If the mother is suffering from any acute or chronic disease, or if pregnant, the baby should be weaned.

As to the best time for weaning. Do not depend on the time of the moon or any such nonsense. All things being equal, the early spring or late fall is the best time.

When the first teeth appear along about the sixth or seventh month, substitute first one regular nursing with four (4) ounces of good cow's milk and two (2) ounces of barley water sweetened with a little sugar of milk. After two days substitute this for two regular nursings, and at the end of a couple of weeks the milk and barley water may be given alternately with the nursing. By the ninth or tenth month the breast may be discontinued altogether. In this way the baby will be weaned gradually, and will not usually miss the breast.

The greatest trouble is with the anxious mother, who is apt to think that the baby is not getting enough. Many mothers think the baby is always hungry and they give it too much food; the more food the baby gets the more irritable it becomes. It cries not because of hunger but because its stomach is overfilled. The cry is interpreted wrongly and more food is given, making matters worse.

After weaning, the diet should comprise milk and barley water or milk with the broth of oatmeal, chicken or beef, some stewed fruit, orange juice, crust of bread, and later a soft-boiled egg.

Be sure and give the baby plenty of pure water, and keep it in the open air as much as possible.

If the baby is fretful, keeping it in its cot or carriage in the open air is the best sedative. Don't give it soothing syrup, paregoric, or any other dope.

The pulse is produced by the action of the heart forcing the blood through the arteries, just as a fire engine forces water through hose at a fire. The blood is sent from the left side of the heart through the arteries, capillaries, and veins of one's body to the right side of the heart, thence to the lungs, where it is purified by the air we breathe. From the lungs it passes to the left side of the heart and then through the body again. If one presses one's finger on an artery, such as the radial, on the instant an impulse is felt; this is the pulse. If, as is commonly the case, it beats 70 times to the minute the pulse rate is 70. Various factors influence the pulse rate. When one is lying down it is slower by seven to ten beats than when standing erect. In most diseases the purse becomes more rapid; in some instances rising in the same ratio as the temperature (which in a well person is 98 Deg. F.) For example, a pulse of 110 should carry a temperature of 104 Deg. F., but there are exceptions.

THE PULSE AND TEMPERATURE IN CONSUMPTION

In typhoid fever, with a temperature of 104 Deg. F., the pulse would probably be lower than 110. In diphtheria the pulse runs higher, a temperature of 100 Deg. F. often giving a pulse of 120.

Some infections like diphtheria and tuberculosis stir the pulse-rate to a high degree. A consumptive with a temperature of 100 Deg. F. would likely have a pulse of 120. A very slight infection of consumption will raise the pulse five or ten beats, while the temperature may be raised very slightly.

PINEAPPLE LEMONADE

Pineapple lemonade is one of the most refreshing drinks for very hot weather. To make it, add the contents of a ten-cent can of pineapple to three lemons, after they have been crushed and soaked in hot water. The slices of pineapples may be cut into dice or in halves or quarters. A can of this will go as far as a whole pineapple, and you are saved the nuisance of preparing it. The same is very nearly true of canned peaches, pears and cherries, all of which are interesting additions to lemonade.

A LAUNDRY CABINET.

Have a laundry cabinet if it is no more than a stout starch box fixed up with two shelves. Keep in it the starch, soap, bluing, Javelle water for stains, soap powder and washing soda, just before wash day. This cabinet will be found most serviceable. Teach your laundress to place articles back where they belong and to wash up the laundry floor, tubs, etc., and to leave the wringer clean and unscrewed.

HOW TO USE COPPERAS.

Dissolve a heaping tablespoonful of copperas in a gallon of boiling water. Pour through drains, sinks, or into gutters that are clogged up. Sprinkle any bad smelling place plentifully with it pools. It is an ideal disin ofwypt and syray it over green-scummed pools. It is an ideal disinfectant—cheap, odorless and effectual.

KEEPING FIT.

The most common cause of headache is overeating and inactivity of the muscles. The tendency nowadays is to sap the nervous vitality and to give little heed to the keeping of the physical organs correct and healthy.

All exercises should be done with discretion and intelligence. The girl who overdances cannot walk six miles the next day. The body needs a certain amount of work and a certain amount of rest. When the lungs lack fresh air and brain is not at its best.

All feel should be masticated thoroughly; rapid eating is to blame for many cases of dyspepsia and poor complexions. Proper elimination is also important. This can often be regulated by taking a cup of hot water before breakfast.

A teaspoon of epsom salts in half a cup of hot water before breakfast for about five days will improve a sallow skin. Facial steaming and a massage once a week should always be taken if you wish a clear complexion.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

Sunday

The Corn Aches

You apply a little Blue-jay plaster. The ache ends instantly, and it never will return.

You can prove that in one minute. A million women prove it every month. A corn will never pain again after Blue-jay once goes on it.

Monday

No Corn Pain

On Monday you won't know you have a corn. It is gently disappearing. You know that corn is done for. You know it won't come back. You may also know that soreness will not follow. For Blue-jay is as gentle as efficient.

Tuesday

The Corn is Gone

In 48 hours Blue-jay ends 91 corns in 100. The other 9 per cent are tough corns which need another application.

Such has been the history of 70 million corns, since Blue-jay was invented. And any user will assure you that such results are certain.

Prove that fact tonight.

Details of Dress Important

Shoes, Gloves, Parasols and Hats, All Have Their Parts to Play —Short Skirts Demand Smart Footwear

NEW YORK, July 15.—In the summer season, perhaps more than any other time, it is the little things of dress which count in the wardrobe. The sheer lingeries frock gathers much of its charm from the bright girdle, the touch of colour at the throat, the well-fitting pump, or boot, dainty stockings and gloves and the wide-brimmed, becoming hat which completes it. Without these finishing touches, the frock itself might fall short of expectations.

Summer Footwear.

Although the high laced boot was chic and becoming with the short tailored skirt, and is still a favourite in white canvas, buckskin, and the soft gray and tan leathers, the low shoe is much in demand. The old-time Colonial pump with huge buckle and more or less exaggerated tongue, according to personal fancy, is a general favourite. These are equally modish in the dull calf or bright patent leather. Another favourite in low shoes is the perfectly plain pump of calf or patent leather. This is made with a rather long vamp, and fits smoothly over the instep, being finished with a bow of leather, a small buckle or no ornament at all. There is variety in heels also; the medium high heel is generally favoured for street wear, the French heel for evening, and there is a comfortable and good looking low-heel for those who do not care for the higher one for street wear. Sport shoes are particularly charming, being low of heel, broad of toe, and most comfortable as well as chic. There are rubber-soled and heeled canvas shoes, high and low, for tennis, golf, and similar sports; substantial looking shoes for walking, mountain climbing and the more strenuous of out-of-door purposes. These come in tan or black and lend themselves to any appropriate out-of-door costume. For those who favour the flat-heeled, broad-toed shoe, there are a number of modish low shoes, on the Oxford type, which may be appropriately worn with the tailored suit or dress for street and business wear.

What's New in Neckwear.

Neckwear is particularly interesting this summer. The various collars and jabots now modish offer limitless ways of changing or brightening up a frock or blouse.

Perhaps the very newest idea in neckwear is the shoulder cape of white, black, Java brown, or other favoured shade, of crepe Georgette trimmed with bands of ermine, beaver or moleskin. The short-haired furs are preferred for these capes. While these novelties are a bit absurd, still they are effective and becoming, and afford quite a bit of warmth, worn in the evening over the sheer lingerie frock of the filmy dance dress.

The jab frill of chiffon net, picot-edged Georgette, or organdy is an effective accessory with the tailored suit; it is worn oftentimes with the coat, and then again it is a part of the blouse. The jabot blouse is one of the most popular models of the season.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

WAR AT HOME: During all of the excitement of warlike preparations against the enemies of peace and prosperity in their own countries as well as in ours, let us not forget that this is the time of the year when it is necessary to continue the war as well begun in previous years against one of the greatest enemies of health as well as comfort in the home and that is the housefly. Year after year I have urged my readers in all parts of the country to keep up the fight and I can assure you that the results are apparent in almost all portions of the United States.

One of the worst offenders in carrying live flies from place to place is the railroad trains. As early as the first of April, when flies were hardly thought of here in Chicago, they were brought in on every train from the South. The Pullman and Dining cars appeared to be greater offenders than the day coaches and I sought for the reason. It was not hard to find and could have been easily remedied by a little effort on the part of the porters and trainmen.

While yet in the South the windows and doors of all of the coaches as well as Pullman and Dining cars were open and the flies swarmed in; as the train sped on its way North the windows were gradually closed and the doors of the Pullman and Dining cars seldom opened as the occupants were mostly through passengers. In them the steam was turned on and the flies continued to be lively and comfortable while the constantly changing passengers of the day coaches opened the doors and the flies soon disappeared.

I have noticed also that the railroads are serious offenders in supplying breeding places for the pests at nearly all of their small stations in the form of the vile old-fashioned open privy and shallow, unclean privy vault. A box of dry sand or of slacked lime could easily be kept in these places and once daily the employees that use the places should be required to cover all of the fecal matter deposited with the sand or lime.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington is certainly doing a tremendous good work in its continuous hammering away on the subject of fly destruction, but my observation to date is that the cities are getting more benefit from this free information than is the country population, although it is intended for the farmers' especial benefit. The reason appears to be that the cities are more active and prompt in applying the information that is so freely supplied and without cost to the individual.

The latest Farmers' Bulletin issued by the department is number 734 and entitled "Flytraps and their Operation". This bulletin is free for the asking and it gives such simple working plans for the constriction of practical home-made fly traps that almost any one could make one easier than they could think up an excuse for not risking one. The cost is practically nothing. Four wooden barrel hoops, four laths, four strips of wood one and one-half inches wide by one-half inch thick, (cut from an old box will do) twenty-four inches long, 61 inches of 12 or 14 mesh galvanized screeing 24 inches wide for the sides and 41 inches of similar material 41 inches wide for the cone, an ounce of carpet tacks, a handful of small nails and you have all of the material except the top which is to be made out of a barrel head.

Fly traps work on the principle of knowledge that flies almost always walk upward and not downward on any surface upon which they alight. The bait is placed under the cone inside of the trap and Mr. Fly walks up the side of the cone and through the small opening at the top into the trap. By all means send a postal card request to the department and ask for Farmers' Bulletin number 734 and there you will see the detailed plan for several traps that will help you in the war on typhoid flies and all other fly pests that are so annoying as well as dangerous.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

HIS MOTHER.

Captain Jack Crawford, the poet scout, pays the following eloquent tribute to his mother: "I had a Christian mother, my earliest recollections of whom was kneeling at her side praying God to save a wayward father and husband. That mother taught me to speak the truth when a child, and I have tried to follow her early teachings in that respect. It would require a much larger book than this to tell the story of my life and the sufferings of one of God's good angels, my mother. To her I owe everything — truth, honor, sobriety and my very life. Her spirit seems to linger near me always; she has been my guardian angel. In the camp, the cabin, the field and the hospital, on the lonely trail hundreds of miles from civilization, in the pine-clad hills and lonely canyons, I have heard in the moaning night winds and in the murmuring streamlets—

The voice of my angel mother whispering soft and low.

"And these sacred thoughts have made me forget at times that there was danger in my pathway. Nor will I ever forget—

The day that we parted, mother and I,
Never on earth to meet again;
She to a happier home on high,
I a poor wanderer on the plain.

"That day was perhaps the greatest epoch in my life. Kneeling by her bedside, with one hand clasped in mine the other resting on my head, she whispered, 'My boy, you know your mother loves yu. Will you give me a promise that I may take it up to Heaven?' 'Yes, yes, mother, I will promise you anything.' 'Johnny, my son, I am dying,' said she; 'promise me that you will never drink intoxicants, and then it will not be so hard to leave this world.' Dear reader, need I tell you that I promised yes; and whenever I am asked to drink, that scene comes up before me, and I am safe."

Galesburg, Ill., hotels and boarding houses will be provided with Bibles, and people that occupy these rooms will have on the table a silent reminder of the way they should go. Even the presence of such a book has an influence and gives character to a room. The work of placing copies of the Scriptures in hotels has spread all over the country as a result of the activities of the Sons of Gideon, an organization of travelling men that is doing good work among the members of the knights of the grip.

The fact is much to be deplored that with most boys and girls the boy who spends the greatest amount of money for them, in furnishing them entertainment, is the boy most admired and cajoled. But, oh, what becomes of him when his money plays out? He plays out, too. Consequently, to keep his footing, he stifles his conscience and robs his employer, commits some other theft or gambles, in order to keep in the swim. This state of affairs is applicable to men and women in society. Many dark deeds are committed through a desire to supply the demands of worldly minded wives and daughters. And again, an honorable man, rather than sell his principles of integrity or meet the taunts and upbraidings at home, when he fails to supply their demands, prefers to send his soul to eternal death and thereby rid his physical self of life's burdens.

* * *

Do any of us know the power of influence? Give a child his first years in a loving Christian home, a good, noble mother, a consecrated, loving father, all harmoniously working together for the good of all mankind, that home may be humble, but home in the truest sense of the word. And after years may bring temptations and trials and cares, but the influence of that home can never be blotted out nor its power for good ever over estimated. Surely environment is stronger than education. First influences will last until life itself is gone. If our influence counts for so much ought we to ever grow weary striving to make that influence strong for good? But how soon when we have made good resolutions and promised to be more thoughtful and kind, do we fall back into the old listlessness and let opportunities for good pass by, that would make us rich with their blessings.

No matter how small a sin is, examine its tracks and you will find that they point straight toward the pit.

* * *

Suppose you are given to the habit of profanity. You enter into conversation with a man who never swears—or in other words, a gentleman. By and by you begin to see that he is the superior man. Your own remarks have a tame, flat, feeble sound to your ears. Your cheeks begin to burn with a sense of your friend's excellence. Your pert little drama sounds coarse, and drops out of your sentences, ashamed to remain in the company of good, honest, English words, until you discover that you are carrying on your parts of the conversation without swearing, you feel easier, your intellectual stature increases by a foot.

A FACE LOTION.

If the face shows a tendency to become red, break out into little pimples and seem overheated, then the diet must be attended to. During the hot weather one must be careful not to eat too much meat and starchy foods. Vegetables, green salads, fruits, and fish should form the daily menu. If you must eat meat, eat it cold. I would also advise you to take a teaspoonful of sodium phosphate every morning before breakfast. It is cooling and excellent for the liver. Use the following lotion:

Rose water	25 grams
Glycerine	50 grams
Alcohol	50 grams
Tincture of benzoin	50 grams
Boric acid	20 grams

Dissolve the boric acid first in the alcohol, add the glycerine, then the rose water, and lastly the tincture of benzoin.

PERSPIRATION MARKS.

Try dry-cleaning, sifting upon them over and over again cornstarch, magnesia and French chalk. Rub lightly after each sifting. If the marks remain, try either. Make a swab of soft white silk filled with the powder, pour on the ether, a little at a time, and dab the swab. Put a drop or so of ammonia spirit upon the swab—not enough to take out the color. If ether fails, deluge with chloroform, rubbing inward rapidly until it evaporates. Such marks are the problem of amateur cleaning—the very hardest of all to remove.

Did you ever stop to think that it was one thing to talk about people, and another thing to have people talk about you. If those of us who use our tongues a little too freely about our neighbors would stop and reflect about the matter and know the great evil that comes from too much talk and tattling, we are sure we would call a halt and gossip no more forever.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7823

No wonder that this younger devotee of fashion looks to be perfectly at ease. She has come to the age when she has learned, through mother, that girlish grace is best brought out when the dress is on simple, unassuming lines—one's own taste deciding the color scheme—and when some original note is added to give the distinctive style desired.

It is quite the fashion now to have a variation of an old style to make it a new one; so it is that we recall the suspender model in looking at this one, No. 7,823. It buttons on the shoulders over a separate gulmpe, which has a smart collar and sleeves gathered to cuffs to finish with a frill of edging.

The shaped front of the dress body gives oval vest effect to the gulmpe, trimmed with tiny buttons. A girdle or belt of material is now considered the best, and one is employed in this design where a plaited skirt in two gores and with a panel front is joined. For the shoulder straps and the front of the dress body scalloping is a popular and a pleasing finish.

The pattern No. 7,823 is cut in sizes 6 to 14 years. To make in size 8 will require 2¼ yards of 44 inch material for the dress and 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material for the gulmpe, with ⅝ yard of edging.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Artist's Infatuation

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Walter Phelps from the time he was six years old gave evidence of possessing artistic abilities and when he was fourteen began to study the profession of painting. One faculty he possessed was that of endowing anything which became attractive to him through association with beauty. Near his home lived a little girl, who became his playmate. She was of a lower social grade than Walter, but his parents had no fear of his falling in love with her, for she was very homely, and they, not knowing of his disposition to endow what he liked with beauty, supposed that an artist would only fall in love with a beautiful woman.

When Walter was twenty years old he became engaged to this girl, Martha Gibbs, to the astonishment of every one who knew him. Her hair was a fiery red, her teeth were prominent, and she had a cast in her eye. But his parents, knowing how useless it is to interfere between lovers, refrained from any attempt in the case of their son. Besides, they knew nothing against Martha except her homeliness and her indifferent social position. No one supposed that Walter considered his betrothed beautiful till he painted her portrait and they observed that he looked at it with admiring eyes. Then everybody realized that his love for her caused him to endow her with a beauty that existed only in his imagination.

Great as was their surprise at this discovery, it was nothing compared with their astonishment when they learned that he was using Martha for a model. He painted her as a shepherdess, as springtime and, dressing her in fashionable attire, as a lady. Then, when his pictures found no purchasers, instead of attributing his ill success to his choice of a model, he became impressed with the idea that he had mistaken his calling. About the time he was making up his mind to this effect Martha jilted him for a greengrocer, whom she married secretly without letting her fiance know what she was about to do.

Walter's misery was only equaled by the joy of his parents and his friends. Now that it was all over between him and Martha one of his intimate associates made bold to express wonder that he, an artist, with an eye for the beautiful, should have attributed beauty to Martha.

"Ah," exclaimed the unfortunate man, "there is a loss to me as great in my profession as is the wounding of my feelings! Surely all hope of my succeeding in my profession has gone, since I shall never find another model suitable to my needs."

Walter left the brush and the palette for awhile for other avocations. On the walls of his room he hung the portraits of the girl who had jilted him, and it seemed to his mother that the case of her son's love had been made worse instead of better. At last she ventured to ask him for her sake to put away his past and take hold of the future. Walter loved his mother next to the girl who had jilted him, and she finally persuaded him to let her hang the pictures he worshiped in an upper room, receiving a promise from him that he would visit it but once a month.

During the first half year after the removal of his idols Walter waited impatiently for the day of his visit to them to come round. During the second half year he was less impatient and at the end of twelve months told his mother that she was right—it would be better that he should cease to dwell on that which was dead to him. He would visit his pictures no more.

Walter at this time made another discovery—that if he could not make an artist of himself he could succeed at nothing. He resumed his painting and instead of confining himself to one model chose different ones. In the case of all of them he was uninfluenced by love. From the moment of this second start he met with instant success. Every picture he painted was sold as soon as offered to the public, and it was not long before he achieved a reputation which brought him high prices.

Walter's mother made a match for him with a young lady of his own class. She was not a beauty, but a very estimable woman. Notwithstanding that her husband in marrying her had yielded to his mother's wishes—considering his heart broken forever—he soon came to love his wife devotedly. After his parents' death he removed with his family to the home they had occupied and where he had been born. One day his wife unlocked the gallery of his former idols and saw the walls covered with pictures of red headed girls all looking alike and all frights.

"Walter," she cried, "come up here!"

Walter obeyed the summons and joined his wife in the gallery of pictures of his former love.

"What are these?" asked his wife. "They all seem to be portraits of the same person."

Walter for the first time, looking at the pictures he had made using Martha Gibbs for his model, saw a row of hideous faces. His wife saw an expression on his face of a sort of shame he was unable to control.

"They are my earliest productions," he said. "Please have them removed. I am too busy to attend to the matter myself."

That was the final vanishment of the artist's dream.

FARM AND GARDEN.

It is now claimed that two-thirds of the value of alfalfa is in the leaves.

France has fixed the minimum price for oats at $2.53 and $2.45 per 100 lbs.

If the ground for alfalfa is plowed now and harrowed with the acme harrow after every rain—say three or four days after—there will be no weed seed left alive by August 15th, and the alfalfa will have the ground to itself.

A New Jersey man is said to protect his cherries from the birds with a burglar alarm. He stretches lines from his house to the tree, and hangs sleighbells in the branches. When a bird alights on the lines it rings the bells, and the birds go off in alarm.

SHE COULD MAKE MORE.

It was at the piano. Mother's darling firmly refused to do her practice. 'What a naughty little girl you are!' chided the mother. 'Don't care!' grumbled the youngster, as she gave the piano a kick. 'Now, treasure, you shall have a penny if you'll do your exercises nicely,' urged mamma. 'Shan't,' retorted treasure, getting off the piano-stool. 'I can make more than that taking castor-oil.'"

There Before she Came.—The new maid was entirely a war time makeshift and the mistress bore with her patiently at first. But on the third day she placed a very unclean dinner plate on the table, and patience broke down. "Really, Mary, you might at least, see that the plates are clean." "Well, mum," Mary rejoined, "I owns to them thumb marks, but that dried mustard was there afore I came."

DERBY RECRUIT WHO WANTED PROMOTION

Becoming Lance-Corporal Meant Serving Everybody and Being Very Perfect as Soldier.

A Derby recruit writes as follows of his early experiences in army life: It was a maxim of the great Napoleon that every private soldier carries a field-marshal's baton in his knapsack. If that was true of the French army over a hundred years ago it is trebly true to-day of the British army. Never in our military history have the chances of promotion been so numerous and ever-present as they are nowadays; the magnitude of the army and the class of men who have flocked to the colors provide the openings and the men to fill them. When I joined the army my mind was fully made up to earn promotion as quickly as possible. Promotion meant more responsibility, and in some respects harder work, but, on the other hand, it meant more money and more comforts and privileges. Besides, there was the spur of personal pride in "getting on." I lost no time in seeking out my friend, himself a corporal, telling him of my determination.

How To Get On

"Well, the best thing you can do," he laughed, "is to see that you're a little smarter all-round than the smartest man in your platoon. You'll be surprised how easy it will be to beat him if your heart's in doing so, and if he isn't up to the same game himself. If he is, both of you will perhaps get picked out for a stripe."

Then he told me some material ways in which I could make certain of pleasing "the sergeant," and through him the officers. These were the chief ones: Obey all orders unhesitatingly; keep yourself, your uniform, your buttons, and your kit generally clean and bright; be in good time for every parade and every call; salute those entitled to be saluted punctiliously; keep all rules both in the letter and the spirit; show your self keen on your work. Summed up, it merely amounts to doing one's job properly.

My "first stripe," denoting the rank of lance-corporal, or "lance-jack," as it is sometimes called, came to me a week ago. The jump from private to lance-corporal is a sort of necessary evil, leading, with luck, to higher things. The position is a severe test of soldierly spirit and fitness. A lance-corporal is a private with a lot of extra work, a little authority, and no extra pay.

Harder Work

He has to work tremendously hard, doing all sorts of odd jobs and "running errands" for those in higher authority in his platoon or company, and unless he is cheerfully determined to "stick it" he might just as well gracefully refuse the stripe at the beginning. Nobody likes being a lance-corporal, and many who try the experiment "revert to private at their own request," but the work has to be done, and it is worth while to those who mean to see it through.

There is this consolation about it: no lance-corporal who can prove his worth nowadays is kept in the position for long. In the old days, before the war, a man might go on in the rank for months—years, even—but now the next step up to corporal, at 32 cents a day, is not very long delayed. There have been some remarkable rises in the ranks in the new armies. I know one man who joined as a private and was a major within a year; another rose to be quartermaster-sergeant within six months.

JAPAN'S SINGING GIRLS

Custom of Eastern Allies Might Well Become General

Our Far Eastern allies, the Japanese, have many charming customs. One, which might very well be copied, has to do with Japanese girls. Every little girl in Japan is taught two things—one, how to arrange flowers most effectively; and the other, to play the guitar. Whenever you enter a Japanese home you will hear the tinkling of the guitar from some room or other.

So fond are our allies of music, indeed, that they rarely take a meal in their own homes without someone playing to them. If it is not one of the little daughters of the family who plays, it is a hired "singing girl," who comes in for the time being. These singing girls are to be found everywhere in Japan, and their services are always in great demand. While the family are eating she chants or sings a song of flowers, or relates one of the many legends of the East, all the time sounding her guitar.

Low spirits, discouragement, the blues usually result from a tired brain and exhausted nervous system. Start the upbuilding process to-day by administering the use of the greatest of nerve restoratives.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

RULES FOR BOY CAMPERS.

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

In the spring the young man's fancy, if he be in his teens, lightly turns to thoughts of camping out.

It's a good thing. Would that all human creatures, some time in the summer, went to the woods, and lived in tents, and got back to earth, air, fire, and water, the four oldest friends and best doctors of mankind.

Just to help along, it may be well to set down a few hints to keep in mind when camping.

The best all around rule, and I address myself especially to boys, is "Safety First." It might also be added, "Safety Second" and "Safety Third." Don't take fool chances. Accidents will happen, but they love to happen to the thoughtless.

Living outdoors is an art. You have to learn it. Be teachable.

The fun of outdoor life is of the overcoming kind, not the pampering kind. Endure hardship like a sport. Don't complain. Have the soldier spirit. Don't look for softness and self-indulgence, but for adventure with courage.

Pay attention to sanitation, especially the disposal of garbage and offal.

Find good water, and make sure that it is pure.

Get wholesome food. Be careful of it. Do not expose it to the flies. Flies are your deadliest enemy.

Pitch your camp where the drainage is good, preferably on candy soil and on high ground.

Do not camp in thick woods. It is usually damp there, and the mosquitoes are bad. Have partial shade, but let there be open space enough around the tent so that the wind will drive away the insects.

Do not camp near swamps or stagnant water, and keep out of rank grass.

Be liberal and enthusiastic with soap and water. Clean your hands thoroughly when you are in from your trap and through with your labours.

Keep your cooking utensils scoured and neat. Do not let remnants of food or grease remain in them.

Keep sugar, coffee, and cereals in a dry place. Do not let them get musty.

Get ice, and have an ice-box if you can. If not, keep your perishable foodstuffs in cool running water.

Do not scatter fruit peelings or scraps of food about. Have a receptacle for them, well covered from the flies, and empty it every day.

Remember that the sun is the best health giver, Sun your clothes, your food boxes, your tent, yourselves.

Good eating is essential. But cooking is an art, also a natural gift. Sometimes so much time is taken up by cooking and dish washing that the other and more important camp joys are infringed upon. If convenient it pays to have some one hired and competent to do the cooking.

Use cots, if possible. They keep the bedclothes drier, and are every way more satisfactory than sleeping on the ground.

Take along some rubber blankets, or at least oilcloth, to guard against moisture.

Keep cheerful. Don't find fault. Overlook unpleasant things. Don't quarrel.

A TRAITOROUS WORD.

Mr. Eden Phillpotts writes as follows to The London Times: The word 'peace' is becoming a dangerous commonplace in our newspapers and on our lips. A tolerance of the idea is being created — unconsciously on our part, but with very deliberate calculation by those who fly the love. Throw enough mud, and some sticks; prate enough of peace, and a certain false presentiment of its approach will creep, like a virus, through our spirits, blunt the edge of endeavour, and create a mistaken impression that we may soon draw breath and draw rein. This suggestion Germany seeks to create, and one marks the extent of her success. The bare hint of neutral intervention should be cried down with trumpet the truism concluding your leader cannot be too prominently proclaimed; that those will make the peace who win the war. Germany has reached the psychological moment when she stands at the top of her achievement. She is as near victory as ever she can hope to be, and therfore peace is appropriate to her councils. For the Allies victory is still beneath the horizon, and any suggestion of peace argues German terms, not ours. The word in our mouth is traitorous at present, and should be banned accordingly.

Let's take a stand and insist that no more species of birds become extinct.

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1915.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

ALLIES TO FIRE 'AT SIGHT' ON DEUTSCHLAND

WASHINGTON, July 15.—British naval vessels will fire upon the German submarine liner Deutschland "at sight." It will be treated as a warship regardless of any ruling the United States Government may make.

If the Deutschland is destroyed by a British warship, the State Department will make no inquiries.

These facts were made plain at the British Embassy and at the State Department.

The British and French Embassies protested to the State Department against this Government's action in permitting the Deutschland to enter an American port.

Call Deutschland Warship.

They protested also against permitting the Deutschland to take on provisions.

They declared to the State Department that the Deutschland is a warship and therefore is entitled to none of the rights enjoyed by a peaceable merchantman.

At the British Embassy the position of the British Government was outlined as follows:

In view of the methods of the submarine warfare employed by Germany in the present war, the Deutschland must be considered as a war vessel.

No enemy vessel moving under the water can be considered by Great Britain as anything but a warship, and it will be treated accordingly.

It would be absurd to treat a submarine vessel any other way. If an allied soldier should see a helmet behind a hedge, the presumption would be that under the helmet was a German soldier with a rifle in his hands and the allied soldier would take a shot at him.

The British—and the allied—view is that submarine vessels ought not to be permitted to take on supplies at all in a neutral port.

Norway Bars U-Boats.

Norway and Sweden adopted a rule during this war prohibiting access to their jurisdictions of belligerent submarine vessels and aeroplanes.

The movements of a submarine vessel may be quite invisible, and its actions cannot be controlled as can those of an ordinary vessel.

It can dive quickly, and there would be every reason for believing that one seen at sea was a warship.

The submarine is essentially a war vessel, and to treat it otherwise would be to invite disaster.

The allied embassies in Washington were desirous of "dissipating the sentiment that the allied governments regarded the Deutschland as a peaceable merchant ship," it was declared at the British Embassy.

"We have communicated our point of view to the United States Government," an Embassy official said. "It is incorrect to say that we are not protesting and are letting the thing slide by. All the allied governments share the British view."

Italy Also to Protest.

It was said another formal protest against the admission of the Deutschland to an American port will be presented to the State Department by the Italian Government.

The British protest to the State Department means that the right of visit and search and warning will be denied to the Deutschland, to the Bremen and to all other German submarine merchantmen. It will make no difference, from the British point of view, whether or not the submarine liner carries mails and passengers.

HOW GILBERT ESCAPED FROM SWISS PRISON

The Paris correspondent of the New York Sun sends the following account of the escape of Gilbert, the French aviator, who was interned in Switzerland:

Forced to descend in Switzerland, owing to his motor failing, Gilbert was interned. His first attempt to escape was successful, but the French government handed him back to the Swiss authorities, because the letter in which Gilbert took back his pledge not to try to escape, had not reached the authorities in sufficient time, although it had been posted early enough.

A second attempt was much more short lived, as the aviator was recognized on a train before getting out of the country, and once more made a prisoner, with greatly increased precautions to prevent another attempt.

The third attempt involves a story that "out movies" the movies. At the back of it are Gilbert's fellow townsmen from the Auvergne province, the manufacturer of the motor that Gilbert used on his aeroplane and a Paris newspaper with the largest circulation in the world.

GILBERT CLOSELY WATCHED.

Gilbert was imprisoned in the third story of a large barracks in Zurich, and was guarded night and day by special guards. One day a Frenchman arrived on the scene, and M. Robere-Melard, ostensibly a dealer in wool, but really a general commission agent, who has acted as a Sherlock Holmes on various occasions, especially since the war.

"It took me three months to arrange affairs," M. Melard relates, "for I met with several failures. The first thing I had to do was to inspire confidence in some one around Gilbert, who would allow me without being aware of it to get into close touch with the man whose escape I wished to aid. Such a man I found in Captain Strum, who was charged with watching over the prisoners, and was inflexible in his duties.

"I made no secret of being a friend of Gilbert's, but I explained that although I was glad to see him again, I had come to Switzerland on business. To convince the captain I talked to him and showed him heavy orders I had received in accordance with orders received from various aviation and other firms in France. I ordered all sorts of things, one day buying several cords of wood. All these orders started, but somehow or other some combination prevented delivery and in the end few went through.

ESCAPE CLEVERLY CONTRIVED.

"I soon found Capt. Sturm's weak point. It was gastronomical. We lunched together, we had dinner and supper together and the fare was always so good that he soon allowed me to see the prisoner almost daily. Before the captain we talked about the weather and such exciting topics, but we wrote each other dozens of little notes which we used to slip under the table as we raised our glasses to the captain's health.

"That lasted three whole months, by which time Sturm and I were inseparable and Gilbert and I had formed our plans.

"A certain person was to pass in front of the barracks at 7:30 p.m. If he lit his cigarette twice in front of the railing between the barracks and the police station, the attempt was to be made that night, but if he blew his nose ostentatiously it meant that the attempt was to be postponed. Gilbert knew that he could escape by a ventilation shaft that passed through the lavatory on his landing.

"The guards at his door were changed each night at 2 a.m. The plan was to go to the washroom at 1:50 a.m and hope that the departing guards would fail to notify the newcomers of his absence. On Monday and Tuesday nights the relieving sentries were informed but on Wednesday night this duty was overlooked. Gilbert dressed in his uniform, let himself slip down the narrow ventilating shaft into the ground floor, from which he escaped by a key that I had provided. I should explain that when everything had been arranged I said good bye to Capt. Strum and left for France just before the escape was tried. Gilbert climbed the wall around the barracks and found civilian clothes in the automobile waiting for him at the point arranged.'

HIDDEN FOR SIX DAYS.

Gilbert's friend, Arnold Bontemps, the newspaperman who worked his first escape, then took charge of the proceedings. It was hopeless to think of smuggling Gilbert out of the country at once, however well he might be disguished. The hue and cry would be too strong.

"I took him to a safe place where we were sure the police would never think of coming, just because the apartment was open to any visitor," said Melard.

"This operation took fifteen minutes and five minutes later the alarm was given. Gilbert was stowed away in a closet, of which he could leave the door ajar, closing it on the least sound. At night only he could take some rest. There he remained for six days to let the storm roll by. French papers announced his arrival in Paris, declaring that he had been seen by friends, and this lulled suspicion in Switzerland.

"I returned to Zurich with a disguise for him, false beard, spectacles, heavy shoes, etc., and Gilbert took the train, having bought a return ticket for Bienne. There we walked some miles towards Geneva, when an automobile met us, which tooted its horn three times; in a second we were inside, and taking a side road to avoid the high road, reached a little wood near Geneva where we received the latest news about the direction police activities were taking.

"We decided to start the next day, which was ascension day, which seemed appropriate for an aviator. The last night was passed in a village near Geneva and after some hours walking next morning we saw the frontier, the railroad and the road from Annemasse to Beilgarde. This was the point we had chosen for crossing the line.

"The actual crossing proved easy. The Swiss guard happened to be some yards away and Gilbert took to his legs and got into France before the guard reached him."

The French guard, however, challenged him, and the only "papers" Gilbert could show were his Legion of Honor Cross, his military medal and his war cross. When he gave his name the brave guard accepted these decorations as proof of identity, and telephoned his superior officers who brought an automobile for Gilbert's use.

A triumphant welcome met him at Lyons, where he was able to borrow an aviator officer's uniform. A still more enthusiastic welcome awaited him at Paris, where the Minister of War congratulated him and gave him a permission so that he could take a short rest before resuming his place at the front. Gilbert needed some rest, as in addition to his irksome life as a prisoner, he had to thin himself down considerably in order to be sure of passing down the ventilation shaft.

BETTER IF HE HAD NOT SPOKEN

A rather pompous naval captain had been compelled to await the coming of a new naval cadet. After the usual introduction, he remarked: 'Well, youngster, the old story, I suppose—the fool of the family sent to us!" "Oh, no, sir!" rejoined the youth, "that's all been altered since your day."

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription

This prescription or the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

AMONG THE PRETTIEST

The editor of the local weekly was in a towering rage. "Send Mr. Scribbler to me immediately!" he yelled to the office boy. Mr. Scribbler entered the august presence sernly conscious that he was innocent of any crime, either editorial or literary. "See here," said the editor, "you're the idiot who reported that recruiting ball, aren't you? Well," and he pointed indignantly to the printed page, "just look what you've written. 'Among the prettiest girls was Colonel Oldnut.' He's a man, isn't he, you fathead?" "He may be," replied Scribbler quietly, "but that's where he was."

GERMANS ARE FORCED BACK TO THIRD LINE

2000 PRISONERS TAKEN IN THE PAST 24 HOURS

Smashing British Blow Drives Germans Back to Their Third Line

General Haig Reports the Capture of 2,000 Prisoners in the Last Twenty-four Hours and a Total of 10,000 Captured Since the Offensive Began---"All is Well at the British Front" is the Report from the British Commander-in-Chief

NO IMPORTANT NEW ENGAGEMEMTS

LONDON, July 15.—(Special Cable)—The Germans at one point have been forced back to the third line of their defense under smashing British blows four miles behind their original front, Gen. Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon. "All is well at the British front," said the official statement. "We have pushed on from Fricourt to Mametz, capturing 2,000 prisoners in 24 hours. The total number of prisoners taken by the British since the beginning of the offensive is now ten thousand. In addition we have taken large quantities of material."

The reference to the advance made by the rear from Fricourt to Mametz emphasizes the gains made by the British in the fighting yesterday. The first and second British lines apparently have advanced well beyand Mametz with the third running through the wood where desperate fighting occurred. No important new engagements since the issuance of last night's official statement were claimed, nor were they expected. Unofficial despatches from the front had reported that heavy German counter attacks had slowed up the momentum of the new advance, though the British were maintaining the positions captured yesterday. The British encountered the most stubborn resistance after breaking through the German second line, and were met by steady sheets of machine gun fire in the district north of Longueval.

OUTBREAK IN GREECE MAY HAVE BEEN CAUSE

ROME, July 15.—Rome newspapers report that a violent anti-monarchial outbreak has occurred in Athens, and that the populace set fire to the Royal Palace.

Censored Athens despatches yesterday report that a careless cigarette smoker caused the fire that destroyed the summer palace of the Greek King in Tatoi Woods Thursday.

GERMANS RETREAT ON FRENCH FRONT

LONDON, July 15.—Special despatches from Paris this afternoon report that the Germans have retired on the French front adjoining the British to the Guillemont-Albert-Combles railway. The retreat was made necessary by the British advance.

Mecca Surrenders to Arab Rebels

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CAIRO, July 15.—The famous City of Mecca, the most holy place of the Mohammedan world, has surrendered to the Arabian rebels, according to despatches received here to-day. The Turkish garrison of 100 officers, 2,500 men, and 150 civil officials laid down their arms. The Grand Sheriff of Mecca, who exercises authority under the Sultan of Turkey, also surrendered. Mecca, the birthplace of Mohammed, lies east of the Red Sea, and about 800 miles southeast of Suez. The city has a population of about 60,000, and lies in a sandy valley enclosed by high hills. Recent reports from Cairo said that the rebel Arab tribes were approaching Mecca, and that the city's fall was imminent.

Member of Parliament is Under Arrest

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—Laurence Ginnell, Irish member of Parliament, who was arrested on the charge of violating the Defense of the Realm Act, was remanded for trial on July 26, when he was arraigned in Bow Street Police Court to-day. Ginnell was arrested on the orders of General Lloyd. It was alleged that he visited a detention camp at Knutsford under a false name and conversed in a suspicious manner with Irish rebel prisoners.

Berlin Admits the Successes of British

BERLIN, July 15.—"Despite severe losses the British succeded in penetrating our lines between Pozieres and Longueval, gaining ground and occupying Tronos Woods," said an official statement issued this afternoon.

MR. T. F. MATTHEWS LOSES FATHER

Mr. George Matthews, Founder of Well Known Firm, Died Yesterday in Lindsay

LINDSAY, July 14.—Mr. George Matthews, of Lindsay, one of the best known and most highly respected men of this part of the country, passed away to-day in his 83nd year. Mr. Matthews was born in Warwickshire, England, in 1834, and came to Canada in 1851. In 1860 he settled in Lindsay, and has been a resident of this town since that date. He married Miss Ann Smithson, daughter of William Smithson, of Peterborough County, who survives him with five sons and four daughters. Capt. A. J. Matthews, 27th Regiment, Winnipeg, who was killed in action in Flanders in February last, was the sixth son. Surviving sons are: William E., Ottawa; George S., Brantford; T. Frank, Peterborough; R. C. (R. C. Matthews Co.), Toronto, and Albert, Montreal. The daughters are: Mrs. Dr. N. Wolverton, Nelson, B.C.; Mrs. J. P. Ryley, Lindsay; Mrs. Rev. Harold Stewart, Corning, N.Y., and Mrs. Arthur Stewart, Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. Matthews was a man of broad and generous sympathies and interested in church and charitable work, especially in home missionary endeavours of the Baptist denomination. While not an active participant in politics he was nevertheless one of the influential men of the Conservative party in this district, but modestly declined repeated invitations to party honours. He was a personal friend of the late Sir John A. Macdonald. Mr. Matthews was well known as the founder of the business of Matthews-Blackwell, Limited, with large packing plants in Montreal, Toronto, Hull, Peterborough, and Brantford.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon with a private service at his late residence at 2.30 o'clock, and a public service in the Baptist Church at 3 o'clock.

IT WAS PRIVATE GEO. SMITH WHO DIED AT KINGSTON

First Report That Lance-Corp. Percy Smith Had Died Was Case of Mistaken Identity—Dead Soldier Lived on Rogers St.

FUNERAL THIS AFTERNOON

The report in the Examiner last night that Lance Corp. Percy Smith, of the 93rd Battalion, had died in the Kingston Military Hospital was a case of mistaken identity. It was not Lance Corp. Smith, but Pte. George Smith, of 489 Rogers street, who passed away, although this was not learned until last evening. The message from Kingston merely stated that a member of the 93rd Battalion named Smith had died in hospital there. There were twelve Smiths in the 93rd, but as it was known here that Lance Corp. Percy Smith had been ill in hospital for some time it was the natural assumption among his friends and acquaintances here that his illness had resulted fatally. The mistake was not discovered until the arrival of Pte. Smith's body on the 5.30 train last evening.

Pte. Geo. Smith enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion last winter, and before joining the colours was employed by the Quaker Oats Company. His wife and two children survive him, residing at 489 Rogers street. Pte. Smith was born in England, but had lived in Peterborough for a number of years. A brother, Thos. Smith, resides in Cavan and a sister, Mrs. Joseph Morton, also lives in the same township.

The funeral took place this afternoon from the family residence, Rogers street, to Cavan. The pallbearers consisted of a number of members of the 74th Battery and other units, and the funeral procession through the city was headed by the band of the 57th Regiment. The military escort went out to Cavan with the body, cars having been very kindly provided by Mr. W. H. Bradburn and Dr. Pulkinghorn.

A Message From Mr. C.E. Coleman

Doing Our Duty and a Good Business—Some People are Only Doing a Good Business

Mr. C. E. Coleman, the George Street caterer and confectioner, who left to-day for Woolwich, England, wishes to take this opportunity of thanking his patrons, and looks with confidence to them for a further portion of their patronage. Mr. Coleman has made every arrangement that can be made to assure you a continuation of the good service and the same high-class quality of goods as they have always tried to give in the past. The business will be in charge of Mr. Edmund Coleman during the absence of his brother. Mr. Coleman will be in charge of the business at 426 George Street, while Mr. Walter Hunt will have charge of the bakeshop.

Mr. Hunt has been in charge of the bakeshop here for nearly a year. Before coming to Coleman Brothers, he was for nearly six years headbaker for Mr. Potvin. He has also had considerable experience in Toronto and several of the best firms in the Old Country. By doing this Mr. Coleman can assure the public of the goods and attention and feel confident that the public of Peterborough will try and help us to do our duty. Thanking you again, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

DEPUTATION SEES MINISTER OF MILITIA ABOUT NEW BATTALION

Peterborough Citizens in Lindsay To-day to Urge Authorization of a New Unit With Lt.-Col. Walker as Commanding Officer---Recruiting Leagues Meet at Kingston to Discuss Enlistment Problem---To-day's General Military News

A deputation composed of members of the City and County Councils and augmented by a representative body of citizens, are in Lindsay to-day for the express purpose of interviewing Major- General Sir Sam Hughes respecting Peterborough's claim for military recognition in the form of authorization for another battalion with Lieut.-Col. Duncan Walker as Officer Commanding. Among those who will be present are the following: Lieut.Col. Arthur Stevenson, Mr. James Kendry, Mr. R. B. Rogers, Mr. A. E. Coulthard, Mr. D. O'Connell, Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. A. H. Stratton, Mr. W. G. Morrow, Mr. R. J. Soden, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, Mr. W. H. Buller, His Worship Mayor Duffus, and also representatives of the City and County Councils.

A largely signed petition will be presented to the Minister of Militia setting forth Peterborough's claim for another Battalion. The unit to be recruited in the city and county, and as much outside territory as the authorities may see fit to assign. At a meeting during the week it was pointed out that the 109th Battalion of Lindsay, went as far west as Chapleau on the Lake Superior shore. A well known Peterborough citizen, who was travelling west at the time met an officer from Lindsay in the neighbourhood named.

In other words Sir Sam Hughes will be advised that Peterborough City and County stands ready to recruit another battalion with Lieut.-Col. Walker as Officer Commanding.

Sir Sam Hughes is in Lindsay to-day in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the new Dominion Arsenal.

BARRIEFIELD, July 15.—Lieut. LeMessiere, of the Canadian Gymnastics Corps, arrived in camp on Wednesday, and left on Thursday for Ottawa. He made an inspection of the physical training and bayonet fighting classes at the camp, and was very much pleased with the splendid progress being made by Lieut. J. Bews in his work of carrying on the instruction for the camp.

Lieut. LeMessiere is on the staff of the corps, and was adjutant of the school conducted at Montreal a short while ago, when among others a number from the 146th Battalion took the course.

The bayonet fighting and physical training instructors of each battalion are now planning to have trenches dug near their battalions, so that work of instructing the battalion in this important branch of the work may be done to better advantage. Only one section of trench is planned similar to that used at the front, for each unit. This should prove to be sufficient to give the soldiers a general idea of what they are expected to learn.

Pte. Arthur Pritchard, who is reported a prisoner of war, is a brother of Mr. John Pritchard, 703 Harvey street. He enlisted last August with his other brother, Albert Pritchard, in the 8th Mounted Rifles, and is now in Germany. Pte. Albert Pritchard is in England invalided from France, where he had been with the Princess Pats. He transferred from the 8th Mounted Rifles to the famous Pats.

Five Peterborough men have already signed on here for the 236th Forestry Battalion, and it is expected that this number will be largely augmented before the draft leaves for Ottawa next Wednesday. Any information in regard to the work of the battalion may be secured at the recruiting office from Sergt. Stanley

Gunner McLeish is recruiting in Peterborough just now for the new draft for the Cobourg Heavy Battery. A number of Peterborough men have gone overseas in different drafts from this battery and it is thought that the new draft will attract other local men who want to get overseas shortly.

Gunner Spicer of the Cobourg Heavy Battery, is home on week-end leave.

Capt. Ross of the 236th Forestry Battalion, was in the city a short time last night and went on to Ottawa with a bunch of recruits for the battalion.

Among the floral tributes sent to the home of Pte. Geo. Smith, of the 93rd Battalion, who died at Kingston on Thursday was a handsome wreath from the boys of the local recruiting office, including representatives of the 74th Battery, Cobourg Heavy Battery and the Forestry Battalion.

Pte. Chas. Cook of the Army Service Corps, Kingston, is home on leave.

A number of Peterborough members of the 236th Battalion, Bowmanville, are spending week end leaves in the city.

Kingston, July 15.—This afternoon a conference is being held in the City Hall in the interests of recruiting for this district. Lieut.-Col. C. G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer, and Lieut.-Col. Mulloy, addressed the delegates and spoke of the need of men and the methods that should be used in securing them. The delegates here from outside points are: Judge McDonald, and Wm. Shearer, Brockville, Lieut. W. G. Garrett, 72nd Battery; Lieut. A. H. Mullen, 73rd battery; Lt. E. D. Hymdman, "C" Battery, R.C. H.A., Major McKinnon, Heavy Battery, Cobourg; H. Smyd, J. Elliott, and J. Herrity, Belleville; Capt. Slack 235th battalion, Bowmanville; Rev. E. D. Sexsmith, Picton; W. J. Calman, Picton; Col. Bedell, and Major Kyle, 156th Battalion; Col. Adams and Col. Putnam, 155th battalion; Capt. Filson, Queen's Field Hospital; Major A. A. Canard, 230th battalion, Ottawa; Lieut. Garland, Signalling Instructor, Ottawa; J. H. Mitchell, Alexandria; Mayor Duffus, R. B. Rogers and J. A. Aylmer, of Peterborough.

BARRIEFIELD, July 15.—With 5,000 soldiers gathered together in one camp as at Barriefield, there is an enormous number of letters and papers sent to their homes every day. The branch post office at the camp is as busy as many post offices of municipalities throughout the country. There are only four on the staff now, including Lieut. Crochietiere, who is in charge, Ptes. Dumoulin, Montreal, and Pte. E. Hupp, Ottawa, who were on the staff, have been transferred to Petawawa Camp, and the curtailed staff are kept quite busy.

"It seems that the soldiers enlist to write letters," said one officer on Thursday, and from the excessive number of letters and papers that go through the mail this statement would seem right. One noticeable feature is the number of men who send papers home to their friends in order that they may learn all that is going on at the camp.

During the month of June there were $2,283.90 of stamps sold to the soldiers at Barriefield camp. There were, in addition, 391 money orders disposed of, totalling $6,764.96, which shows the amount of money that the soldiers send to their homes. Postal notes sold amounted to $1,172.71 for a total of 233 notes.

The registered mail due primarily to the number of registered letters sent by the paymasters when sending out the assigned pay cheques brought the number of registered articles that passed through the office up to 4,716, with 816 being delivered.

It is estimated that fully 8,000 letters and parcels pass through this branch office every day, an equal number coming in from the homes of the boys and being sent from the camp to those homes.

KINGSTON, July 15.—Yesterday afternoon the storm king was rampant for the first time during this camp. We have had rains, drizzling rains, driving rains, continual rains, but nothing like the torrents of yesterday afternoon. Out of his mansions in the north, the storm king came suddenly, and filled with fury His coming was heralded by the loud cannonading of celestial artillery, and his presence was preceded by a pyrotechnic display that would have gratified Faust and pleased the evil genius with whom he made his awful compact. Over the hills and the tree tops the storm king tore until he reached the camp, and there, over the tented city he seemed to reach the climax of his anger. Tents were torn into shreds, poles were bent like whips, trees bowed down like vassals before some mighty monarch, and the whole camp was wrapped in the

LINDSAY'S RED LETTER DAY

Corner Stone of New Government Arsenal is Laid This Afternoon By the Minister of Militia

BIG CROWD THERE

Special to The Examiner:

LINDSAY, Ont., July 15.—The rolling into town of Sir Sam Hughes' private car, "Roleen," was the signal for the commencement of a red letter day in the history of Lindsay. It was the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of the new government arsenal No. 2. When the Minister of Militia arrived he found the town had been decorated during the night with flags and bunting in profusion. Sir Sam is given the entire credit for landing this plum for Lindsay and it is estimated that when the arsenal is in running order that between 1,500 and 2,000 hands will be employed. Houses are expected to grow like mushrooms in a night and of late Lindsay has experienced a taste of a western boom in lands. The function proper started this morning when the reception committee commenced to meet trains bearing incoming prominent visitors, including some cabinet ministers. The monster parade formed at the foot of Main street at 2 o'clock this afternoon and was headed by the brass band of the 109th battalion, commonly known as "Sam Hughes' pets." Mayor McLean and representatives of the town council took the lead with the Minister of Militia and staff, accompannied by Lady Hughes and party following in cars. Next came Mr. John Carew, M.P.P., Dr. Mason, M.P.P., Hon. Col. Rev. Dr. Johnson of Montreal, and other prominent citizens, representatives of the Bar, Board of Trade, etc. Mr. P. J. Breen acted as marshall for the big parade and was assisted by Alderman Irvine. Arriving at the arsenal grounds preparations had been made and Sir Sam and party mounted an improvised platform. Two new flags were unfurled to the breeze and the important ceremony was launched. Mr. Dan Cinnamon acted in the capacity of chairman, and following the preliminary handshakes Sir Sam was presented with a beautifully engraved silver trowel by the citizens of Lindsay with which to lay the corner stone.

Verdict Of $595 Against The Tullys

The civil action of Glover against Tully in the County Court, which has been before His Honour Judge Huycke for the past two days, was completed last night at eight o'clock, when the jury, after two hours' deliberation, brought in a verdict of $595 in favour of the plaintiffs. The jury awarded $95 to the father to be used in defraying the expenses of the doctor as a result of the ill treatment of the girl during the five weeks she spent in the Tully home. $500 were awarded to the little girl, Evelyn Glover, which sum is to be reserved for her until she is of age. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the plaintiffs and G. N. Gordon for the defendants.

COOP & LENTS' SHOWS HERE JULY 20TH

When the monster Coup and Lent shows exhibit in Peterborough, Thursday, July 20th, opportunity will be afforded local circus-goers of witnessing for the first time in this city many of the most famous features of the sawdust rings. Chief reference is here made to the principal acrobatic riders of the bareback, leaping horses —"the Riding Davenports," and the "Orrin Hollis Troupe." The members of both of these families may be said to have been born under the "hite tops." Their ancestors for two generations have vied with each other for supremacy of the circus world, as the present families have fought each the other's fame. In presenting both these peerless riding displays under the same tent, Coup and Lent may well claim the "coup de maitre" of the big combines this season.

SATURDAY, JULY 15TH, 1916.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Why all this agitation about sharks around the bathing resorts on the American coast? Sharks around a summer resort are surely not a novelty.

With a new government arsenal and Sir Sam Hughes, Lindsay should know all there is to know about explosives. Any one who has heard Sir Sam explode at an inspection would back him against any "Beautiful Bertha" on the western front.

People are rather unreasonable. The great majority signed a petition in favour of a dry Ontario. Now the soldiers at Borden Camp are kicking because a few square miles of the province are too dry.

However, conditions at Borden seem to be improving. Soon the only squeal will be from Capt. McClellan's hogs.

PETTY PARTIZANS.

The Toronto Telegram devotes a column to a discussion of the effect upon the election possibilities of Sir Sam Hughes and those of its Conservative contemporaries who persist in supporting him. Almost the whole column is devoted to a consideration of Sir Sam Hughes and his relation to votes for the Conservative party. Could anything be more sordid in the present crisis than this dwelling on the effect of the Minister of Militia's actions on the next election?

The people of Canada, Conservative and Liberals alike, are not caring about what Sir Sam Hughes does to the Conservative party in the next election, as long as he directs Canada's part in the war properly. The great majority of Canadian voters don't give a hoot whether Sir Sam Hughes is a source of strength or weakness to Sir Robert Borden's government as far as its chances of returning to power are concerned.

Just now they care only whether he is a source of strength or weakness in the conduct of the war. The Toronto Telegram seems to place the fate of the Borden government before the fate of the country in the war. It is disgusting.—Ottawa Free Press.

IS THE CAT DOOMED?

One of the first results of the epidemic of infantile paralysis in New York has been the destruction of dogs and cats—particularly cats. While medical science is divided on the question of animals as carriers of the infantile paralysis germ, there are many physicians who contend that they are—the majority of those who take this view holding that the cat is a menace. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is now collecting and destroying cats and dogs at the rate of 1,500 a day, and an official of the society declares that if the present conditions continue for any length of time there will not be a dog or cat left in New York.

Most people seem absolutely convinced that these household pets are the media for carrying disease-germs from house to house, or they would never part with them. We read that: "It is not an unusual sight to witness the entire family, mother and children, and often the men folk, accompanying the purring cat or the barking dog to the society's waggon. Women and children break down and weep when we drive away." Dogs have long been regarded as more a nuisance than otherwise in cities, where there is no outlet for their energies but to roam the streets in idleness. Modern house construction has long since removed the excuse for keeping cats to catch mice. Only the sentiment attaching to these pets remains. Only let the conviction become widespread that deadly disease is traceable to them and their doom is sealed.—Montreal Herald.

THE GREAT CAUSE.

In a letter to the New York Tribune Winston Churchill emphasizes a truth which has been too much ignored and which needs to be emphasized. It is that in the great war two opposite and irreconcilable systems of government are in the balance. The Teutonic empires stand for the principle of military autocracy in government; the entente allies stand for parliamentary government and democratic institutions. Victory for the Teutonic empires would mean victory for the principle of government for which they stand. Victory for the entente allies would mean victory for the principles and institutions which they represent.

If Germany wins the war, as a result of her victory her principles and methods would be imitated. Nothing succeeds like success, and German success would be interpreted as an illustration of the biological law of the survival of the fittest. The German system of government would be generally regarded as the one which is fittest to survive, the one best adapted to withstand the sudden shocks and the wear and tear of competition. As a result, democratic institutions would be discredited, there would be a drift of world-sentiment towards centralization of power, autocratic methods, and militarism. The ambition of all nations would be to be better armed and prepared for war than their neighbours. The growth of international amity and co-operation would be checked, and there would be a revival of national egotism and the cynical German spirit which regards any and all crimes committed in the national cause as justifiable and even praiseworthy.

It is to prevent a reversion to this state of things that the entente allies are fighting. That is the Great Cause, even if it must be admitted that each of the allied nations is fighting primarily for its own independence and freedom.—Hamilton Herald.

IMITATIONS.

What is an hon. colonel, asks a reader?

The Toronto Star and Windsor Record battled over the question for some time, arguing to a breakaway as to whether "hon." meant "honorable" or "honorary." The case of Hon. Col. J. Wesley Allison coming to mind they decided that "hon." meant honorary.

If we were asked for a real definition we should say that an Hon. Col. is a colonel who is not a colonel. He doesn't know why he is a colonel, and no one else does. Therefore he is not a genuine colonel like the colonels at the front or the colonels training battalions at home. Therefore it might be only just and fair to call them "Imitation Colonels."

If honorary colonels were some sort of eatables the pure food inspectors would never let them get past without plastering the "adulterated" label on them.—London Advertiser.

Sergeant Describes How it Feels to Be Buried Alive

After a particularly sanguinary advance across an open meadow in single file (relates Sergeant Morlae of the French Foreign legion), in Montreal Herald, during which many of the sergeant's comrades were blown to pieces, the men came upon the section which had preceded them and whose members were now calmly seated in the long grass studying their approach. As we neared," says Morlae, "they shouted little pleasantries at us and congratulated us upon our speed."

"Why this unseemly haste?" one wants to know.

"You go to the devil!" answers Haeffle.

"Merci, mon ami!" retorts the first: "I have just come through his back kitchen."

On one occasion in a trench a shell which killed the man to whom Morlae was talking buried the sergeant under several cubic meters of earth. He describes vividly the sensation of approaching suffocation and his thoughts. Finally he lost consciousness.

Then somebody yelled, "Hell! He bit my finger." I could hear him.

"That's nothing," a voice I knew as Collette's. "Get the dirt out of his mouth."

Again a finger entered my throat, and I coughed spasmodically.

"Here," said Goubiron, "turn round and spit that dirt on your parapet. It all helps." The remark made me smile.

As a final tableau, perhaps the following description of an advnce of the legion will serve. It has been frequently quoted:

As we marched forward toward our goal, huge geysers of dust spouted into the air, rising behind our backs from the rows of "75s" supporting us. In front the fire-curtain outlined the whole length of the enemy's line with a neatness and accuracy that struck me with wonder, as the flames burst through the pall of smoke and dust around us. Above, all was blackness, but at its lower edge the curtain was fringed with red and green flames, marking the explosion of the shells directly over the ditch and parapet in front of us. The low flying clouds mingled with the smoke curtain, so that the whole brightness of the day was obscured. Out of the blackness fell a trickling rain of pieces of metal, lumps of earth, knapsacks, rifles, cartridges and fragments of human flesh. We went in steadily, nearer and nearer. Now we seemed very close to the wall of shells streaming from our own guns, curving just above us, and dropping into the trenches in front. The effect was terrific. I almost braced myself against the rocking of the earth, like a sailor's instinctive gait in stormy weather.

No "Same Place" Then.— "Herbert," said a school teacher, turning to a bright youngster, "can you tell me what lightning is?" "Yes, ma'am," was the ready reply of the boy. "Lightning is streaks of electricity." "Well, that may pass," said the teacher, encouragingly. "Now tell me why it is that lightning never strikes twice in the same place." "Because," answered Herbert, "after it hits once the same place ain't there any more."

MARSEILLES IS SECRET DOOR TO FRANCE

Hundreds of Thousands of Troops Pass Through to Fight the Germans

MARSEILLES, July 15.—This is the story of the secret door to France.

Through that secret door a large fraction of 2,000,000 soldiers have passed. Just how large a fraction is not known.

It made possible the concentration of British troops on the 99-mile battle line in France to an extent unknown except to the comparatively few in the secret.

Germany would have paid any price for the secrets of that door. It has been one of the greatest mysteries of a war made up of mysteries.

Everyone knows that Marseilles is the southern base for British troops in France. Early in the war the Indian troops arrived there. A few weeks ago the Russians came. Not a week has passed in the 22 months the war has lasted that at least one detachment did not reach the port. A good share of them passed through the secret door. Not even Marseilles knew when they came or who they were, or when they left.

The Marseilles harbour is a magnificent one. Its mouth is guarded by forts and by an unresting fringe of torpedo boats and ships of war. Within are great basins to which access is impossible to the unauthorized civilian. Every gateway leading to the basins is guarded by soldiers. One rarely sees a small boat in the harbour. The venturesome boatman must be prepared to give a good account of himself.

Night after night British troopships have steamed quietly up the harbour, every light muffled, in the shadow of the dark hills. Arriving at the docks to which they had been assigned, they were tied up as quietly as though they had been so many hill ponies. On their decks British troops had been standing perhaps for ours, in full marching kit. The moment the gangplank was lowered they filed off. Last of all came the guns and the baggage waggons and the equipment.

"Never a light was shown on the dock," said one who knew. "Orders were given in low voices. The men stumbled on each other's heels as they tramped toward the secret door."

That door led into a great train shed. As the first soldier put foot to the dock the first train backed into the closed and guarded shed. The ranks passed through the door in silence. The officers in command knew precisely what cars they were to take with their men. There was no noise, no confusion, no delay. As each train was filled it moved out of the station. They ran upon as close a schedule as the Empire State Express itself. The train engineers did not whistle for signals and the curtains of the car windows were drawn tight. By the next night the soldiers were at the front, having seen nothing of Marseilles.

Not every consignment of soldiers followed the policy of extreme secrecy, of course. The rest camps about Marseilles are so vast in extent that it is estimated that they never contain fewer than 25,000 soldiers. This includes the military police, the men in charge of the various camp offices, permissionnaires on leave, men on the last tour of convalescence before going back to the front and men on their way to and from England for various reasons. In addition are considerable detachments of troops which for one and another reason are here more or less permanently. These include some of the Indian troops, who were sent to the south of France to escape the bitter winter of the north.

"But it is estimated that not less than two million soldiers have passed through Marseilles, going and coming," said a man who knew. "Marseilles certainly did not suspect even the temporary presence of half of them."

The perfection of the British transportation system has been the admiration of all who have come in touch with it. Other items of the service may have broken down at times. The artillery was frankly bad during the transition period, when officers fresh from civilian life were put in charge of brand new guns and equally brand new soldiers. The British had to learn how to do almost everything in this war—learn from the bottom up—after the destruction of the original expeditionary force. But they did not have to learn how to handle the problem of transportation. That they knew.

"Our detachment was three weeks on boats and trains," said one officer, "and on the last day we caught the right tram at the right hour and the right place. We were on time to the minute."

That was not an unusual experience. It might be almost said that it was a common experience. So that the manner by which troops were taken to Flanders through the secret door at Marseilles has really nothing remarkable about it. What is the oddity, perhaps, is the fact that the secret was kept inviolate until a few days ago, by which time the need for secrecy had passed. The man who told the story is in a position to know practically everything of a transportation sort that goes on. Not a day passed that he did not meet British officers and aid them in some manner in their duties.

"But not a man peeped," said he. "No one told. Those who knew had been selected for their ability to keep their mouths shut. The others merely passed through."

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

New York, July 15.—Stock market opened with irregular price changes to-day. Maxwell Motors was up 1; Westinghouse ½, and Baldwin ½. Crucible lost 3-8, while most of the other war stocks showed fractional recoveries.

Bears caused a slight reaction during the first hours. Tennessee Copper made a new low at 22⅝, while Chandler Motors advanced 2½. Bethlehem Steel sold up 3½ to 466. Changes were very slight in the second hour. Market closed dull.

Poultry should be marketed undrawn and with heads and feet still on. When the carcass is full drawn and the head and feet removed it decomposes most rapidly.

The game of golf is thought to have been invented in ancient times by a lonely shepherd who had nothing better to do than to knock round stones into a rabbit hole with his crook.

Notice of Sale

PALACE HOTEL

Sealed tenders will be received up to August 1st, 1916, by the undersigned, for the following property, namely:—

All and Singular that certain parcel or tract of land and premises situate, lying and being in the City of Peterborough, being composed of part of Lot Number Six, on the South side of Hunter Street, having a frontage of Seventy feet (70 feet) by a depth of One hundred and ninety-one feet and five inches (191 feet 5 inches) more or less.

The vendor is informed that there is erected on this parcel of land a solid brick three storey building, containing approximately twenty-five rooms, in the rear a two storey brick stable and driving sheds, accommodating about fifteen vehicles, said property being known as the Palace Hotel, Number 215 and 217 Hunter Street. THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

PARCELS FOR PETERBORO BOYS.

There are many local boys who are prisoners of war in Germany, and the number is increasing, we are thankful to say.

It is a strange world we live in these days, and we are thankful for strange things.

Fancy a wife or mother thanking God that her husband or boy is a prisoner of the Kaiser's, but such is the case. Many wives and mothers in Peterboro have during the past few weeks, been glad to get such a message, for during the tense silence the awful dread was ever before them that those they cared for had been called upon to lay down their lives as toll for their bravery, chivalry and patriotism.

So we joy in their joy, and we sorrow with those to whom no such message of hope can come, and we honour them because they were large souled enough to realize how essential those principles for which the allies are contending, are to our best civilization, and to our highest development, and so they said "Go."

Our local Society is very anxious to get a complete list of all the Peterboro boys who are prisoners in Germany, as it is desired to send parcels of food, clothing, socks, etc., to them regularly until such time as they are released.

We encouraged them to go and fight for us, therefore we are earnestly wishful to do anything in our power to render their captivity as bearable for them as possible.

So with this end in view we appeal to their relatives to send in the names, number, rank, company, and the camp in which they are confined, either to Mrs. T. F. Matthews, 570 Water St., or to Mrs. John Allan, 207 Brock St., or to the Examiner office, either personally or in writing.

It would cheer the boys greatly to get regular parcels from the Society of their own home town, and this message of cheer will be possible if the relatives co-operate with these two ladies by giving the required information, and this we feel has only to be asked for in order to obtain it.

Miss Flora Davidson, convenor of the Packing Committee, has sent to Toronto during the month of June 14 cases and one parcel, containing the following:

192 pairs socks.
426 many tailed bandages.
18 Jaw bandages.
36 pairs pyjamas.
1003 towels.
40 day shirts.
80 hospital night shirts.
207 sheets.
34 bed jackets.
1 quilt.
130 bandages.
5 soft rolled bandages.
8 News from Home.
24 hot water bottle covers.
9 ring pillows.

Miss Marion Rush reports the forwarding of 66 bales of surgical supplies, including 8 from the Ashburnham Women's Patriotic League.

Donations from the Ashburnham W. P. L., Lakehurst R.C.S., Lily Lake R. C.S.

Supplies were made up by St. Peter's (T.A.S. Room), and by St. Paul's, Trinity, Murray St., and St. John's churches, also by the Progressive Club, West End Club, Berean Bible Class of Knox Chuch and by St. John's Girls' Association.

Switzerland is beginning to show her leaning toward the cause of the allies more plainly than she has hitherto done. Three hundred and fifty sick and wounded British prisoners from Germany arrived at Montreux to find the town gaily decorated with banners and streamers, with appropriate inscriptions everywhere. On one banner "Longe vie a Tommy," on another "Switzerland bids Tommy Welcome."

The colors of allies were seen waving everywhere and the portraits of King George and Queen Mary were in great evidence.

The enormous crowd sang "God Save the King," and speeches of welcome were made by the Mayor and others. This was followed by a reception at the Grand Hotel Suisse. Many of the prisoners burst into tears, so overcome were they by the warmth of the welcome accorded them, and the gifts which were literally showered on them.

Canadians gave a concert in the Covent Garden Opera House at which the King and Queen and many members of the Royal family were present.

The performers included the Canadian military choir which has been winning great laurels by its exquisite and artistic singing, and which is composed of wounded Canadians who are unabel to return to the front; also band selections played by 12 picked players from each Canadian band. The band of the 59th Battalion in which are so many Peterboro boys, had the honor of being represented by 12 of their bandsmen. Captain Edmund Burke, the great Canadian baritone, who toured with Madame Melba, and Kathleen Parlow, also took part in this very Canadian concert.

Many people contend that all the finer, gentler feelings in our men will be killed because of the awful experiences they are undergoing in the dire struggle for liberty; they say when it ends they will be coarsened and brutalized by the terrible scenes they have witnessed.

We are not pessimistic along this line; we think home (if it is the right kind of a home) will have a greater charm than ever before. The atmosphere of peace and love will be valued by the former home-loving man and boy as they never valued it before.

We have quoted Dr. Grenfell of Labrador, before; he says "The atmosphere is Christ-like and men are making 'The Great Discovery.'"

In support of this we quote from a letter written by a Toronto officer who says:

Never can I forget the reception accorded those battered wounded sons of Canada, by the people of London The whole of London turned out to see the long line of ambulances as they made their way through the streets. The route was lined with people cheering madly for Canada.

The flower girls of London followed the ambulances and threw the roses to our men, sweet English garden roses of pink and white, which mean bread and butter to the flower girls.

"It was too much for us," said the Canadian describing the scene. "We dont' mind the bumps—the shot and the shells and all we have at the front, but I tell you those London flower girls and their roses were too much for us."

Ah—the gallant, gentle hearts that beat beneath the khaki coats. With grim determination they bear it all at the front, for that is war, but the sweet womanly act of the London flower girls brings the tears to their eyes.

The story of a strange and solemn scene before a battle is told by Lachlan Maclean Watt, the Highland mystic, preacher and chaplain, when he gave the sacrament to Scottish soldiers just before they went into action.

It only needed the simplest words to seal that sacrament. And next morning, in the grey light, the men who had been touched by the thought of home and the dear ones there, and the big throbbing thought of consecration, were marching off to grip the very hand of death, in sacrifice, like Christ's, for others. The scene was repeated with a difference at another spot, where in a big marquee the members of the Y.M.C.A. had been selling tea and coffee. "We are going off tomorrow," said a fine lad from Cheshire. "Give us communion that we may remember when we go that high ideals call us." It was a difficult thing just for a moment to decide whether in that tent, where men were noisly eating and drinking at the counter, it should be held, or in some place apart. Instinctively, I said: "Yes, here."

So a rude communion table was made of boxes heaped together as our fathers would heap stones together in the moors. Covered with a white linen cloth, we laid upon that table the little chalice of silver, with the flagon of red wine, and the bread upon its platter, expecting eight men to partake. But the tent filled and hushed, and filled to overflowing; and even outside men stood and peered in through the seams. And we began as ever, with the 23rd Psalm of consecrated memory. Again, and again, and again, the challice and platter came back for replenishing. Men raised their drooping heads and stretched out their hands for the sacred symbols.

Away up in the trenches, and about the region of La Bassee, red blood, as red as Christ's, was enriching the soil of France; and the hearts that were beating here might soon be still, in the long graves yonder. A breath of mystery seemed to sway them in that tent, and still that quiet urgency for more came up, until over three hundred men whose faces to-morrow would be set towards the battle, had partaken of the sacrament of sacrifice that linked us to God and our homes across the sea.

Talk of your churches, your sects, your quarrelsome divisions! When men are face to face with the eternal, as we are out here, these things are as forgotten as the dust that blew last year over the remotest sand heap into the Atlantic.. Brotherhood in the divine upliftung of a great imperial call, and the love of a uniting Christship, bind, as with a golden girdle, all our hopes, our faiths and fears, and link them to the Highest."

We think there is much we could learn of good from these men at the front.

Rules Issued For Infantile Paralysis

Although no cases of infantile paralysis have yet been reported as existing within the province, the Provincial Board of Health, in view of the serious rise of the epidemic in American cities, has, through Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, chief officer, issued a circular respecting the disease and how to deal with it. It is pointed out that it is a communicable disease chiefly of children between the age of two and fourteen years.

FLIES MAY SPREAD IT.

It is believed that infantile paralysis is spread from one child to another by means of the secretions of the nose and throat by direct transfer. It is possible also that it is spread by flies.

Every case must be quarantined for six weeks.

All children who have been in contact with a case must be quarantined and kept under observation for two weeks.

Adult members of the family may be allowed to go to work subject to the regulations of the Provincial Board.

Gatherings of children, such as picnics, picture shows, and playgrounds, should be prohibited where there is an outbreak.

The source of origin in each case should be closely inquired into in order that proper quarantine may be maintained.

In houses where cases appear, all doors and windows should be screened, the premises kept clean, and no accumulation of garbage or waste permitted.

All cases should be at once notified to the Medical Officer of Health.

Mild cases showing slight headache, rise of temperature, and vomiting persisting for a few days, with slight muscular weakness and absence of paralysis, should be quarantined. These are probably one of the chief sources of contagion.

As infantile paralysis is a most serious disease and in the present epidemic giving a high death-rate, the public is urged to second the efforts of the authorities in every way in order to prevent a severe outbreak in the province.

All materials such as cloths, etc., carrying secretions and discharges from patients, should be burned, boiled or disinfected.

If the disease shows any tendency to spread, special quarantine measures may be necessary.

A certain lady prides herself upon always looking at the bright side of things. "My Dear" moaned her husband one day recently as he towed ruthlessly on his bed, "it's the doctor I'm thinking of. What a bill his will be." "Never mind, Joseph," said his wife. "You know, there's the insurance money."

A GOOD TIME TO WEAR THEM.

An Irishman's wife had the misfortune to break her eyeglasses. Pat was at the town, so he bought her a brand-new pair. When he got home his "better-half" tried them on, and exclaimed: "Pat, these are about the best glasses I ever looked through with my two eyes." "How's that?" said Pat. "Well, everything I see looks like two or three." "Shure, then, wear them on Saturdays when I give you the pay," said Pat.

MISUNDERSTOOD HIS EMOTION.

A young probationer was preaching his trial sermon at a Northern parish church. After finishing his discourse he leaned over the pulpit and engaged in silent prayer, an act which rather surprised the congregation, who were unaccustomed to such modes of procedure. But the worthy old Scotch beadle, ascending the pulpit steps, began clapping the young preacher on the shoulder as he said, kindly: "Hoot, toot, man, dinna tak' it sae much tae heart. Ye'll mebbe dae better next time!"

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT---

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

Complete and absolute Family protection may be had by your taking a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA—The LEADING CANADIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

IF YOU WANT A NEW

SEPARATE SKIRT

SEE OUR SHOWING ON SECOND FLOOR

We have just received a new shipment of Women's Summer Wash Skirts in some of the smartest models imaginable in the season's favourite materials.

They're all new models—but each style has some individual note that will particularly please you.

Every new desirable model is in evidence, and such pleasing styles will contribute that final air of completeness to the skirt and blouse costume.

Some of them are plain and severe, depending for their appeal on their artful cut that gives the modish lines.

Others are cleverly strapped or set off with the introduction of a few pleats.

But the greatest merit of our New Summer Skirts lies in their skilful modeling and painstaking tailoring—causing them to fit as accurately and gracefully as though made to order.

Tory Meeting Proved a Stormy One---Hugh Cecil's Attack Was Vigorous One---Many Awkward Questions May Yet Arise

(Copyright, 1916, Central News)
By T. P. O'Connor.

LONDON, July 16. — The Tory meeting last week proved a stormy one. Hugh Cecil, backed by Sir Robert Finlay, one of England's greatest lawyers, made an attack, not only on the proposed settlement, but on Bonar Law and other Unionist leaders who had accepted it.

It was kown that William O'Brien and Tim Healy also were determined to wreck settlement if possible. The chief question then was whether Premier Asquith's statement would lead to an immediate and bitter debate. Thus the settlement was to be ushered in by an attack in force which might militate against its future. Premier Asquith's refusal to be drawn into details, and a certain hesitation on the part of Hugh Cecil, because he commands none but Tories of minor importance, prevented this debate, and so far the settlement has started well, but indications remain that its course will be stormy and may take considerable time before passing into law, although its final triumph I still consider assured.

MANY AWKWARD QUESTIONS.

Many awkward questions regarding terms may arise, largely because of the underlying question as to whether the settlement will be regarded as a permanent one or merely provisional in character. It is a question of words, for as the measure has to come up for revision within the next twelve months or some such period after the war, the whole scheme is stamped with the word provisional.

On the other hand, the Irish Nationalists have wisely accepted the undeniable unconquerable fact, that the Ulster Counties cannot and even ought not to be driven into Home Rule by force, which involves the further proposition that these counties remain out until they have made up heir minds to come in. The irreconcilable element, both in the North and South, who want to destroy the settlement, are making unscrupulous use of the words "Ulster Reactionary," thus trying to revive the Orange Opposition by declaring that the exclusion is only temporary while the Southern factionists represent it as permanent.

TWO FACTS ARE CERTAIN.

However, it is mere dispute about words, for the two facts are certain, that Ulster will never be forced in. Secondly, it is as certain that Ulster has no more idea or possibility of remaining permanently outside the rest of Ireland, than of drifting from Ireland to the middle of the Atlantic. Fortunately in Ulster, between the Nationalists and their leader, Mr. Devlin, there is the strongest common sense, and political instinct and the settlement will carry the support of both to a triumphant end.

Everybody knew that Joe Devlin was one of the remarkable young men that Ireland has evolved during the last ten years; but it was not until the last of six months of the serious crisis in Ireland that the country realised his full greatness. No man among the Irish leaders had a task of such immense difficulty. It is, after all, the Nationalists of Ulster who had to make the chief sacrifice; the sacrifice was the greater because, in addition to the four counties of Down, Armagh, Antrim and Derry, in which the Unionists are in the majority, they had to give up the two counties of Tyronne and Fermanagh, in which undoubtedly the Nationalists are in the majority, they had to give up the two counties of Tyronne and Fermanagh, in which undoubtedly the Nationalists had the majority. Joe Devlin has been for many years the foremost figure in Ulster, it was to him they looked for leadership; the confidence in his courage, in his judgment and his disinterestedness was so complete that he might well be regarded as the idol of the Province. It was on his word, therefore, that the Nationalists of Ulster were ready to act; and no man could give the word of resignation to sacrifice with more palable regret. If he consented to the sacrifice, it was impossible that any other figure in Ulster life could say him nay. He did give the word, and the word was obeyed. When one recalls all the enormous odds against him, it is marvellous that he should have succeeded. Every attempt had been made to win the support of the bishops to the Lloyd George scheme. They had been seen by Mr. Redmond, by Mr. Devlin, himself, and by others. For a long time it was supposed that their well-known moderation of character would have ranged them on the side of the settlement. It was known also that they all had immense confidence in Mr. Redmond, and it was anticipated that when they realized that the choice between the acceptance of the settlement or the loss of Mr. Redmond's leadership they would have little hesitation in accepting the temporary sacrifice of the six counties. All these hopes proved vains and the four bishops declared against Lloyd George and against Joe Devlin.

PECULIAR STATE OF AFFAIRS.

There was a peculiar state of affairs among the clergy of the six counties! Some of them had been for many years among the most loyal supporters of the Irish party, and in this they followed the lead of two of the most patriotic bishops in Ireland: Dr. McHugh, the Bishop of Derry, and of course Dr. O'Donnell, the Bishop of Raphoe, who was always distinguished himself among the episcopacy of Ireland for the uncompromising support he has given all through his career to the Irish party. But in some of the other dioceses there was a very different feeling. Some of the priests in these dioceses have for good reasons or bad, been the consistent opponents of the Irish party for at least ten years. It was known of course that there would be nearly 200 priests at the convention, and even those who had the strongest faith in Mr. Devlin's powers of persuasion doubted whether he could overcome an opposition which might well have been solid against him. It was not solid, as a matter of fact, because one of the most curious intricacies of Irish politics at the present moment is that here is a very serious division of opinion among the ranks of the priests themselves, and this division of opinion, to a certain extent, follows the lines of age and service.

The elder race of priests, that is to say the Parish priests, have been, as a rule, on the side of the party and, therefore, on the side of the settlement; while the younger ranks, the ranks of the curates, have been against them, both outside of the dioceses of Dr. McHugh and Dr. O'Donnell. In addition, a large number of the laity had been rushed into premature denunciation of the plan of exclusion. For days and even for weeks it seemed quite certain that the verdict of such a body would go against Mr. Devlin. Even he, himself, at one period of the struggle, said that he thought the chances were 100 to 1 against him. He is not a man, however, to be turned back from any purpose or opinion he has formed, and he went into the fight knowing that these odds were against him, but determined to carry it on and to stand or fall by the result. The result is known all over the world, and the night of Friday, 23rd of June justified his resolution, and his tenacity; but it was a surprise even to his best friends and warmest admirers.

Likes Jokes.

What manner of men is this who has achieved such an extraordinary result? Free from vanity, with a keen sense of humour, no man makes more jokes against himself than Joe Devlin. In the mining district of Wales there are many Irish families who settled there on the great exodus from Ireland after the famine, and among these families is that of the Keatings. Every member of the family was at one time or another in the mines. The younger generation has emancipated itself from this perilous toil; Mat Keating is member of Parliament for Kilkenny; Joseph Keating is a successful novelist. But the old father still remains—a splendid Irish veteran, a life teetotaller, an ordent Catholic, a fierce Nationalist. Joseph Devlin was introduced to the old men at a convention by the son, Mat Keating, and the old man of seeing Mr. Devlin immediately declared how like Dan O'Connell he was. Later in the evening Mr. Devlin asked old Keating what sort of a man O'Connell was, and Keating replied he was one of the ugliest men he ever saw. And as he tells this Joe chuckles with great delight. As a matter of fact he is not an ugly man at all. He is short of nature, and the big head and the face of pronounced Irish features are in marked contrast with his stature. Similarly the mellow and powerful voice comes with some surprise when you look at the rather tiny man from which it springs. The face is round with a short rather turned-up nose; and the body still looks almost boyish. His health is delicate, and this little man of such audacious courage is such a bundle of nerves that feel never certain that he will not break down. When the time is coming in the House of Commons for him to make a speech, you can see the whole frame quivering, the well-shaped and delicate hands trembling. He has been known to lie awake all the night before because he had a meeting of particular importance to address the next evening. Once on his legs, however, all the nervousiness seems to drop from him; he speaks with fervour, and even if he be confronted by opposition, with defiant self-confidence; and at once he grasps the attention of his audience. The oratory though rushing, does not come with a steady stream; he pauses often for a word and for a thought, and you can see in the mobile face the working of an intelligent and thinking brain. In some respects he often reminds me of the traditions I have heard of Stephen A. Douglas, the little giant of the great days which preceded the Civil War in the United States. It is rarely that he has failed in convincing an Irish audience. There has been occasions in the House of Commons when the passionate vehemence of his oratory has excited each tumult as to interfere somewhat with his effectiveness; and indeed he never has felt quite at home there.

Remarkable Things.

Yet even there I have seen him do remarkable things. The Orangemen had a great find in the ne temere decree which seemed to make some difficulties in the way of mixed marriages, and they had found a case in the domestic differences of a Mr. and Mrs. McCann. McCann was a Catholic and Mrs. McCann was a Protestant. Husband and wife quarrelled and ended in a separation; after the separation McCann took away his children and disappeared from Ireland. Strong and powerful appeals were made to the Protestant sentiment of England and Scotland and a vigorous and successful campaign was conducted; and for a time it looked as if this appeal to mere no-Popery sentiment would seriously interfere with the progress of the Home Rule cause. When the night came for the discussion of the question in the House of Commons, one could see in the crowded House a look of exultant triumph on the Unionist, and of doubt, uncertainty, anxiety on the Liberal benches—especially among the non-conformists. Mr. James Campbell, the present Attorney General for Ireland, who is an adroit and able advocate, stated the case with great force; and while his speech was going on you could see the faces of the Tories grow more beaming and those of the Liberal non-conformists become more depressed. Mr. Devlin got on his legs; and in less than ten minutes the whole situation had changed; the Liberal non-conformists were cheering the Tories were abashed, and nobody dared to continue the debate. In a few minutes this marvellous little man had thrown down the fabric which had been reared by months of campaign.

Personally, there are few men so loved by his friends; this is largely because of his absolute disinterestness of character. He does not care about money; he is unmarried; he is indifferent to all the ordinary attractions of life; his one weakness is an overzealous love of a cigar. And finally there is this curious paradox in his character, that though a strong Nationalist, he is a Belfast and Ulsterman to the core; with this curious result—that though often he is hated and sometimes denounced by Belfast Orangemen, they all have implicit confidence in his good faith and in his good sense. Over and over again you hear from them the statement "if Joe makes a bargain he keeps it." It was partly this curious admiration for Joe Devlin that accounted for the reasonable spirit of the Orangemen.

What his future in Irish political life may be, it is hard now to forecast. He himself has declared that he will have nothing to do with a Dublin Parliament as his constituency is excluded from it as he thinks his work is in Ulster and not the South of Ireland. Events, however, will probably force him to take his share of the responsibility of that new Government of Ireland which is the immediate and one of the most difficult problems Ireland has to face.

BORDEN AS HIGH COMMISSIONER SIR THOMAS WHITE FOR PREMIER

MONTREAL, July 14.—A big Cabinet shift at Ottawa is indicated by private information obtained from a well-informed source here.

The information is to the effect that Sir George Perley will not return to England, but that Sir Robert Borden will succeed him as Canadian High Commissioner.

The Premier, the story goes, is to be raised to the peerage as a recognition of the part Canada has played in the war. Sir Thomas White is to succeed Sir Robert Borden as Premier, and a shift in Cabinet positions all along the line must necessarily result.

Premier Is Tired.

It is said that Sir Robert Borden has long since tired of being pulled hither and thither by the opposing forces in the Government. He has also cherished a secret ambition to fill the high post at London, and now that the turning point of the war has been reached he feels that he may with honour withdraw from a position for which he has felt he was never fitted and which was never to his liking.

Premier Borden is wealthy, and has the qualifications to make him a satisfactory High Commissioner.

Machine Would Oppose.

But there would be interesting times at Ottawa after his departure, for the "machine" Conservatives, whatever they may think of Sir Thomas White's business ability, have serious doubts as to the completeness of his political education.

Bodies Swollen By Severe Heat At Great Camp

150 IN CAMP HOSPITAL.

Civilians Asked to Keep Away Because Accommodations Are Lacking.

CAMP BORDEN, July 15.—To-day's parade slate as given out by Col. Newburn, A.A.G., shows 255 men absent without leave. The strength of the camp, including those on passes, is 30,510. Col. Newburn does not consider that the number illegally absent is excessive.

A breeze and a lower temperature today made conditions more pleasant for the men, who still, however, complain of the dust.

Some idea of the conditions of the past few days can be obtained from stories from the different areas. The bodies of some men were so swollen by the heat on the day of the Hughes visit that their shirts had to be torn from their backs, and in one case a ring had to be filed from the finger of a man.

No Place For Civilians.

Colonel Newburn is certain that some of the unruly spirits of the riot had obtained intoxicants. General Logie tells that conditions as far as the unfriendly feeling of the men toward the camp is concerned, will soon disappear. In spite of what may develop in the future it can be truthfully said that he and his staff are doing their best to improve conditions and cannot be held responsible for anything that may occur. Civilians should not visit the camp. There is absolutely no accommodation at present for them.

Forty men were struck from the strength of the camp, classified as medically unfit.

There are 150 men in the camp hospital. Forty-eight were admitted today and twenty-six men sent to Toronto.

Recommendation for Medal.

Brigadier-General Logie has recommended two soldiers, patients in Toronto camp hospital, for the Humane Society medal, Pte. Dex, 169th Battalion, and Pte. Forbes, 97th Battalion, who went to the aid of men from Stanley Barracks, who were in danger of drowning last Sunday, off the exhibition grounds.

MRS. CASTLE'S PET DOG SLAIN BY MATE; SHE CABLES VERNON

ITHACA, July 16.—Mrs. Irene Castle, the International Film star, who arrived here to take part in a motion picture serial, left suddenly last night to bury her pet lap dog.

The little animal was killed yesterday afternoon by a German wolfhound, also belonging to her. The two dogs were at play when the big wolf-hound suddenly crushed the head of the smaller animal.

Mrs. Castle had the body of the dog placed in a coffin and took it to New York, where she planned to bury it in Greenwood Cemetery. She sent a cablegram to her husband, now in England, appraisig him of the dog's death.

It was reported she declared to friends she would go into mourning.

PRISONERS TO ENLIST.

Upwards of Forty Inmates of Canadian Prisons Serve Colours.

OTTAWA, July 14.—Since the war began clemency has been extended to upwards of forty inmates of Canadian penitentiaries to enable them to enlist. Parole or pardon was granted on condition that they enroll, and unfavourable reports as to the subsequent conduct of the men have been rare. Several of them had previously seen service. None of those released were undergoing lengthy sentences or for grave crimes. A great many applications for similar paroles have, however, been refused.

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

By Elizabeth Thomas.

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same—lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orilene capsules. Take one after each meal and before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 postal not or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Canada.

Doctors Find Iron and Phosphorous Prolongs Life of Nervous People 25 Years

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorous is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking poisonous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Bonized Phosphorbs with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well sleep well, work well, digest well look well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Bonized Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Bonized Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of F. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

GENERAL BRUSILOFF NEVER LOST A BATTLE

In the North American Review, Mr. Charles Johnston gives the following estimate of General Brusiloff, Russia's military genius, who has won such signal victories in Bukowina:

General Brusiloff was one of the few men in Russia firmly convinced that the war must come, and come soon. In 1911, he was Corps Commander at Lublin, and while there laid enormous stress on aeroplane scouting, so that it was no uncommon thing to see half a dozen airmen soaring above the town. Then his high attainments led to his transfer to Warsaw, as the danger centre, but, after a few months' service with the high command there, he was transferred, at his own request, to Vinnitza, close to the northeastern end of Galicia. The reason for this request was that he felt convinced that war was coming, and he foresaw that, just at this point, Russia could make the quickest, most effective thrust at the Teutonic forces.

WHEN WAR CAME.

The war came, and within a few days, General Brusiloff and General Russky were across the frontier; and, while the equally rapid advance of General Samsonoff and General Rennenkampf, in the north, met with disaster, Russky and Brusiloff gained striking successes, carrying their armies forward to the passes of the Carpathians. General Brusiloff is one of the few generals of the Allies who, for a full year, was continuously on enemy soil. He never lost a battle, and, when the dire failure of ammunition forced the retirement of the Russian armies and brought about the loss of Warsaw, it is on record that not for an hour did Brusiloff lose his serenity and faith. But he is determined now to win back every foot of land then lost—and more—and the spirit of the man is expressed in his recently reported words, as he sent the correspondents to the rear. "You will learn of the Russian advance from the Austrian bulletins."

MASTER OF MILITARY SCIENCE.

General Brusiloff is a master of military science, who has learned all that can be learned from his allies and his enemies. He has taken part, many times, in the grand manoeuvres on the plains of France, where stern battle now rages; he has stood beside the German Emperor and watched the spectacular development of immense cavalry charges. And, before the war, he practiced ceaselessly the handling of the largest bodies of troops, in those great Russian manoeuvres into which he put much of the vigour of war. It was noted in these contests among the Russian fields and forests, that General Brusiloff alway seemed to know what his opponent had in mind to do and took the needed measures to turn his flank—an art he has not lost in the real war.

FUNERAL OF MR. EDMUND LAYFIELD

The funeral of the late Edmund Layfield took place from the family residence, 580 Charlotte Street, yesterday afternoon. The impressive funeral service of the Church of England was conducted at St. John's and at the grave, by Canon Cornish and Rev. Mr. Grobb.

The pall bearers were Messrs. T. Barrie, Robert Hall, Robert Wilson, J. M. White, Matthew Breckenridge and William Nelson.

Mr. T. H. Mather, son-in-law of the deceased, was present for the funeral. Mrs. Mather has been home for some days. Mrs. William Robinson, of Toronto, an old friend of the family, also came down or the funeral.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

MR. CHARLES E. COLEMAN LEAVES FOR OVERSEAS

Another Member of the Well-known George St- Confectionary Firm Will Take a More Practical Part in The Gigantic Struggle That is Being Waged in Europe.

SAILS TO-DAY

Mr. C. E. Coleman, of Coleman Brothers, sails to-day from Montreal on board the steamer Sicilian of the Allan Line. He is going direct to Woolwich Arsenal to work on big guns. Mr. Coleman has had a wide and varied experience as a mechanic and is not an amateur at the trade to which he is going at this period of national crisis. Twelve years ago Mr. Coleman came to Canada direct from Woolwich Arsenal, where he was employed for upwards of four years. He also worked on marine engines in London for four years, and following his arrival in Canada was employed in the Canadian General Electric Company's Works for eighteen months. This, together with six months spent with the Pope Hartford Company of the United States, and an apprenticeship of seven years, with what according to Government reports, is known as the most efficient munition department in the west of England, should render Mr. Coleman's service all the more valuable at this crucial hour.

Four Brothers.

Mr. C. E. Coleman is not the only member of the family who has heard the call of the Empire. Three other brothers are with the colours, namely, Mr. H. J. Coleman of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles. The latter is also a partner in the confectionary business, and was one of the survivors of the recent heavy fighting.

Mr. G. R. Coleman, of the Painting and Decorating firm, is a sergeant in the 93rd Battalion, and leaves behind him a wife and four children; the eldest being nine years.

Mr. George Coleman, also of the Painting and Decorating firm, went to England one year ago and attested under Group 2, and was assigned to garrison duty. This makes four brothers out of five who have heard the call of the Empire, and are doing their bit in the present gigantic struggle.

The Coleman brothers are united in one common cause. They are firm advocates of a policy of construction and their united wish is that many may be spared to help in the work of making Canada a bigger and better country after the war is over. They are fully alive to the possibilities of this country, and stand ready to do anything that may be necessary to uphold the dignity and honour of this fair Dominion.

SHARKS ARE AFTER FOOD, HE SAYS

Captain of Sloop from Bermuda Reports the Sea Unusually Alive With Fish

NEW YORK, July 15.—The sharks appear to have come into northern waters in response to the call of their finny diet, for, according to Captain R. J. De Shields, commander of the sailing sloop Sir George Sommers, which arrived here, laden with potatoes from Bermuda, the sea is unusually alive with fish of many varieties from the Gulf Stream up. And, as proof of the fact that the little vessel had encountered sharks on her way to New York, the backbones of two of them were shown.

"We killed these two," said Captain De Shields, a modest little man of seventy-seven years. "Those which we killed were eight and ten feet long, respectively. But we saw at least four others which were much larger. One of these measured fourteen feet. We saw it off the New Jersey coast, but a considerable distance from the shore.

"Down where we come from sharks are as common as almost any other kind of fish; yet we never hear of their killing any one. Boys and girls go in bathing day and night without any fear or even thought of these monsters, which sometimes grow to a length of more than twenty feet."

Henry M. Tucker, the mate, said the sloop formerly was a pilot boat. She is fifty-seven feet in length and seventeen and a half feet beam and carries fifty tons.

"So greatly interested were the people of Bermuda in our voyage to New York," he said, "that the piers were crowded with thousands of spectators, who cheered as we sailed away. Our purpose in coming here is to install a large gasoline engine for auxiliary power."

TWO ACCUSED OF KIDNAPPING BOY

DANBURY, Conn., July 15. — T. Frederick Lee and his mother, Mrs. Emma Kenyon Lee, were arrested in the home of Mrs. Alice Green, No. 392 Main street, on warrants issued in White Plains, N.Y., accusing them of kidnapping Mr. Lee's stepson, William Crossman Lee, twelve years old. They gave $1,000 bail each and said they would return to White Plains at once with the boy, having had no intention of kidnapping him or keeping him from his guardian.

The warrants were obtained by De Witt H. Lyon, of Port Chester, who recently was appointed guardian of William, known as "the poor little rich boy" because he inherited more than $1,000,000 from his maternal grandfather.

Soon after the boy was born in California his mother, a daughter of the late George W. Crossman, obtained a divorce from William Mill, Jr., and was married to Mr. Lee, who adopted the boy as his own. William does not remember ever having seen his father and wishes to remain with his stepfather.

Mr. Mill asked the Westchester courts for possession of his son last May, his mother having died a year ago. It then developed that the boy had inherited a large fortune. Mr. Mill lenied he sought custody of the boy because of his wealth and the courts appointed Mr. Lyon as guardian. Then it was found he had been taken to Connecticut.

OIL FOR STREETS IN FACTORY DISTRICT

Alderman McIntyre has given the assurance that the streets in the vicinity of the C. G. E. will be oiled as soon as possible. City Engineer Parsons points out that the scarcity of labour seriously affects civic work. The preliminary preparation of the streets for oil treatment requires the service of men who frequently have to be taken from some other department.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentry and colic are most prevalent. Any one of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mothers best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Geo. Ahearn The Lucky Winner

Results of the Drawing for Sacred Heart Social Prizes

Quite a crowd assembled at the Sacred Heart grounds last evening to witness the drawing of the tickets to decide the winners for the $100 in gold contested for at the social last Tuesday. Miss Lucille Nolan was elected to do the drawing and Messrs. Lynch, Murphy and Lebare formed the "scrutiny" executive to superintend the drawing. The winners were as follows:

1st prize, $20 in gold— Mr. Geo. Ahearn, 432 Downey street.
2nd prize, $10—Michael Menogue, R. R. No. 6.
3rd prize, $10—R. C. Braund, 55 Park street.
4th prize, $10—Ed. Laplante, 164 Lake street.
5th prize, $10—Mrs. Georgia Rose, Bay City, Mich.
6th prize, $15—Mrs. Bridget Fitzgerald, Park street.
7th prize, $5—Alex. O'Brien, 206 Perry street.
8th prize, $5—Mrs. M. J. Sullivan, 112 Stewart street.
9th prize, $5—Mrs. B. O'Leary, 273 Romaine street.
10th prize, $5—Mr. C. Fraser, Toronto.

The contest for the selling of the drawing tickets resulted as follows:
1—Miss Francis Collins.
2—Miss Harriette Pierce.
3—Mr. Frank Guerin.

Miss Frances Collins, who took the first prize, broke all previous records in the selling of tickets and received a prize of ten dollars for her good work.

Before the drawing Rev. Father O'Brien announced the attendance at the social on Tuesday to have been 1773, which is certainly a record breaker, and surpasses all previous marks. The Reverend Father in a few word expressed his gratitude to all who had helped to make his social such a success.

Women Jump Overboard As Explosion Fires Yacht

Guests at Tea Party Aboard the Eidas, at New Rochelle, Dive as Flames Sweep Craft—Captain Returns to Blazing Vessel and Regains Jewels

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y., July 14.—A moment after the power yacht Eidas, owned by William King, Jr., dropped anchor among a flotilla of costly pleasure craft in Echo Bay, a gasoline stove exploded and set fire to the yacht. Mr. and Mrs. King had been cruising during the afternoon and had as their guests Mrs. George P. Granbery, Mrs. E. R. Leaycraft and Mrs. C. H. Bellows.

As the thunderstorm was at its height and the rain was falling, Mrs. King directed Captain Elick to heat some water for tea for her guests. While the water was being heated the stove exploded.

The flames spread so quickly that it was impossible to fight them successfully. Mrs. Granbery, Mrs. Leaycraft and Mrs. Bellows who were in light afternoon gowns, jumped overboard. All are good swimmers and reached the side of another yacht where they held themselves afloat until Fred Howard, a member of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, and Oscar Stomberg, who was returning to his cruiser in a small boat, rescued them.

Mr. and Mrs. King ran to the bow of the yacht and remained there, with the flames quickly approaching them, until they were taken off by members of the club who put out in another power boat.

Captain Elick jumped into the water and swam to where Mrs. Granbery, Mrs. Leaycraft and Mrs. Bellows were hanging to another yacht, and helped support them until they were picked up. Those three women and Capt. Elick were starting for the club house when Mr. and Mrs. King were taken from the Eidas. They had not gone far towards the club house when Mrs. King recalled that her jewel case was concealed in a pillow on board the burning Eidas, and she called to Capt. Elick, asking if the jewels could be saved.

Capt. Elick at once jumped overboard from the rescuing boat and swam back to the Eidas, where he crawled on board, went through the flames, recovered the jewels and then went into the water again. He was picked up by another boat, and soon after Mrs. King reached the club house her jewels were restored to her.

While dry clothing was being found for the women, a dozen men went out from the club house to try to save the Eidas. Although the rain was heavy it was making no impression on the blaze, and the men cut holes in the yacht's side and sank her. She will be raised in a few days, but it is believed that she is badly damaged. Mr. and Mrs. King lost much personal property.

The Eidas was designed was A. E. Luders, and was built by the Luders Marine Construction Co., of Stamford, Conn., in 1910. She was 50 feet over all, ten feet six inches beam, and three feet six inches draught. She had a four cylinder Twentieth Century engine.

Summer Care of Milk

When Milk is delivered it should be put into the Refrigerator at once, or, lacking a Refrigerator, into a cool place. A very brief exposure to Summer Heat tends to render Milk unfit for use. If you are using—

Pure Pasteurized Milk from The Peterborough Creamery

YOU ARE PROTECTED FROM MILK IMPURITIES

All Sediment and Dangerous Impurities are Removed. You are protected against contamination from infected cows, as well as from all other dangers liable to arise from Raw, Unpasteurized and Unclarified Milk.

No Milk is So Clean that it can not be Improved by Clarification.

The Clarifying and Pasteurizing of milk, properly executed, is an efficient and practical means for protecting the consuming public at all seasons of the year, but more especially in heated terms.

Milk keeps much longer when it is clarified and pasteurised.

Cleanliness and Clarification

The important compounds of milk, so essential to the growing child in stimulating growth, bone and muscular structure, are safeguarded from pollution by clarifying and pasteurizing, which also improves the milk for infant feeding as well as adult use.

IT IS NOT SO

Some objection is raised to the pasteurizing of milk because some think the heating of the milk destroys the healthful lactic acid so beneficial in all good milk. THIS IS NOT SO. It has been proven over and over again, that pasteurizing milk at a temperature of 140 degrees F., improves the value of the milk. The important proteids of milk are not affected by the heating at this temperature; but on the contrary, remain entirely normal and unchanged.

When a very high temperature is used, near the boiling point, some destructive changes are known to occur in milk; but they do not occur in correct pasteurizing at 140 degrees F., which is the temperature used in the pasteurizing process at the Peterborough Creamery.

Outbreak of Infantile Paralysis in New York

NEW YORK, July 6,—Infantile paralysis epidemic growing steadily worse and deaths daily are up in scores. An emergency call for nurses, additional physicians and volunteer sanitation workers was issued today. Churches have been asked to close all Sunday Schools and discontinue all picnics to avoid all gatherings of children. Washington experts say bacteria infested milk is most likely the cause of this epidemic.

COUNTY TEMPERANCE WORKERS ENDORSE NEW LEGISLATION

Meeting of County Temperance Association Was Held Last Evening--Ex-Controller F. S. Spence of Toronto Was the Speaker of the Evening

A public meeting of the county temperance workers was held last evening in St. Paul's Church, when the following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the delegates:

Resolved: That this convention desires to express its very hearty appreciation of the action of the Hon. W. H. Hearst and his government in introducing into the Legislature the Ontario Temperance Act and congratulates the Legislature upon adopting the same without a dissenting vote, thus giving us a law that cannot be considered a party measure and which therefore ought to have the unhesitating support of every patriotic citizen.

Resolved: That this convention calls upon the Dominion Government and Parliament to take such steps at the earliest possible date as will ensure the total prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes throughout the Dominion.

The resolutions were prepared by Mr. F. S. Spence, Rev. J. A. Whattam and Mr. A. B. Cunningham. In seconding the motion for the adoption of the first resolution, Mr. George Powell stated that he was pleased to note that anything like partisanship had been avoided and that credit for the adoption of prohibition had been duly given to the Legislature as a body instead of to any particular party.

The second resolution, calling upon the Dominion Government to take action, was adopted to cover what the temperance forces regard as an anamoly in the situation. The interprovincial traffic in liquor, they claim, is all that exists to prevent the successful working of the Act. Sir George Foster went so far as to refere to this as an absurdity from his place in Parliament at the recent session. Even if every province in the Dominion went dry and the Dominion Government continued to license distillers and brewers the people in one province could still order liquor from the manufacturers in another.

The Government last winter refused to pass a law prohibiting the manufacture of liquor in the Dominion on the ground that such action would amount to enforcing prohibition on the provinces in which the people had not declared in favour of it. When the provinces are a unit on this question the temperance people were encouraged to hope that the legislation desired by them would be enacted.

Mr. Spence, the Speaker.

Ex-Controller F. S. Spence, of Toronto, was the speaker at the session last night. Rev. R. Pogue presided in the absence of Mr. H. B. Cowan, the county chairman. Mr. Spence made one of his characteristic eloquent and impressive addresses on the subject which has been his favourite theme for a life time, and of which he is recognized as one of the best living Canadian exponents. Mr. Ruthven McDonald rendered several patriotic selections in splendid style, responding to hearty recalls on every occasion. His singing of The Irish Lullaby was one of the finest renditions of popular melody ever heard in Peterborough. On motion of G. W. Powell and R. Carter, of Lakefield, a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Messrs. Spence and McDonald.

Old Officers Retained.

The officers of the present county executive, as well as the members of that body, were retained for the new organization to aid in the work of enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act. H. B. Cowan is chairman, R. Lees secretary and A. B. Cunningham assistant secretary. The executive will call another meeting at an early date to arrange further details. Every municipality in the county will be represented on the new organization.

The following were added to the county executive: Rev. J. Galt, of the Gilmour Memorial Church; Rev. M. McKee, Bridgenorth; Rev. T. W. Barrett, Lakefield; Rev. Mr. Clare, Warsaw; Rev. Mr. Roberts, Indian River; A. Fairbairn, Smith; W. H. Kidd, Indian River; and J. Reid, Lakefield.

To Provide Hotel Accommodation.

One of the chief duties of the new organization will be to see that when prohibition is in force ample accommodation is provided for the travelling public.

6 Months Old Baby CURED OF DIARRHOEA

During the hot weather young children are very much subject to diarrhoea, in fact, more so than adults, on account of the more delicate construction of their constitution. It behoves every mother to look after her children on the first sign of any looseness of the bowels, for if they do not some serious bowel trouble such as diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, Summer complaint, etc., is liable to follow, and they will, perhaps, loose their little one by not taking the precaution to check this looseness of the bowels by using Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. Chas. Monck, Marlbank, Ont., writes: "When my little girl was about six months old she took a severe attack of diarrhoea. I tried castor oil, daudanum and other treatments, but they were of no use. A neighbour told me about Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I tried it, and after giving my baby two doses I could see a great change for the better. I have always proised "Dr. Fowler's" since then."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the original. See you get it when you ask for it.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 25c.

Quick Change.—The schoolmaster had set this sentence on the blackboard to parse, the day after a, to him painful visit from the inspector—"This teacher says the inspector is a fool." What was his horror to see the inspector enter the school for something forgotten yesterday! In an instant he roared in a tone of fury — "John, put in those parenthesis I told you to put, in at once—how dare you, sir!" And it read—"This teacher (says the inspector) is a fool."

BUSY SESSION AT POLICE COURT

This morning's session was a busy one at the Police Court, and a variety of cases were on hand for Magistrate Dumble's supervision. Two young men, strangers to the local police, appeared on a charge of stealing a ride from the C.P.R., and were given the option of paying five dollars to the Court for their ride, or of spending 30 days on the hill to meditate upon the pleasures of it.

A local carter appeared after a week's remand, having spent a week in jail to sober up. He was fined five dollars, which fine, by the way, is by no means the first he has made to the local treasury of justice.

A blacklister was charged with being drunk whilst on the prohibited list. He could not remember where he had procured the intoxicating element, so he was given a week on the hill to cultivate his memory, and will appear in a week for sentence.

A Lake Simcoe Indian who hails from Rama, and who spent the twelfth in the city, laid a charge of theft against a local bartender. The accused elected to be tried summarily, and put in a plea of not guilty. The evidence was heard, and the bartender let off on suspended sentence, after he was found guilty. It appears that the Redskin had spent the twelfth in town, and had put up at a local hotel. He had purchased a Kodak in the morning, and missed the same late in the afternoon. He laid a charge against the bartender yesterday, and the local police got busy and found the missing Kodak in his possession.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE YESTERDAY

PORT HOPE, July 15.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Thomas Grimison, who died in Peterborough on Wednesday, took place yesterday afternoon from the Grand Trunk Railway Station upon the arrival of the noon train, and quite a large number of friends turned out to pay their last tribute of respect.

Deceased's maiden name was Elizabeth Boyd, and she was born in the Township of Hope 62 years ago, but has resided in Peterborough the greater part of her life. Her illness has been of a long duration.

The late Mrs. Grimison is survived by her husband and one son, John, of the C. G. E.; one granddaughter, Audrey Grimison; two grand-sons, Donald and Milton Grimison. Mrs. John Trick of this town is a sister.

Would Give No Free Ad.

They were getting up a charity concert in the small provincial town, and the committee determined to work hard to make a great success of it. The local magistrates and tradesmen were called on, and to one of the latter, a coal merchant, whose native place was somewhere in the north, an appeal was duly made. "A'm verry sorry," was the coal merchant's reply to one of the committee, "but A've stopped subscribin' ae a' these things." "Well, you'll give us an order for an advertisement on the programme?" suggested the caller. The coal merchant shook his head. Then a sudden inspiration seized him. "A tell ye what A'll dae, though," he said. "A'll get ma dochter tae sing for ye." "Right you are," said the other. "What will I put her down for?" "'Keep the Home Fires Burning.'" "Can't be done," declared the concert man emphatically, folding up his papers. "If you won't subscribe I'll take jolly good care you get no free advertisment on our programme."

FIVE BIG SHARKS TRAPPED IN THE MATAWAN CREEK

New York, July 15.—Five sharks, from seven to ten feet long, appeared in Matawan Creek, at the place where a shark killed Lester Stillwell and W. Stanley Fisher on Wednesday afternoon. Bridgeworkers immediately erected a barrier across Matawan Creek, at the drawbridge, a mile below. The sharks are held within this mile of muddy creek, nowhere more than 30 feet in width. At midnight, when the tide was at the ebb, scores of men in motor boats and rowboats, with shotguns, rifles and harpoons searched for the sharks between the drawbridge and the head of deep water at Matawan. The night was cloudy and the main hope of capturing or killing the sharks is for noon, when it again will be low water in the creek. At flood tide the creek is from 15 to 17 feet deep. At low tide it is not more than 7 feet deep, except where there are a few pools.

The heavy downpour of rain following a squall, which swept across Staten Island, Raritan Bay and to sea over Matawan, Keyport section of New Jersey had reduced to a dozen the great throngs of watchers at the old steamship dock, on Matawan Creek, at Matawan, at half past five. Captain Fisher, proprietor of Fisher's bag cleaning factory, was one of those who saw the five sharks.

SWAM WITH SNOUTS OUT OF WATER.

"They were from seven to ten feet long," he said. "They skimmed around near the surface as if they were playing or looking for something to eat. Everybody there could see them plainly. Some of them stuck their snouts up; as if they had horns on their noses. They did not have anything on their noses, but the top of their snouts stuck out so far in front of their mouths, the tops looked like horns."

Mr. Fisher ran into his factory and telephoned to Mayor Rufus Walling of Keyport. Mr. Wallace in a few minutes had a force of men building a barrier across Matawan Creek at the drawbridge which is a mile down the creek from the point where Mr. Fisher reported the sharks. No time was lost in this work and a barrier was constructed which was confidently believed to be strong enough to resist any effort of the sharks to drive through it.

The temporary timber structure under the new steel cantilever drawbridge at this point already had reduced the waterway to a channel not more than twenty feet wide. The barrier placed across the passage and reaching from above the surface at high tide and to the bottom was in place before it seemed likely the sharks could have retraced their way to the mouth of Matawan Creek at Keyport.

HEAVY FORCE ON GUARD.

The sharks were seen on their way up the creek by the bridge builders who had begun to dam the creek when the force of workmen engaged by Mayor Walling arrived and hastened its completion. The shark which killed the Stillwell boy was seen at this bridge on Wednesday on his way up to Matawan, where he found his first prey, where he killed Stanley Fisher and near where he attacked Joseph P. Dunn, the New York schoolboy.

Before the men started on the heavy barrier and immediately after the sharks had passed up the creek fishermen on the shore beside the bridge put down their nets as a temporary barrier, which was not broken.

Mayor Walling was joined by Arthur A. Van Buskirk, Recorder of the Borough of Keyport, in the effort to secure the killing or capture of the five sharks. Commodore John Weseman, of the Keyport Yacht Club, who had ordered their bathing houses closed early was immediately informed of the presence of the sharks in the creek. He called upon the club members to help, and William Woolley, Jr., and several others immediately got out their motor boats, and went to the creek to prevent the escape of the sharks while the barrier at the bridge was being constructed. William Hitchcock, president of the Bayside Gun Club, at Keyport, also co-operated, and members of that club, including Lloyd Armstrong, Palmer Armstrong, Harold Henrickson and Mr. Hitchcock got out their heavy weather oilskins and hunting boats and aided in guarding the creek mouth.

Drag in Vain for Boy's Body.

Every foot of Matawan Creek's bottom, from the head of deep water at Matawan to one hundred yards below this point, at which Stillwell and Fisher were attacked, was carefully scraped over with the oyster tongs in the hands of experienced crews, which worked all yesterday morning and part of the afternoon under direction of Captain Thomas P. Cottrell. They searched for any remnant of the body of the boy. They found not a trace. Captain Cottrell and Captain V. Scott Hopkins, both veteran baymen, lent their efforts to the watchers in boats in the creek last night. They and others from the yacht and gun clubs were soon joined by any army of miscellaneous volunteers.

From all parts of the surrounding country the curois swarmed into Matawan yesterday by train and trolley and automobiles. The men of the town turned out in scores last evening with weapons, patrolling the side of the creek where the swamp did not make walking impracticable. Dozens of men in rowboats went out from Matawan and Cliffwood to aid in the search for the sharks.

One of the tireless watchers whom storm and rain could not drive from the place where he had seen his chum, Lester Stillwell, sink to death, was Albert O'Hara, twelve years old. The O'Hara boy wore stockings and shoes. Under the stocking on his left leg were faint marks of the bruise he received when the tail of the shark struck him and knocked him against the dock piles.

O'Hara was there when the five sharks appeared. He threw stones at them.

How Fisher Was Killed.

Another of the men who figured in the tragedy of Wednesday was present when the sharks appeared yesterday. He is Arthur E. Smith, and he was quiet. He might have been thinking how narrow had been his own escape, because he was first to dive into the creek in search for Stillwell's body.

Fisher, who was killed, dived just after Smith. Paut R. Dolan, a conductor of the Central of New Jersey Railroad was with them.

"When Fisher, George Burlew, Smith and myself went down to see about the boys' story of the shark getting Stillwell," said Dolan, "it was an hour and a half after Stillwell had gone. We saw the same boys in swimming and we did not believe the story. Smith said he would dive if he could get tights big enough for him. He and Fisher got tights and I could not get any. Smith dived in first and then Fisher. They were treading water trying for the body when Fisher was caught by the shark.

Mr. J. D. Nichols, of the American Museum of Natural History, went to Matawan yesterday to investigate the shark invasion of these waters. He is jointly author with Robert C. Murphy of the Brooklyn Museum of a recent paper entitled "Sharks of Long Island" which attracted attention in the scientific world.

Professor Frederick A. Lucas, director of the American Museum of Natural History, said last night that Mr. Nichols had gone to Matawan and was keenly interested in the shark invasion. The old whalers of the New Jersey coast united in declaring that the sharks which have attacked men in those waters were dog sharks. They said these sharks have frequently been seen in the wake of trans-Atlantic liners in the years before war so reduced passengers travel in this port. Such sharks have been sighted as far up as Blackwell's Island in the East river, the whalers said but, never have attacked any human beings because their was plenty shark food in which they called the "outfall" from the passenger steamship.

"That is the most probable theory I have heard and probably is the correct one," said Professor Lucas. "The dog sharks would stick to the deep channels by choice and not wander from them if they found food plentiful. They are feders on offal, but will attack men if hungry.

"I cannot understand why they should have gone up that little narrow creek. I have been seeking to discover if there was some source of carrion or meat refuse in the creek. In its absence it is very hard to understand why the sharks should ascend the creek."

Joseph D. Dunn, the boy whose leg was craped my a shark's teeth, is reported to be doing well in St Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, and his recovery without necessity for amputation is expected.

WOMEN MOTORING

Modern Motor Car Easy for Women to Drive

These days you will see plenty of women driving cars, whether it be in crowded city traffic or on open country roads. One reason for this is the simplicity and efficiency of modern electrical equipment.

Probably the most important part of the electrical system is the storage battery, upon which depends the starting, lighting and often the ignition. Because of the importance of the battery Messrs. Grant and Thorpe, who conduct the local service station for the Willard-Storage Battery Co., say:

"The Willard policy is to make it just as easy as possible for women to drive cars. In a great many cases, the woman takes care of her own car, and in this respect she finds Willard service invaluable. By simply visiting the Willard service station nearest her home she can have a monthly inspection of her battery entirely free of charge. An expert will examine the battery and fill it with pure distilled water if necessary. If some little thing goes wrong with the operation of the electrical system, any Willard man is glad to give the kind of advice that will correct the fault and help the car owner to avoid it in the future.

"A little thing like tightening a connection or cleaning out a terminal means nothing to the man who knows how, but means a good thing to a woman driver who does not want to bother with such things.

WOUNDED BEHEADED BY A STRAY SHELL IN THE JUTLAND FIGHT

In a letter to an American friend here an officer of the Fifth battle squadron of the British navy goes into detail about the battle of Jutland. Of particular interest is what he tells of the Warspite's having a rough handling from the German war ships. He writes that the British superdreadnought lost control of her steering gear and commenced to circle round and round the Warrior.

"The Warrior was very badly damaged, but continued to steam," writes the officer. "It was at this time that the Warspite would seem to have had a rather rough handling from the German battleships. Losing control of her steering gear, which I presume was damaged, she began to circle round and round the Warrior. Then, despite the displacement of her steering gear, the Warspite withdrew from action and returned to port.

"The Warrior, which had 68 of her men killed, was taken in tow the next morning. If a considerable sea had not arisen she, too, would have been brought safely to port."

"It was following the sinking of the Defence that we saw looming through the haze some of the battleships of Admiral Jellicoe's main fleet."

The writer asserts that only one Zeppelin was seen and that when it was fired upon by one of the big guns it fled. The Valiant, declares the officer, was never hit at all, so afr as he is aware. "A lucky shot," he writes, took off the heads of the wounded men who were lying in the medical dressing station and burst against the opposite side of the vessel, utterly destroying all the medical stores, also "gassing the ship's dog."

"Fortunately the doctors were not there at the time, or they would have been killed, but there were some marvellous escapes by men who were behind such small pieces of shelter as a thin iron bulkhead and a wooden bookcase. It was unfortunate that all the morphia, etc., and anæsthetics were wiped out, as the severely wounded men for whom there was no hope, suffered agony before they succumbed. The only alleviation that we had was in the form of small opium pills. All the cabins were practically wiped out on board the Valiant, including nearly all the officers' clothing, which might otherwise have been used as bandages. All that could be done for the wounded was to lay them on the hard deck or mess stools."

This officer goes on to describe the battle, and winds up his account with: "It was a splendid show!"

HUGHES GOES NEXT WEEK

OTTAWA, July 14.—General Sir Sam Hughes plans to go to England in about a week. He would have gone before this but for the report of the Meredith-Duff Commission investigating the fuse question. As soon as it is in and digested, the Minister's friends say he will sail, accompanied by the same staff as last spring, when his visit was abruptly interrupted. His movements, however, will likely be subject to the counsels of Sir Robert Borden, and the Premier's opinion of the situation will doubtless be influenced largely by the character of the commission's report. It is not yet ready and will not be till well on in next week.

Many queries from outside sources have come to Ottawa this week asking as to the likelihood of the Minister's retirement to accept a command or some other position overseas. In the inner circles of the department yesterday they scouted such a suggestion.

1916 FARM LABOURERS' EXCURSIONS VIA CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

According to present indications, the demand for farm labourers in the West this year will greatly exceed the supply. The Canadian Pacific are perfecting arrangements for these excursions, the first of which will be run early in August. Date will be announced later. How Aviators Aid Infantry

Fly Over Battlefield as Low as 300 Feet and Assist in Attack on German Lines

Dompierre, Picardy, via London, July 11.—A string of great balloons — you can count sixteen without glasses — is the first obvious thing that a reporter sees on this front. Next his eyes wander to the uncountable batteries in action. Above them teh aerial telephone stations swing beyond the trajectory of the German gunfire.

On the German side not a single balloon is visible. Fifteen have been burned in the air by secret contrivance, known only to the allies, since the offensive began. The German artillery is blinded because the allies have now obtained the mastery of the air, according to the confident claims of the British and French officers. It is true that, from this point of view, a German aeroplane is rarely sighted while French aviators are constantly on the wing.

Startling Novelty.

A dramatic and startling novelty has been presented by the allied aviators in this great offensive. French and British airmen have actually co-operated in infantry charges. They have swept over the battlefield at as low an altitude as 600 feet and some of the more daring have swooped over the struggling armies at as low a height as 300 feet. These airmen have signalled to the French artillery telephoners the precise position of the German guns and the locations of the German forces waiting for the French assault. They have taken great risks of being hit by the shells of their own guns but, according to the others, every one escaped.

Aerial Torpedoes.

The French have developed on a great scale their aerial torpedoes, which are charged with a higher explosive than the large calibred shell. These torpedoes can be hurled for a distance of half a mile and fired with such rapidity that a second will leave the ejector while the first is still in the air.

Soldiers Respected Drowned Comrade And Left Quietly

WILL TAKE TIME TO STRAIGHTEN OUT TROUBLES AT CAMP BORDEN.

LONDON, July 15.—"A little incident occurred, during the riot the other evening at Camp Borden," said Capt. Riddiford of the 142nd Battalion to a press representative, "which illustrated the fact that the hearts of the men are in the right places. Our men were all within our own areas, and having no part in the riot. The officers were standing round with an eye on the lines, when the parade which was a demonstration of indignation, came our way. Just as they got up, I said to the leader, 'One of our men is lying in here dead. Haven't you respect for a dead comrade?' 'Sure, sair,' he added quickly, then gave the immediate order: 'Right about.'

"At Camp Borden, I believe we are seeing the beginning of a great national military movement, but, because it is in the beginning, we are going through what pioneers always have to go through. We are the pioneers in this case."

"What caused the men to riot? Well, there was the heat, they were tired out and upset, and also there was the unceremonious haste of the departure from London. Gen. Logie managed the situation most skillfully, and has won the respect of the men, not to say something stronger. He reminded them that he, too, was away from his wife and family, and also enduring hardships, though to a less degree, perhaps. However, this was balanced by his greater responsibility. He had to be up earlier than the men and stay up later. When he put things on a comrade basis, it got to them.

"There is democracy in the camp, just as far as it is not inconsistent with discipline. Officers, instead of helmets, are wearing straw hats just like the men. Things will shape up in time, but it will take time, as these things always do, and, no doubt the training there will be excellent."

Capt. Riddiford, who accompanied the remains of Pte. Victor Kane, the private who was drowned on Sunday, to St. Thomas, is enjoying a little visit with his wife and two children before returning to the camp to-day at noon.

Every third garage in Canada is a Ford sales and service station

Service is only important to you when you need it—then it is very important.

Even the best of motor cars, sometimes require attention. If you are a Ford owner, a third of Canada's garages assure you this attention when you need it—without inconvenience and at a minimum of expense.

Every one of the five hundred and fifty Ford Dealers in Canada carries a complete stock of Ford spare parts and is competent to make repairs and adjustments when occasion demands.

No matter where you go, Ford Service is never out of reach if you drive a Ford.

Like the Ford car itself—Ford Service is universal.

Beware of Fake Baking Powder Tests

("THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute quantities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Corp. Chas. M. Lorne is in town from Camp Borden, the guest of Miss Irene Craig, Stewart Street.

Messrs. Chas. Huffman, Harry Huffman, Dr. McClellan, T. H. Glover and Bobby Dutton of Toronto, left to-day for a week's holidays at Stoney Lake.

Miss Harriette Pierce, A.T.C.M., 174 Lock street, left this morning to spend her summer vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Comte, Montreal, Que.

Mr. Herbert King, who had the misfortune to tear the ligiments in his ankle about ten days ago, is out of the hospital. He will require to be about on crutches some time. His friends in Chicago and New York, who have had the pleasure of hearing his fine voice at formal and informal affairs, are making deligent enquiries about him. To-day he received a letter from Vlare Briggs, the great American Cartoonist on the New York Tribune, hoping for a speedy recovery.

PUPILS OF MR. JOHN ALLEN SUCCESSFUL IN MUSIC EXAMS

Pupils of Mr. John Allan made a splendid showing at the recent music examinations, their success reflecting upon their individual talent and the ability of their teacher:

Miss Marjorie Mather, 16 Inverlea Street, has been most successful in both her written and practical music examinations held recently in connection with the Toronto College of Music. She obtained 1st class Honours in Harmony, and 1st class Honours in the History of Music.

Miss Mary Harstone, 565 Water Street, passed Toronto Conservatory Junior Piano also obtaining Honours.

Miss Grace Todd, 456 Aylmer street, passed Toronto Conservatory in Junior Singing, obtaining Honours.

Miss Edith Smith, Gilmour street, also was successful in Toronto Conservatory Junior Piano.

LUNAR ECLIPSE A GRAND SPECTACLE

The marvellous perfection of the solar system was again manifested in the partial eclipse of the moon last night. Scheduled to the minute its upper limb darkened and finally became obscure as the shadow of the earth passed slowly and steadily over four-fifths of the lunar surface. Some might have fancied that the earth, affected by a lunacy, induced by the midsummer heat, had staggered and strayed from his orbit on a rampage in the solar universe; or that Atlas, peeved by the cold, unresponsive stare of lovely Luna, threatened to remove her entirely from a place in the sun. But there is nothing fanciful in the calculations of those scientists who have explored the depths of the universe. Last night's eclipse was timed to the minute and the schedule followed with an exactness railway despatchers may envy but never hope to achieve. The earth's shadow extends 857,000 miles into space. Since the moon is only 239,000 miles distant from us, that is its average distance, it occasionally passes through our shadow as it did last night, thus providing a lunar eclipse. The moon's diameter is 2,162 miles and although the terrestrial shadow attenuates to a point, the moon enters it where its diameter is 5,700 miles. Thus three may be a complete lunar eclipse. Last night, however, the moon traversed only a section of the shadow.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank you for the prompt payment to me of the amount of a policy that your Company issued on the life of my daughter Lillian Francis, who was drowned at Burleigh Falls on June 27th.

I was more than surprised to have my claim recognized as I had not paid the premiums on this policy for over a year and I supposed it was out of benefit. I am more than pleased with the generous treatment I have received.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. Rhoda Ann Smith.

WEDDING BELLS

JUBY—BESTARD.

A very quiet, but pretty wedding took place on Monday evening, July 10th, when Miss Florence Bestard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bestard, became the bride of Mr. James Juby of this city. The bride looked very charming in a dress of seal brown with hat to match. Rev. R. B. Grobb, Rector of All Saints Church, performed the ceremony. On return from their honeymoon trip the newly-married couple will reside at 242 1-2 Charlotte Street.

OBITUARY

JEREMIAH MAHONEY.

The death is recorded of Jeremiah Mahoney, of Mount Irwin, after a lingering illness. His father predeceased him three months ago. A mother, two brothers, namely, Victor and Pius, and two sisters, Elizabeth and Loretto, are left to mourn his loss. The funeral took place on Thursday last to the Roman Catholic cemetery, Galway.

THOMAS S. WESTON.

The death occurred this morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, of Thomas Stephen Weston, who lived at 4 Knox Street, East City. The deceased was born in Sussex, England, thirty-three years ago. Mr. Weston was ill but a short time, being taken sick on Sunday last whilst he was on his way to church. He leaves behind to mourn his loss a wife and five children.

The funeral will leave the family residence on Monday afternoon at 2.30 and will proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

JANE LYTLE.

Death came very suddenly at noon today to Jane Lytle, widow of the late F. McGee. The deceased lady was 75 years of age and died at the residence of her son, Mr. H. McGee, 280 Park Street.

Mrs. McGee has lived in the city for some years and lived formerly in Bobcaygeon. Funeral particulars will be given later.

Lakefield Boy Dies For Empire

Pte. Wilfred Hull, Killed in France on June 27

LAKEFIELD, July 14.—A Lakefield name has been added to the long list of those who have made the supreme sacrifice for the Empire. This (Friday) afternoon Mr. John Hull received a telegram stating that his son, Pte. Wilfred Hull, had been killed in action in France on June 27. This is the first Lakefield boy that has been killed in the present war, and the news has cast a gloom over the whole village. Pte. Hull being a great favourite with all. Pte. Wilfred Hull enlisted with the 39th Battalion at Port Hope and went overseas with the Third Canadian Contingent. While training in England he was transferred to the signal section of the 13th Highland Battalion and served with that battalion in France up to the time of his death. Mr. and Mrs. Hull and family have the warm sympathy of the whole community in their sad bereavement.

SIN OF BUSINESS DISHONESTY HELD SERIOUS OFFENSE

With quaint metaphors and deft thrusts at commercial sins the Rev. Byron Stauffer began his mission at Crescent Street Presbyterian Church, Montreal.

"I found a Toronto preacher selling Edmonton real estate in London, England," he said "My experience with ex-preachers has not been happy. A preacher in business is usually a buccaneer. But what do you think of this business of selling building lots 5,000 miles away? It is baneful, villainous, thieving. It serves the people right if they get stung. A man who wanted to sell me lots in a town-to-be where a United States steel corporation is going to build its Canadian plant said, 'The workingmen will have to buy our lots. They can't help themselves if they want to be near their work.

Primer Ethics.

"That is a question for the primer class in ethics. Have I a right to make a couple of hundred dollars on a poor workingman's prospective home, and thus encourage slum conditions? Some day the Government will control the selling of real estate."

Mr. Stauffer pleaded for respect for religious vows made in youth. The tendency was to make light of them in later years.

"Don't say you were in your veal period then," said the preacher. "The veal period is better than the tough period. When you were young your ideals were fresh from the mint. Great reforms seemed just around the corner. Is the gulf between what is and what ought to be deeper now than it used to be? It is because you are broader and more tolerant, eh? Well, a man can be so broad as to be very shallow and a woman can be so tolerant as to bid farewell to the Seventh Commandant. Do not fall out of the ranks of progress. One or two more fights and many a long campaign for reforms will have been won, and if you don't live up to your earlier convictions and have a hand in the fray, you'll feel as sick as the young fellow who ought to be in Flanders will feel when the boys come marching home."

Sins of Poverty.

"There are sins of poverty and sins of prosperity and I believe God will deal more lightly with the former. I saw an old woman steal a chunk of ice down in St. Antoine Antine street. Had I been a policeman, I suppose she might have got ten days, but there may be some capitalist, even in Montreal who, if he was punished at the same rate, would have to spend about ten million days in the pen. The temptations of prosperity are so subtle. I've had symptoms of them myself and I'm about as far from wealth as an Esquimo baby 1st from the infantile paralysis epidemic. Given a bit too much money and the tools for devilry that go with it, and it won't take long to try a man's moral metal. We haven't felt the rigors of war yet. When the severities of the campaign really come home to us, many who are now frivolous will bend the knee and call upon the God of their fathers, and He will abundantly pardon.

TRAGEDY OF POLAND WORRIES PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, July 14.—An appalling story of conditions in Poland was told to President Wilson to-day by a delegation representing the Polish societies of Chicago, who were presented to the President by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska. The President was informed that, in the portion of Poland covered by the Russian armies in their retreat and now in the possession of the German forces, practically every child under 7 years of age had died of starvation, and that children had gnawed their own arms to satisfy the pangs of hunger.

President Wilson said he would do everything possible to overcome the difficulty of getting food into the stricken regions, but indicated that the obstacle presented by the disagreement of the German and British Governments over the manner of distribution of food sent to Poland with the consent of Great Britain was very great and he could do nothing unless Germany and Great Britain yielded.

"This is a matter," said the President, which has engaged my thoughts constantly, I might say without exaggeration, and I do not think that there is any matter to which the State Department has devoted a more consant and repeated effort than that of trying to get relief into Poland. I know the terrible conditions, the tragical conditions that exist there, and nobody could know them without feeling his heart torn with the knowledge.

"Just the other day we issued a special appeal to the Government concerned to make concessions and allow this humane thing to be done. Now I am simply up against a stone wall in the matter. If they do not yield obviously there is nothing I can do. I cannot force food in there without complicating the situation.

and without, I conjecture, doing greater disservice to Poland than service. Her only friends are apparently at a disadvantage.

"But I can assure you that every kind of pressure that can be brought will be brought and is being brought in the accomplishment of this object. I desire, as well as all those associated with me desire, to help her, and as a reminder it was most unnecessary that you should come. I mean I was not forgetful of Poland and was not likely to be forgetful of her, but that makes your visit none the less impressive and none the less welcome, and you may be sure I will continue to do everything that is possible."

The committee told the President that what was now needed was permission from Great Britain to allow ships carrying food to pass the British blockade and assurances from Germany that the food sent from the United States would not be used for military purposes.

They Wad Let Him Slide Doon.

A gentleman of large means and atheistical tendencies had erected a handsome mausoleum for himself in the parish churchyard. It was a massive piece of masonry, and presented an aspect of considerable strength. One day the gentleman met one of the parish church elders coming out of the churchyard. "Weel," said the owner of the mausoleum, "ye've been up seein' that erection o' mine?" "'Deed hae I," replied the elder. "It'll tak' a man, a' his time tae rise oot o' yon on the Day o' Judgment," said the atheist mockingly. "My man," said the elder, "ne'er fash yer thoomb about that. Whan that day comes they'll juist tak' the boddom oot o' yer concern an' let ye slide doon."

Enemy is Bringing Up Every Available Reserve in the Hope of Stalling the Russian Steam Roller---Fall of Kovel Would Be a Staggering Blow to the Central Powers---British Forces Advance a Total Distance of Four Miles

THE SITUATION IMPROVES

PETROGRAD, July 17.—Profoundly impressed by the steady Russian advance, which see-saws first at this point and then at that, the Germans are massing enormous forces before Kovel. They are bringing up every available reserve in the hope of stalling the new Russian mowing machine. The present comparative calm is deemed here to be a mere prelude to a resumption of heavy and important fighting. The fall of Kovel now would be a staggering blow to the Central Powers, completely disrupting their plans. The Russians apparently do not lack ammunition. Cossacks from the Don, Urals, fresh young giants from Siberia and elsewhere, are fighting like game cocks striving to outdo each other in dare-devil charges. Russian officers are satisfied not only with the situation on the Russian front, but with the spirit of the troops, which they declare was never higher.

FOUR-MILE ADVANCE.

LONDON, July 17.—British forces in reaching the third line of the enemy trenches advanced four miles beyond the original Teuton trenches.

Belgium Relief Treasurer Proud of Americans' Work

A. J. Hemphill, of New York, Tells About Aid for 600,000 Destitute Children---Some Germans Would Confiscate Supplies of Stricken Country for Their Own Use

London, July 14.—A. J. Hemphill, of New York, treasurer of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, has returned from a trip of inspection which thoroughly covered the operations of the commission in Belgium and Northern France, and he expressed himself to the Associated Press as proud of the work which Americans are doing in the occupied areas.

In order to procure permission to enter Belgium Mr. Hemphill had to go to Berlin, where he spent several days. He said:

"I was greatly impressed while in Berlin with the difference of opinion which exists among prominent Germans as to the advisability of permitting continuation of the present system of relieving the Belgians. The shortage of the food supplies in Germany has given rise to considerable criticism of the German government's action in agreeing to the Allies' demand that the whole of the native food supplies in Belgium should be handed over to the relief organization for the sole use of Belgians. An influential German section m ntains that at least a portion of the native supplies produced in Belgium are the rightful fruits of conquest, and that as long as there is any possibility of German women and children and German soldiers being in want of food, Belgian's native production should be confiscated and the Belgians left to the mercy of the Allies.

"Another internal criticism levelled at the German government is that the policy of permitting relief supplies to be distributed merely prolongs the passive resistance which is still practically universal among the seven million Belgians who are under German rule. However, in spite of the serious opposition on both of these scores I am confident that the more humane policy authorized by the German chancellor will continue to prevail.

A DECEPTIVE SURFACE.

"When I got to Brussels my first impression was that everythin- was normal, except in the absence of vehicles owing to the scarcity of horses, and the prohibition of motors except to a few. The people are well clad, the shops are open, and everyone goes about his daily life much the same as in London or New York. At the markets I saw people buying and selling—mostly vegetables—and business being freely transacted in the ordinary way. That was on the surface. When I went to the relief stations, where more than 30 per cent. of the population, who are wholly destitute, get their soup and other provisions, I saw in the waiting queues, not only the needy class that one would expect to see, but well dressed men, women and children. In Brussels and elsewhere the human lines that daily wait for the small ration provided by the charity of the world, are marked by this same sad feature. Destitution is not only widespread, but there are now on the bread lines thousands of the upper classes who never dreamed of coming to such a pass.

"It is only after being in Brussels for a little time and after visiting Charleroi, Malines, Antwerp, Liege, and other places, that one realises how misleading are the first impressions. The outward appearance of normality is sustained only by the fact that relief to the value of more than £1,200,000 is, so to speak, injected into the country every month. The external calm is an amazing tribute to the efficiency of the system whereby the relief organisation provides and distributes to the whole nation supplies, without which there would be chaos and unthinkable suffering.

THOROUGH DISTRIBUTION.

"Both in American and England a good deal of uneasiness naturally exists as to the relief supplies actually reaching the Belgians. I discussed this point thoroughly with responsible Belgians and with the Americans who are supervising the distribution, besides keeping my own eyes open for any indications of confiscation by the Germans. As a result I am convinced that the relief supplies sent into Belgium reach, in their entirety, the Belgian people. Except local incidents always remedied I heard of no instance whatever of the Germans breaking their guarantees to respect the food which the allied governments allow to be taken through the blockade.

"I was treated with the utmost consideration by the German officials and I was impressed with the fact that there is a genuine desire on the part of the Landsturm officers who govern Belgium to get along with the situation with as little friction as possible.

"The Belgians still live from day to day in the undimmed expectancy of regaining their freedom. I might almost say they live on hope.

"Under ordinary circumstances the population would be pauperised by free feeding of the unemployed. This is not the case in Belgium.

"In one canteen which I inspected a man came up and made a complaint. There was no meat he said in his soup. He had long given up the idea of getting meat as part of his daily meal, but if he was to live, he declared, he must get some of the nouishment that meat provides. He was right. There was practically no meat in the soup. But what was one to do? Such meat as there is in the country is $1.50 a pound.

600,000 DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

"Among the wholly destitute in Belgium there are 600,000 children, who are entirely dependent upon the tender heartedness of the outside world. The problem of keeping them up and even of keeping them alive is becoming more and more grave. The relief organisation has just started an extraordinarily interesting experiment to meet the emergency of short milk supplies in industrial centres. It has asked the peasants to lend free of charge for one year one cow from each of their herds to a communal herd which will provide milk for the children. In Antwerp the herd now numbers more than 400 cattle. In other centres the peasants are responding excellently to the appeal of the American delegates. At the end of the year the cows will be returned to their owners, who will be compensated for the loss of any of their cattle.

"It was a relief to turn from the complexities and the hardships apparently inevitable in connection with the feeding of these unfortunate children to the splendid results of America's recent response to the appeal for clothing. In Brussels I visited the distributing centres and there saw huge quantities of cloth and garments from the United States being distributed to different parts of the country. In Antwerp I saw 800 Belgian women and girls under one roof busily employed in making up their share of this cloth into suits or dresses or altering ready made clothing. The material over which they bent their heads had come from every state in the union, from California to New York. I only wish that the generous donors were with me to see the joy it brought and also the business like way in which it was prepared for local requirements and then discriminately given to those most in need.

"In one place in Northern France they received a supply of American blankets. By good fortune they happened to have all the blankets that they wanted but were badly in need of clothes, so the blankets were made up into warm suits for the men. The ingenuity was worthy of the people, but even in war time it was a bit odd to see a man in trousers around the upper or lower part of which runs the red or blue stripe which once marked the edge of a blanket.

"My visit to Belgium gave me my first opportunity to see for myself the actual working of the relief system. It is a marvel of efficiency and devotion."

USE OF THE SEWING MACHINE IN SCHOOLS

Educators Differ as to When it Should be Introduced.

The United States Bureau of Education sent to public school teachers in all parts of the country a request for opinion as to the age girls should be taught the use of the sewing machine. The bureau has just made public the answers to its question, which show a wide variety of opinions.

One teacher states the case thus: "Machine sewing should be introduced as soon as any garments are made the seams of which should be sewed on the machine. I think machine sewing and hand sewing can be taught at the same time. We ought not to teach the sewing of garments by hand where it is possible to make them on the machine, for many children should be taught a minimum of hand work. I question whether I would teach drafting at any time. Commercial patterns should be used from the beginning, as soon as garment-making commences."

A superviser writes: "Machine sewing in the sixth grade and up. Commercial patterns from the fifth grade up." The above quotation does not concern a theory, it is a condition in the excellent department under this woman's supervision.

A child of ten years of age who comes from a careful home can be taught to use the machine with care."

Another superviser writes: "Hand sewing should precede machine sewing only a short time. Machine sewing should be introduced early and parallel the hand work throughout the entire course. In this day and age it is more necessary to be able to use a machine than to use a needle. In a properly arranged sewing course the use of the machine will not interefere with learning to sew with a needle. A little embroidery introduced at intervals throughout a course will give interesting and stimulating needle drill, and can be used as a means for correction with design." Rather strongly, but perhaps truly, she adds: "It is a crime to teach girls to make underwear, etc, by hand, for life and time are too precious to be used in that way."

One speaks from practical experience thus: "We begin machine sewing in the sixth grade. We believe in using commercial patterns all along the way. We begin with commercial patterns in the sixth grade, but teach drafting in the first year high school, also how to adjust commercial patterns."

A woman, known from coast to coast and famous for her influence on home economics teaching, advises in this manner: "Machine sewing can be begun as early as the sixth grade. Drafting I would suggest only for use in high schools as a means, then only of interpretation of patterns, and not drafting for drafting's sake. The commercial pattern can be used as early as the fifth or sixth grades."

Yet another woman of wide experience states: "Machine sewing should be introduced as soon as the pupils are large enough and old enough to run a sewing machine, preferably about the sixth grade. The use of commercial patterns is a very important part of the work. I am of the opinion that the drafting of patterns should only be taught in so far as it will be helpful in the modification and alteration of commercial patterns."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Heroine Of My Story

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Sitting at my desk one balmy spring morning, rather than work I looked out through the open window.

At a window opposite a woman perhaps midway between twenty-five and thirty sat at a typewriter writing letters from stenographic notes. She was dressed in mourning.

A sign of widowhood furnished food for a story that I was weaving, with her for the heroine. She was refined looking and comely. Quite likely her husband had left her in poverty, and she was eking out a miserable existence by hammering a typewriter from morning till night. I wondered if the sleek looking man I saw in an adjoining room, who seemed to be the manager, had a wife and if he would not fall in love with the widow and make her comfortable. But when he arose from his desk and stood with his hands in his pockets looking out through the window I changed the direction of my romance and hoped if he did fall in love with the widow she would refuse him, because I did not like the expression on his face. There was something malignant in it.

* * * * * * *

My story seems to be coming out as I first planned it. While I was dreaming this afternoon, instead of attending to business, as I should have done, the man in the next room to the widow tapped a bell. The young widow arose and, taking up her stenographic implements, disappeared to reappear in his room. Taking a seat beside him, she took down several different dictations. Then when she was about to leave he said something to her that caused her to resume her seat.

From his averted gaze and the expression on the man's face I knew that he was making love to her. And I also knew from something, I knew not what—but any woman will understand what I mean—that there was no response to what he was saying. When he ceased to speak she arose and he took her hand, but she gently drew it away and, without a word, left the room. At her own window she faced me just long enough for me to see that she was not pleased.

* * * * * * *

I have now been watching the widow for a week, and it is evident that she can marry any of the men connected with the office she chooses, for they all seem to be in love with her. I don't blame them, for if I were a man, and not miserably poor, as I am, I would march straight over to the office where she works and propose to her myself.

What troubles me is that she won't do what I want her to do. I have heard from authors that their characters are at times very obstinate, and now I find a case in point. There is a man who I think would make her a good husband. He comes in to the office evidently on business and never fails to get a few words with her. She treats him with great consideration, but I can see from the expression of his face—he always faces the window when he talks to her—that her replies to what he says are disappointing.

* * * * * * *

This morning there was a scene between the manager and the widow. He said something to her that sent her out of his room. He followed her to her desk, where she was putting on her wraps, and he doubtless apologized, for she took off her hat, which she had put on, and was evidently pacified.

It is my opinion that the reason the widow won't marry any of her suitors is that her heart is buried in a grave. I wish she would marry my favorite, but she evidently gives him no encouragement. He stood in one of the windows facing me this morning, and I so longed to give him encouragement to persevere that I looked it, and I'm afraid I smiled.

* * * * * * *

I am very much displeased with myself. The widow's suitor at whom I smiled encouragement came into the office this morning, and I'm sure he made a pretense of business in order to see me. The manager brought him up to me and introduced him, saying to me that he had recommended me to the man as one who would do some work for him. The stranger was very polite and has a winning way.

* * * * * * *

I shall never make a novelist, that's certain. My story of the widow turned out entirely different from what I intended. It was all her fault. The man I wanted her to marry she would not have, and what do you think? I had to console him by marrying him myself. It seems that I was entirely mistaken in my assumptions with regard to him. He was a cousin of hers, though more like a brother. He says that he one day caught sight of me at my window and after that used to come to see his cousin in order to see me. I tell him I can't swallow that.

But the widow. Fate was doing things without my knowledge. One morning a man in the uniform of an officer of merchant marine burst into her room and caught her in his arms. She seemed to be in a swoon for a time; then she cried over him and caressed him, and I was sure he was her husband come to life.

And so he was. His vessel had been wrecked somewhere on the African coast, and all on board had been either lost or made slaves. It was a long while before he attained his liberty, to learn that he had been reported dead.

That was the last I saw of his wife as a typewriter, though now we are great friends.

Mimics Among Birds.

Birds, from the ostrich down, are imitative. The ostrich, where he lives alone, is silent, but in a country where lions abound he roars. Why? Because for centuries, admiring the lion's roar, he gradually learned to roar himself. Among small birds, buntings imitate pipits, and greenfinches imitate yellowhammers. They seek their food in the winter together, and they gradually steal each other's calls. The jay is an insatiable imitator. Some jays will include in their repertory not only the cries of songs of other birds, but also the bleat of the lamb and the neigh of a horse. Even the nightingale imitates. In a nightingale's song it is sometimes quite easy to detect phrases he has borrowed from other birds.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill. — "While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

THE "WEE CHAPS" PROVED VERY BIG IN BATTLE LINE

GERMANS DON'T CRY "COCK-A-DOODLE-DO" NOW AT THE BANTAMS.

The following remarkable eulogy of little men in battle is penned by Mr. Philip Gibbs, the special correspondent with the British forces in the field. He writes, under date of June 17:

A month or two ago I chanced to be at a port in France when a transport ship came in with some new troops. The men filed down the gangway and then formed up on the quayside before being entrained, and as they did so I rubbed my eyes, and wondered what had happened ..... These men were somewhat different from all the other troops I have seen arriving in France on their way to the battlefields. They were small men. Lord! They were all wee chaps, standing no more than 5 feet 1 inch above their boots, and for the most part less than that.

A word gave the clue to the mystery. The Bantams! Why, of course, these were the first drafts of the famous Bantam division of which rumors had come out from England. That was one of Kitchener's ideas, which came to him one day in Chester, when he saw a number of small men who were below the standard of military height. Why not enrol them in a separate unit of their own?

'I can get you 3,000 of them, sir," said the mayor of Chester, "and they are very keen to go."

Before long there were 12,000 of them, recruited from Cheshire and Lancashire, Warwickshire and Gloucestershire, and beyond the Tweed; and now a whole division are in the enemy's fighting line, and doing jolly well.

ENEMY'S COCK-A-DOODLE-DO!

It is told in the trenches that when they came into the line for the first time, the Germans, who were expecting them (they generally seem to know) called out "Cock-a-doodle-do!" Well, they don't crow now over the Bantams. It is the Bantams who crow over them in No Man's Land, which has been their Tom Tiddler's ground, where they go a-hunting on night patrols.

They are not hurt by a little friendly chaff from the big British soldiers, who think that length means quality, forgetting that Napoleon was not very big in his boots, and that Roberts war a bantam.

"They'll be devils in a charge if they can once get up to the elbow rest and hop over the parapet," said an officer, who was "chipping" one of theirs.

"Give us time," said the bantam officer, "and we'll show you that a yard and a half of human courage can go a long way in a Boche trench. You lanky fellows are sometimes a bit weak in the heart, I am told. And a bit soft in the head now and then."

Well, the Bantams have not been long in proving that you can't measure a man's soul with a foot rule. In the trenches of Neuve Chapelle, where the fire steps were raised for them, they are enduring the ordeal of heavy bombardment with a stoic courage worthy of the most hardened troops, and have shown a fine spirit of initiative and gallantry in attack as well as in defence.

It was the Gloucesters of the Bantam Division who made the raid on the German trenches opposite Neuve Chapelle on June 8th, mentioned in the official communique. They killed a number of Germans—big fellows all—and brought back a Maxim gun. I know the weight of that gun, for I have tried to lift one end of it, and it is wonderful how these little Bantams managed to get it across 250 yards of No Man's Land, partly carrying it and partly dragging it, like ants with a heavy bit of wood. They also carried back their wounded, which is no light task in such a place.

But there are Greathearts among these little men, and no giant of six feet three could have shown finer courage than Pte. Lee, who was wounded in both legs by shrapnel near Neuve Chapelle, when several of his companions fell in a night patrol to the enemy's barbed wire. Upon hearing the cry of a wounded friend, he turned back at once, and carried the other Bantam for 80 yards in No Man's Land, until he himself collapsed.

In the same adventure Sergeant Hare, who was also wounded, went back four times into No Man's Land, helping to carry back his comrades.

During an intense bombardment on May 8 when the telephone wires were cut by shell fire, Corp. O'Connor took charge of a party of linesmen, and at great personal risk, restored all communication at the end of an hour.

On the same night Pte. W. Townley and Sapper H. E. Holmes were in the signallers' dug-out, when a shell blew in the roof and sides. Both men were partially buried, but remained at their posts and kept up communication as far as possible until they were rescued and relieved.

SMART, MERRY LITTLE MEN.

It was a night when many of the Bantams showed a real heroism, not losing their nerve, although many of their friends were killed and wounded, and helping each other with great devotion and self sacrifice. Two Bantams of the Field Ambulance—W. Jarman and W. Abbertan—went as volunteers to an advanced dressing station, which was over a mile away, over a country swept with heavy shell fire, and having brought up field dressings, spent the night in helping to carry the wounded down a road swept by machine gun fire. These are only a few cases out of many brave actions during the last few weeks by the Bantams who have been awarded many decorations.

It was a pleasure to go among them, as I did yesterday, with the general of their division, who has trained them since they were first assembled. They are smart, merry little men, and they come up to the salute as if it were a personal greeting between them and their chief, as it really is and should be.

A platoon of them was paraded so that we might see the way they carry their field kit when they are on the march—a very light pack compared with the ordinary equipment. A French woman was watching them out of a window and smiled in a motherly way at these warriors, and it is with such a smile of affection and admiration that they are greeted down the roads of war, for the Bantams are fine little fighters, and if I were a German in his trench, I should not cry Cock-a-doodle-do! when they came my way.

British Columbia is sending a bantam regiment to the front, which will doubtless give as good an account of itself as its English prototype.

Appeals For Exemption From Military Service

LONDON, July 14.—Many and varied are the appeals made before the London tribunals for exemption from military service.

Since its establishment the Appeals Tribunal for the County of London have received 6,553 appeals, and have decided 5,798 cases, leaving 755 outstanding.

An interesting case that came before the House of Commons Tribunal was that of a widow who applied on behalf of her only remaining son, and told the court that her husband, who died some weeks ago, was a Mutiny veteran, who, at the age of 19, lost his leg at the siege of Lucknow. A young son was in the army, and she was now wholly dependent on the son for whom she made application.

Postponement for three months was granted.

"Most Disgraceful Case."

"I must say you have a considerable nerve even to make this application," Mr. Mclean told a solicitor who appeared for four Jews engaged in a wholesale clothing warehouse. "The youngest of them is 19, and the eldest 28, and not one of them has attested. It is a most disgraceful case, and the appeal is refused.

"Pickled' Horses."

A horse slaughterer was given conditional exemption at the Essex Appeal Court. It was stated that horses had now to be poleaxed owing to bullets being wanted elsewhere. An R.S.P.C.A. inspector said horses were not sent abroad as formerly. They were killed and "pickled" in London.

Father's Appeal.

"It is idle to appeal for a young man of 23 who is employed in filling Santa Claus stockings with sweets or toys," said the chairman in refusing a father's appeal on behalf of his son.

The father said they were building up a trade which formerly went to Germany, and his son was in charge of the export department.

"There are fifty girls working for us," said the young man "and they want watching."

"You are the watchdog, I suppose," retorted the chairman.

"It is a tricky job," remarked the father.

"There are other tricky jobs of greater national importance than this," replied Mr. Richardson.

A "Disgraceful" Claim.

Messrs. J. N. Richardson, Sons and Orden, the well known firm of linen manufacturers of Belfast, appealed on behalf of five men attached to their London office. Of these, one was a traveller in handkerchiefs and two were travellers in heavy goods.

Regarding the former claim, Capt. Eliot, the military representative, observed:

"I do not think there is any necessity for an able-bodied traveller to go round London selling handkerchiefs when there is a war on. It is disgraceful."

"What do those letters mean?" asked Mr. Mead at West London of an applicant who had the letters "W. E. W." in brass in his coat.

"I'm a window-cleaner," replied the man. "It's our badge — 'West of England Way.'"

Mr. Mead: "I thought it was the badge of some regiment you belonged to."

Village Publican.

Among the cases before the various tribunals was a publican who keeps the only inn in the village of Hevingham, Norfolk, who claimed exemption before the local tribunal on conscientious grounds. He said he claimed exemption as a "child of God.' Asked if keeping a public-house was consistent with Christianity, he said: "If you had proper Christians keeping public-houses you would have no drunkards." His application was refused.

NATIONS BEFORE GOD'S JUDGMENT BAR

'Weighed in the Balances and Found Wanting.'

Great Judgment Day of the Nations Now Begun—Professedly Christian Kingdoms Showing Their True Character — Responsibility Proportionate to Light and Opportunities Ignored—Vast Majority Christian Only in Name—The People Have Not Been Properly Taught—Empty Forms of Godliness—Selfishness Behind All the Trouble—True Christians Also Being Judged — Deliverance of the Faithful Near.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Leasure Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Newport, R.I., July 16.—Pastor Russell delivered a forceful address to-day before the I. B. S. A. Convention being held here. His text was, "The Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." (Deuteronomy 13:3.) He said in part:

While this text is applicable to the Lords' people in a special way, yet as we look out over the world to-day we can realize that the Lord is surely judging the nations, especially those that have been greatly blessed with His favor. Consider Europe, for instance. How wonderfully Europe has been favored with opportunities for coming to a knowledge of the Lord! Ever since the days of Jesus and the Apostles Europe has had Gospel privileges, more or less. Of course we are not to hold the people of to-day responsible for everything in the past. To do so would be unfair. But we are to consider that in a general way the influences of Christianity have spread over the world, especially in Europe. After an era of blessings would follow persecutions, thus developing a loyalty of heart amongst the people; and in those early years seeds were sown that have had good opportunities for being watered and bringing forth good fruit.

Gradually the world has come to esteem itself to be Christian. The nations of Europe are generally styled Christendom. Nevertheless the Bible declares that the world is not Christian, and has not the spirit of Christ in its activities. The world therefore is self-deceived. To the extent that the nations have had light, to that extent they are responsible. The Bible does not show, however, that the world has full responsibility. Only those have full responsibility who have taken the step of entire consecration to God through Christ, only those who have been begotten of the Holy Spirit. These have been illuminated and have come into the highest place of opportunities and blessings in the Lord. These have a deep insight into His Word that no others possess. Accordingly these have had an amount of light that brings a life or death responsibility. The World's Judgment Has Begun.

But so far as the world is concerned, we can readily see that in proportion as they have seen they should be required to do. We can feel quite sure that God would expect more of the peoples of Europe than of those of Asia and Africa, who have little knowledge of Him. So just at this time, when Bible chronology shows that God's lease of power to the Gentile governments has expired, we see exactly what we should expect—that He is permitting these nations to pass judgment upon themselves, so to speak. He is permitting them to show themselves, to manifest their real condition of mind and heart, to demonstrate whether or not they have made proper use of their opportunities and blessings in the way of development in righteousness.

The nations of Christendom have had much to say about the Lord. His name is to be found in all these countries. The nations have held aloft the cross of Christ in an outward way. They have many places for prayer and worship. They have abounded in forms of godliness. They have had much wealth and treasure. They have had hosts of priests and preachers of all denominations. With all the advantages and experiences of the past nineteen centuries, we might have expected Europe to be in a much better condition than it is—that it would have learned much more than it has as to what is the spirit of the Lord and what is not.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

The Apostle Paul tells how we may know the Lord's spirit. It is manifested in gentleness, meekness, patience, godliness, self-control, brotherly kindness, love. (Galatians 5: 22, 23.) Wherever we find true Christianity we find these fruits of the Holy Spirit. With the sole exception of Turkey, these peoples of Europe claim to be Christian. Now the Lord would prove these nations, not that He might Himself know their condition, but that they might know. Both the Father and our Lord Jesus well know that the nations are Christian in name only, that the vast majority have not taken the steps necessary to bring them into the family of God. The Bible shows that no one has a right to approach God except in His appointed way—through Christ as the Redeemer and Advocate. And Christ will be the Advocate of only those who come to God in His appointed way.

God has arranged that whoever would come to Him must first accept by faith Christ's finished work on Calvary, and that they surrender themselves fully to God, to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross daily and follow Me." (Luke 9:23.) The Lord knows that the masses of the people have not done this, that comparatively few have accepted these terms. When people are asked whether they have taken these steps, they admit that they have not. They say, "We have never had it preached to us that we must be begotten of the Holy Spirit before we can become children of God."

Loosing the Four Winds.

The people have not been taught how to approach God in the right way. Therefore the vast majority are not His children at all. They have never passed from darkness to light, from condemnation to justification, through faith in Christ Jesus and consecration to God. Consequently they are still in their sins. They seem to have no proper conception as respects their privilege of presenting themselves living sacrifices to God, which is their reasonable service. (Romans 12: 1, 2.) Judged by what they themselves tell us, not many have taken the Scriptural steps here pointed out. The Bible assures us that only a "little flock" enter the strait gate and walk the narrow way.

God forbid that we should be understood to say that there are no saints in Europe. We believe that in all these nations God has a true people, those who are fully trusting Him and are fully consecrated to Him, those who are desirous of knowing Him and of doing His will even unto death. We are not speaking of these, but of the other class—the mass, who are outwardly professing Christians and who compose the great majority.

The Bible speaks of these as having "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." They are walking contrary to godliness—contrary to what they would if they were true Christians, if they were living up to their professions. (2 Timothy 3: 1-5.) Now God is bringing to their knowledge their true condition. In this great "Time of Trouble," in this death struggle of the nations, He will show them that they are not in the right way. He will demonstrate to both men and angels that the Christianity of the masses has been largely an empty form, a meaningless ceremony.

God is now letting loose the winds of strife. He is letting the nations take their own course, in order to prove to themselves and to others that they are not what they claim to be, and to humble them into the dust. Thus they will be brought to realize their own helplessness and their dire need of God.—Revelation 7: 1-3.

As we look back over the past thousand years, we can see that God has been holding the peoples of earth more or less under restraint, permitting them to go only so far at any time. Otherwise they would have destroyed themselves long ago. The hearts of fallen humanity are so selfish that, had mankind been permitted to go their full length, the race would have been annihilated long before now. But God's due time has come to let loose the winds of strife, with the result that the long-expected storm has burst in fury upon the world. The trouble is spreading from nation to nation; and it looks as if ultimately every nation will become involved—surely every one which formed part of the old Roman Empire. (Daniel 2:44.) Whether the strife will extend beyond the boundaries of the Roman rule we do not know—whether it will involve America.

Minds of the People Astray.

These United States have had many advantages over other countries. Our temporal blessings have been multiplied on every hand. Nevertheless, we must confess that there is much of mere outward forms of godliness here, much of ceremony, hypocrisy, dishonesty, and crime. Great light has been given and largely ignored. Therefore it would seem that sooner or later our land may become involved in turmoil. There is much of Christian profession here, an outward form of godliness devoid of its power. Consequently it seems hardly possible that America will fail to have a full share in the judgment of the nations.

There is much restlessness amongst the people everywhere. Indeed, the whole world is becoming crazed as the angry passions of men are being stirred up against one another. In the countries at war, where the soldiers in the trenches are killing one another by the thousands—sometimes sixty thousand in one day—necessarily a hardening influence goes with this course of action. The soldiers must become more or less benumbed in their sensibilities, as a natural result. As a whole, the world to-day seems to be telling the Lord, telling His people—who are not of this world—and telling the angels—who are looking on—what their spirit really is, and demonstrating that it is not the spirit of the Lord.

It reminds us of the spirit of James and John, the two Apostles whom our Lord surnamed "Sons of Thunder," because of their courage and fiery zeal. On one occasion they wished to bring down fire from heaven to destroy the people of a little Samaritan village because the villagers had refused to sell bread to our Lord and The Twelve. But the Master reproved them, saying, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of;" that is, they had become His disciples, but had not yet realized what is the spirit of a true disciple. It was therefore no wonder that they did things contrary the Lord's spirit.—Luke 9: 51-56.

After the disciples received the begetting of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, they would not have even thought of doing such a thing; for then they received the Heavenly illumination and could discern that the spirit of Christ prompted its possessor to help others, not to destroy them. Previous to Pentecost these disciples were zealous Jews, courageous in defense of what they thought right as against wrong. And so it is now in Europe. Many are zealous, and are trying to find some good reason for what they are doing.

The leaders tell the people various things. In some cases the people are told that their liberties and the development of their country are held in check by jealous neighbors. On the other hand the people are led to think that militarism is their greatest foe and therefore must be crushed. On both sides of the question at issue the people seem to have hypnotised themselves into thinking that theirs is the righteous cause. But more and more it is being manifested that some great wrong is being promoted, that some great misconception is influencing the people.

Selfishness the Root of the Trouble.

None of these nations see what Bible students see. They do not know that the Kingdom of God is just at the door, that the Reign of Righteousness is at hand. Therefore they do not have the degree of responsibility that we have who do see. All know, however, that it is wrong to take life; and yet they are plotting both to take and to surrender life in order to hold a little more territory or to gain some commercial advantage over their rivals. Everywhere selfishness is manifest. It has kept up rivalry between the nations for centuries. It has cost them millions of dollars in the way of preparation for war, and now it is costing them millions more to fight it out—besides the appalling loss of life, etc.

Desolation and Destruction.

This great war is far from Christian. Each nation is fighting for its own selfish interests. What an impressive lesson it is for the world! How boastful the nations have been! The Lord now says, "Let loose the winds, and let the nations show what they can do." The nations are manifesting to themselves that they are not Christian, and all the world is taking knowledge of the fact. Everywhere Christian people are wondering what these current events may mean.

We are not able to foretell all that will take place; and so we leave the matter, merely knowing that the Lord has arranged to grant this great opportunity for the world to deceive themselves and to destroy themselves.

Poor humanity! Oh, that they knew what we know about God's great Plan of the Ages! that they knew about the coming Kingdom of Messiah, which is just at the doors! But as yet the knowledge is hidden from them. It is just as when our Lord Jesus wept over Israel, saying, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent to thee! How often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings; and ye would not. Behold, your House is left unto you desolate; and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me until ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of Jehovah."—Luke 13: 34, 35.

Just so now it is with these professedly Christian nations. Desolation is coming upon them even as it came upon the Jews in the end of their Age. Bible students have expected this state of affairs to develop; for the Bible long ago foretold that it would be thus in our day.

Judgment of God's People.

If then, dear friends, God is now judging those who are only nominally His people, and permitting them to demonstrate that they are not His, will He not judge also His true people? Indeed, He has been judging this class for more than eighteen hundred years, in order, that they might not come into condemnation with the world. But now, in the end of the Gospel Age, He is especially judging them; for "judgment must begin at the House of God." (1 Peter 4:17; 1 Corinthians 11: 31, 32.) We may not know all the saints in the countries at war. We do know, however, that there are some very loyal children of God there; and we sympathize deeply with them in their trials. But they are greatly blessed; for they see what we see. Notwithstanding their close contact with the trouble upon Christendom, they are lifting up their heads and rejoicing; for they realise that their redemption draweth nigh.—Luke 21: 28.

Yes, God is now judging His people. (Hebrews 10:30.) But let us not wait for Him to judge us personally. Let us see to it that we are proving faithful to Him, faithful to our responsibilities as His children. Let us examine ourselves, and correct whatever we find to be out of alignment with His instructions to us. Let us put some kind of chastisement upon ourselves in order that we shall not need to be corrected by Him, in order that we shall not be condemned with the world.

We have reached the "Time of the End," the close of the Gospel Age and the dawning of the New Dispensation, the time when the judgments of the Lord are designed to accomplish a separating work which is especially appropriate and needful at this period. Let us see to it, then, that we make our calling and election sure. "Greater is He that is with us than all they that be against us." The Lord our God is proving us, whether we love Him with all our heart and soul, and whether we are actuated by His spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love.

DON'T BE INTEMPERATE.

When you hear the word "intemperance," you are at once likely to conceive a mental picture of a man who flirts to excess with the Demon Rum—you vision the person who doesn't get home until morning, and is then in such a condition as not to know which side of the door the keyhole is on. In short, the word "intemperance" is nine times out of ten applied to over-indulgence in joy juice.

And yet, get this—it is possible for a man to become a permanent fixture on the water-waggon and still be a firm supporter of intemperance. You may be a teetotaler and at the same time intemperate.

As a disciple of intemperance, I commend you to the person who would be filled with horror at the sheer thought of risking even one eye upon the wine when it is red, but who will, nevertheless, plant his feet under the table and stow away twice as many "eats" as he requires.

He stuffs himself to the muzzle three times a day and wonders what distresses him between meals. "Sausages always make me sick," he gurgles, "but I'm gonna eat 'em if they kill me," whereupon he falls upon the sausages tooth and nail. He does not drink a drop, but his life is one continuous food debauch.

The man who can take a vacation, but never does, is intemperate. The man who sticks to the grind year after year and is a total abstainer as far as rest and recuperation is concerned is a rank intemperate and so is the man whose life is a whole loaf. To overwork, to overplay, overeat, to overrest is to be intemperate. And intemperance in these directions carries its penalty just as surely as if you were to accept Old John Barleycorn as a constant chum and companion. In fact, you would have more right to rank with the temperate ones if you were to indulge in a biweekly high-ball, (and let it go at that), or an occasional cigarette, than you now have if you live solely to eat, and three times each day are digging your grave with your teeth.

Sardined Between Two Notables.

Princess Lazarovich Hrebellanovich, the author of "Pleasures and Palaces" (Eveleigh Nash), was before her marriage Miss Eleanor Calhoun, a Californian of good family, who went to Europe, appeared on the London stage, and attained a considerable amount of social distinction. Her book contains some pleasant and interesting gossip of Victorian days. In one chapter she tells that at a crowded afternoon tea she was given a seat between Mrs. B. W. Proctor and Robert Browning. "At the names my heart thumped. I was wedged in between them. 'I surely have a lucky star,' I said. 'To think of my good fortune in being placed just here!' 'Yes,' piped the old lady merrily, 'it's nice to like one's fellow-sardines.'"

Coats Removed At Eno Trial

Surrogate Permits Lawyers and Spectators to Appear in Shirt-Sleeves.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The extreme heat led Surrogate Cohalan to suspend the usual rules of court and permit the lawyers, witnesses and spectators at the contest of the will of the late Amos F. Eno to remove their coats.

John B. Stanchfield, of counsel for the relatives of Mr. Eno, asked the Surrogate on the opening of court if the removal of his coat would offend the dignity of the Court. The Surrogate left the matter to the women present, who nodded approval, and Mr. Stanchfield fought the case throughout the day in shirtsleeves.

Mr. Eno's success in "playing the races," was again the subject of much of the testimony. Eugene Southach, real estate promoter, of No. 128 East Sixty-fourth street, told of Mr. Eno's winning $500 at the Saratoga track on a horse he had never seen before, basing his bets upon his knowledge of the horse's stable and jockey.

The calves should be handled and taught to be halter use.

It is just as important to screen cellar windows as any others, for flies and mosquitoes find their way from there to all parts of the house.

CANADA'S ANSWER TO THE GERMAN MACHINE

"Strafing" Parties and Colonial Initiative Are Marvel to British Generals Who See Canadians Fight

A Canadian correspondent describes the visit of a party of newspapermen to Canadian General Headquarters in Europe as follows: We dined with the Corps Commander of his personal staff. Several well known Canadian Generals were there and they greeted us warmly, but through all the conversation you could detect an eagerness and keenness which showed that these men who have been called from peaceful pursuits in Canada have developed in Flanders into real soldiers. They have treated war as they would have done the business they have each left at home.

There was an Imperial General who happened to be visiting our lines. He has fought in all corners of the Empire, has a score of decorations and is still vigorously aggressive. He told me Canadian officers were splendid and he thought some scheme should be completed whereby these citizen leaders from overseas should be temporarily exchanged into Imperial battalions "to teach resourcefulness." They had been quick to adapt themselves to new conditions of warfare. It was a compliment Canadians fully appreciated.

Making Canadian History

Sitting at that table were men that are making military history for Canada—not all of the men though, for battle does not hesitate for meals, and busy at their Divisional or Brigade Headquarters were others who are making, have made, their mark in this greatest of wars. The General himself, cordial and calm, chatted as if all the cares of an army corps rested lightly on his shoulders. You gathered why in the intimacy of the conversation. He was completely confident of the officers—and the men—under him. So-and-so, who commanded a division, was "a great man and a great soldier." Brigadier This, Colonel That, everyone from Atlantic to Pacific I casually questioned about, he knew, and almost every incident that had endeared them to Canada. It is in the intimate and the personal touch that lets him understand those under him and let them know they are understood.

Over on a table a telephone buzzer called. The smart aide took up the receiver and called the General. "Yes," he said, "if you're all ready. Use your own judgment. Good luck!" A friend of mine had told me of preparations completed for a large cutting-out expedition that night. That was the General's command to go ahead. He knew every little detail had been carefully thought out. He knew personally the captain who was to command, the colonel and the brigadier who had planned it, and best of all he knew intimately the Divisional Commander who was speaking to him on the 'phone.

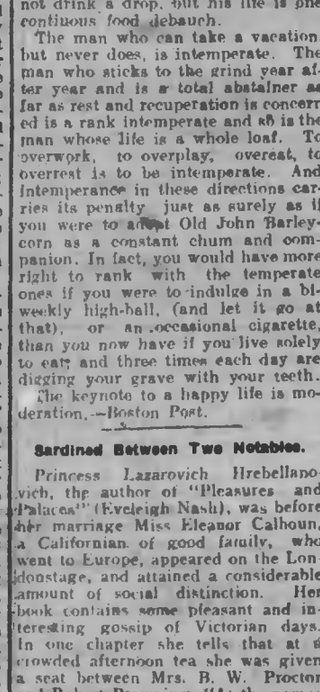
Not Like Germans

"Use your own judgment. Good luck!" If fates were for the Hun that night these officers would be ready whatever the emergency that was created. I wondered, knowing what I did, if such a conversation could take place in the over-designed German military machine which had brought on the war.

"These cutting-out expeditions which you Canadians are doing now," said the Imperial officer to me later in the evening, "are initiative's answer to super-militarism. They are man's answer to the machine." Later when I saw the competition there was in the trenches to get on these "strafing" parties I knew what it meant.

Do not leave matches in the box in which they come from the store, but put them in a glass jar with a screw top. You will then be sure that three is no danger.

Isabel Paterson



ONE thinks of Calgary mostly as a city which grew by magic, under the wand of the C. P. R., from a rancher's village to be the distributing centre of a prosperous irrigation and farming district, but Isabel Paterson, in her novel "Shadow Riders," shows it as a whirlpool of human souls, of love and passion and political intrigues. There are two heroines in the book, one of whom is a newspaper woman who edits the woman's page of a Calgary newspaper and has two jealous rivals for her affections, while the other, whose reputation has been lost in an escapade, but comes back to Alberta in Paris gowns and an icy smile, as the wife of the Lieut.-Governor, to eclipse the women who had shut her out of their society. Speaking of her novel the other day in New York, Miss Paterson said her book dealt with the social game, which formerly was women's chief sport outside of her home interests. "It still continues to be so," she says, "in many Canadian towns like Calgary and Edmonton. But it is ceasing to be so, and what has done it is—work. When woman broke through the crust of superficiality and found that being a lady socially and being a worker was equally possible she made a great discovery." Miss Paterson thinks that there is inexhaustible material in the life of the cities of the Canadian West for the novelist of to-day, and is coming back from the United States to her old home in Canada to get more local color for other books.

SCOTS LEADERS OF MEN.

Race Has Exercised Powerful Influence in United States and in Other Countries.

Wherever the Scotchman goes he becomes a leader, writes Samuel P. Orth in the Century Magazine. You hear of the Irish vote, the German vote, the Italian vote, but you hear only of Scot leadership. He has had a powerful influence on our country.

The first newspaper ever published was by a Scotchman; a Scot first won international honors for American letters; the steamboat, telephone, telegraph and electric light were devised by men of Scotch descent. The second college in our land was founded by a Scotch divine; our constitution was framed and adopted largely by the influence of two Scotch lawyers; our most majestic orator, our most willing politician, our most metaphysical statesman, our greatest diplomatist, and our greatest poet were of Scotch lineage. So of many of our business captains and railroad magnates, almost one half of our presidents and Cabinet members, judges and governors. Was there ever such a drain of leadership upon a like area?

The Scotch have not alone helped make America. They control Australia, direct New Zealand, lead Canada and rule Africa. For centuries Scot and Briton were the bitterest enemies. Edinburgh and Paris conspired against London. The union, when it finally came, was one of crowns and not of hearts. There still lurks jealousy under the surface. Write a letter to a loyal Glasgonian, address it "North Britain," and see what happens.

SHE HAD MUSIC ENOUGH.

Pianos on the instalment principle was his line. You pay one-and-six a week and torture the neighbours. As he knocked gently at one door he suddenly remembered he had been here before and received a curt refusal. his time it was different. "Oh, its you again, is it?" asked the house wife cordially. 'Come in, won't you?' Full of hope, he entered and followed her down a dimly-lighted hall. She threw open a door, and he walked in, to hear the key click sharply in the lock behind him. He was locked in a room with five children, all howling, who beat even their own records at the sight of a stranger. And the woman resumed her washing. An hour later she came to his rescue. "Now," she said sweetly, "if you still think I need more music in this house I am ready to listen to you." But he had gone before she had finished.

PRAISES AMERICA FOR WAR RELIEF

PREDICTS LEAGUE OF PEACE.

SCHOLAR WHO IS COMING HERE THINKS THIS NATION AND ENGLAND ARE ALLIES BY NATURE.

Oxford, England, July 10.—Professor Gilbert Murray, the noted Greek scholar and writer on current politics, who will spend most of the summer in America, to-day communicated the following interview to a representative of the New York Times. Since the war Professor Murray has written a great deal on the question of British foreign policy and he has recently returned from a stay in Sweden.

"No;" he said, in speaking of his coming trip. "I am not going on a will fling America lives into the bitter have merely promised to give some lectures at the Summer Conference at Columbia, but even if I were going on the political stump I would never attempt to teach your country her own business. I can imagine a patriotic American believing that his country ought, at almost any cost, to remain out of the war. I can imagine him believing that she ought immediately to plunge into the war. But I cannot imagine him deciding either to stay out or to plunge in so as to please an Englisman or a German. It is for America to determine whether she political tour in the United States; contest where we have felt bound to throw so many British lives.

"If you ask me whether I personally should like America to come into the war, I honestly hesitate. We should gain a great deal, no doubt; the war would be finished sooner. But for the moment at least there are considerations on the other side. I do not like to think of the prisoners of war in Germany deprived of American supervision, the Belgians without the Hoover commission, the starving Poles left absolutely without a ray of hope till the return of the Russians. No other neutral nation could do America's work as well as America.

"The chief reason why I myself would like to have you with us is one that will to some people seem fanciful. I would give almost anything to obliterate the memory of the two wars in which you and we have been enemies by having you as allies in this far greater war.

AMERICA AND ENGLAND.

"For we are allies. We are allies even when we quarrel. Whether you join the war or not, the fact remains that in the great issues that divide the world you and we are instinctively on the same side. Of all great nations we two are both the least military and the most adventurous; in our public policy the most kindly and the least suspicious; in our attitude toward religion, to social ideals, to the treatment of women, to questions of peace and war, we have the same habits of thought, the same convictions, and very much the same prejudices. Wherever you find a foreign critic who hates 'Americanism' you will find that he hates England, too; and wherever there is one who admires English ways of thought you will find that he idealises America.

"I know that on the surface we are constantly bickering—at least our newspapers which—which is not quite the same thing. There is always a certain amount of bickering when two nations, who are not united, use the same language. It enables them constantly to overhear, so to speak, what each says about the other. But I think that a good deal of our mutual friction arises from the common human habit of looking at small things instead of the big, at the headlines of the day, rather than the story of years. I may be old-fashioned but I confess that in my mind 'America' is still an almost magic word, the name of the great free Republic under whose flag all the oppressed of the world can find shelter, just as England is, or was till lately, the asylum of all the refugees of Europe.

"I remember the story of Mary Antin in 'The Promised Land,' how that persecuted little Jewish girl from a ghetto in the east of Europe, habituated to run straight to the nearest cellar if she saw a Christian procession in the street, got away at last to America. True she was swindled by emigration agents, she was badly 'treated on board the ship, she was half-starved in a slum in the first American town that she reached, and only saved if I remember rightly by a local boss whose politics were not of a high browed character. Such things are to be expected in a fallible world.

"But there came the great day when her schoolmistress gave a lesson on the life of George Washington, and explained to the class that they must remember through life that they were all of them George Washington's fellow-citizens. And the little Jewess suddenly realised what it meant. She dared not speak of it to her elders but at night she woke her small sister and told her. And the two little outcasts sat up in bed, the tears streaming down their cheeks, realising with wonder that they were now fellow-citizens of George Washington!

FUNDAMENTAL UNITY OF AIM.

"It recalls to me the old stories of which Englishmen in the nineteenth century used to be so proud; how the slave who once touched British soil was no longer a slave, the political refugee had no longer to fear the touch of the police. Anyone can find in both nations a thousand qualities which blur this ideal, a thousand failures and weaknesses and inconsistencies. But the deeper one's examination reaches the clearer emerges this fundamental unity of aim. We are strangled at times by the clinging roots of our old traditions and institutions; you are rather more hampered by your rapid overgrowth of modern complexities, social, racial and industrial."

Choice Recipes

ALL CHOCOLATE CAKE.

One cup of sugar creamed with 1-2 cup of butter, yolks of 2 eggs beaten well, 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Sift 1 1-2 cups (scant) of flour, 5 tablespoonfuls of cocoa and 1 teaspoon of cream of tartar and add alternatively with 3-4 cup of milk, in which dissolve 1-2 teaspoon of soda, to first mixture. Beat all well and add the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs. Bake in moderate oven 30 minutes.

Frosting.—One cup of sugar, 1 teaspoon of cocoa, 1 teaspoon of vanilla, butter size of nutmeg, hot coffee enough to spread.

BAKED BASS.

Eight good size onions chopped fine, half that quantity of bread crumbs, butter the size of a hen's egg, plenty of pepper and salt; mix thoroughly with anchovy sauce until quite red. Stuff your fish with this compound and pour the rest over it, previously sprinkling it with a little red pepper. Shad, pickerel and trout are good the same way. Tomatoes can be used instead of anchovies, and are more economical, If using them, take pork in place of butter and chop fine.

Jelly-making and preserving without the proper tools is hard work. Try to have all the utensils ready before the task is undertaken. Be sure to have a plentiful supply of new rubbers for the jars, and the jars well scalded before the fruit is put into them. The enameled ware or porcelain lined kettles should be used rather than tin, because of the action of the acids on the tin.

Have at hand all necessary spoons; silver forks for lifting the larger fruit; a large and a smaller funnel; plenty of cheese cloth for jelly bags; a colander, a gravy strainer and a wire seive. Measures and a good scale are also necessary if the work is to be done properly. Then with plenty of sugar, spices, vinegar and ripe unspoiled fruit, the putting up of summer fruit should be a pleasure and a success.

LIST OF PRESERVES.

I always keep in my kitchen an up-to-date list of all my preserves, pickles, jellies, etc. I revise this list whenever I add anything to my preserve closet, and check off each jar or bottle as it is used.

This plan saves many a trip to the cellar to take account of stock, or select the kind we had better use next.

BLACKBERRY PIE.

Pick the berries clean, rinse in cold water take up the berries by the handful, sorting out all stems. Line a buttered pie tin with a pie paste, put in the berries one inch deep, sprinkle with sugar, using about a 1-2 cup of brown sugar, sprinkle with flour, a salt spoon of salt and a little nutmeg. Put on top pastes, pressing the two crusts together around the edge, trim, cut the top for steam to escape and bake in a quick oven for 30 to 45 minutes.

BLACKBERRY PUDDING.

Three cups flour, 1 cup molasses, 1-2 cup of milk, 1 teaspoon salt, a little cloves and cinnamon, teaspoonful soda dissolved in a little of the milk, stir in a quart of Blackberries (floured) boil in a well buttered mould for two hours. Serve with brandy sauce.

CANNED BLUEBERRIES

The berries should first be thoroughly picked over and washed, then placed in a kettle with one-half cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water to each quart of the berries. Cook until each berry is done, then turn into hot jars and seal at once.

CURRANT JELLY.

Gather the fruit before it is too ripe. The first of the season, rather than the last, is the time to make currant or for that matter any jelly. Strip from the stems, removing all inperfect fruit. Wash and put over the fire in a porcelain kettle that will fit inside of another kettle full of boiling water, like a double boiler. Let them cook in this way until the skin of each currant has broken stirring now and then. Pour into a jelly bag and allow it to drain over night. In the morning, if the day is fine, put the juice on to boil; at the same time put the sugar, on to boil; at aoiw yoiwayiftwaoiyaoya ten pounds to a gallon of juice, in a pan in the oven to heat, watching it closely that it does not burn, and stirring that it may heat through. As soon as the juice is boiling briskly add the hot sugar, being careful that the former does not boil over when the sugar is added. The juice should be skimmed carefully from the beginning and allowed to boil about twenty minutes after the sugar is added. As soon as it will congeal on a spoon when held in the air, remove it from the fire and pour it into hot glasses. Do not seal until the jelly is cold.

AN IDEA FOR THE JELLY SEASON.

When straining jelly turn a kitchen chair bottom up on the edge of the table, then tie a piece of cheese cloth, doubled, on each leg of the chair. Do not allow too much fullness or sag. Place a dish big enough to hold the juice under the bag, on the chair seat. pour the hot fruit into the bag; cover with a thin cloth, and leave all night to drain.

PRESERVING FRUIT. WITHOUT SUGAR

THE RECIPE

The fruit is prepared in the ordinary way, the jars are cleaned and scalded while the rubbers and tops are boiling. The fruit is then placed in jars, in which COLD water is placed. When the jars have been sealed air-tight they are placed in a boiler filled with cold water and brought to a boiling point. Berries will do if removed when the boiling point is reached, while large fruits, such as peaches, cherries, plums and apricots, should get 20 to 30 minutes boiling. Keep cover of wash boiler on tight.

There are those who imagine that if they do not have their three regular meals a day they will perish. The majority of people eat too much; with them eating is a habit. If they miss one meal they are totally incapacitated until the next meal comes around. It is these people who should miss a meal occasionally; they should cultivate a certain amount of indifference to their meals, and the results will be that their minds will be clearer and their physical condition better.

"Full inside!" said the lady conductor firmly as the passengers tried to storm her omnibus. But one determined looking business girl dodged the outspread arm and clung wildly to a strap as the vehicle started. With a lurch the omnibus swung around the corner, and with a scream the strap-hanging damsel collapsed into the lap of a stout old gentleman in the corner seat. She apologised most profusely. But that 'bus lurched three times, and each time she did it again. At the third occurrence as she struggled to regain her feet, the stout man said, with a twinkle in his eye—"Excuse me, miss, but hadn't you better stay here?"

For treacle oven scones rub 1 oz. of butter or lard into 1-2 lb. of flour; add two teaspoonfuls of soft sugar, one teaspoonful of ground ginger and cinnamon, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of baking soda, and one teaspooful of treacle. Mix with a little buttermilk, not too moist. Bake in a moderate oven 15 minutes. They are lovely when kept a day or two in a tin.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

When a woman buys a dress ready made oftener than not it is because the price fits the purse. Again it may be because she has not the confidence in her ability to follow the guidance of a pattern. Whatever the reason, such purchases is always most expensive, for the discontent about the choice will last until a dress can be got that suits the style of the individual.

The most satisfactory way to go about adding a new dress to the wardrobe is to look over patterns that are designed according to correct fashion foresight, and then select the material, because the pattern chart tells plainly the yardage needed and explains how easy it is to follow the pattern.

In the illustration No. 7,827 we show a dress that will be becoming to most figures and one that allows of little changes in the trimming effect to suit the individual taste. Take the vest front of self material; it may be a jabot of anything you like instead, or the overblouse effect may be given by extending the fronts in curved outline rather than straight, and so on.

It has the best features necessary in a garment for practical wear, and may be transformed quickly into one for better wear. The collar and cuffs are of edging that has been mitred; to match these a square piece is added at the neck. The skirt, in five gores, is on the most graceful lines. The closing is at the left side of the front.

The pattern of No. 7,827 is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 6 yards of 36 inch goods—if with a nap—6¼ yards without.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Big Successes For The British and Russians

CZAR'S TROOPS CAPTURE 13,000 PRISONERS

GENERAL HAIG'S TROOPS FIGHT THEIR WAY TO THE EDGE OF MARTINPUICH

Storm and Capture German Positions on a Front of 1500 Yards in a Continuation of the Steady Drive North of the Somme---Germans Admit Success of the British---Russians Force Germans in Volhynia to Withdraw Behind the River Lipa---13,000 Prisoners Taken

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 17.—British troops stormed and captured German second line positions on a front of 1,500 yards in a continuation of the steady drive nort of the Somme, Gen. Haig reported this afternoon. The advance was made northwest of Bazentin Le Petit Woods, which is now in the hands of the British, and pressed the British line forward to the very edges of Martinpuich village, one of the German strongholds defending Bapaume.

PARIS (French Official Communique), July 17.—Russian troops in action on the French Champagne front counter-attacked successfully last night inflicting heavy losses on the Germans, the War Office stated to-day. There has been no important fighting in the region of the Somme.

The French continue to make progress west of Fleury on the Verdun front, capturing three machine guns.

In Lorraine two German attacks against French positions southeast of Nomeny were repulsed.

LONDON, July 17. — England's expenditures have not reached a total of thirty million dollars daily the Chancellor of the exchequer informed the House of Commons this afternoon.

Berlin Admits The Success Of British

BERLIN, July 17.—British troops have penetrated Ovillars Wood in the resumption of the great Allied offensive, the War Office reported this afternoon. South of the Somme lively fighting is going on between Germans and French troops south of the village of Biaches, west of Peronne. The War Office reported considerable artillerying on the whole Somme front.

13,000 Prisoners Taken By Russians

PETROGRAD, July 17.—About 13,000 prisoners were captured by the Russians in Sunday's fighting in Volhynia, the War Office announced today. The prisoners include 314 officers and 12,637 men. The Russians captured 30 guns, a great number of machine guns and other material.

Germans Withdraw Across Lipa River

BERLIN, July 17.—German troops opposing the Russian advance in Volhynia have withdrawn behind the River Lipa sixty miles northest of Lemberg, it was officially admitted this afternoon.

The retirement was made in order to shorten the German line, the War Office stated, and was effected without hindrance from the enemy.

A Russian attack southwest of Lutsk fortress was checked.

COPENHAGEN, July 17.—Some German newspapers arriving here suggest that a truce be arranged so that German soldiers may go home to vote in the new Reichstag elections. It is believed in Copenhagen that such action would result in the return of a peace Reichstag.

PAPERS RALLY TO VON HOLLWEG'S SUPPORT

BERLIN, July 17.—Leading German newspapers are now rallying to the support of Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, who has been under attack by the advocates of unrestricted submarining. The Cologne Gazette and other leading journals are outspoken in their faith in Von Bethmann-Hollweg. They declare it would be an insane move to "swap horses in the middle of the stream." All the critics believe that the British will be unable to recover from the early failure to make great headway, though it is realised that the fighting is not over. The Cologne Gazette points out, for instance, that the British have huge reserves in Flanders, enabling them to attack continually with fresh troops.

Sergt. Griffin Is Wounded

Peterborough Soldier With the 2nd Battalion Invalided to England

Sergt. Thos. Griffin, who left Peterborough with the 2nd Battalion, C. E. F., and spent fifteen months in the trenches, has been invalided to England according to letters received by his father, Mr. Wm. Thos. Griffin, 871 Burnham street.

In one letter Sergt. Griffin says:

"I got a piece of shell in my foot during a little scrap we had last Tuesday morning at 1 a.m. It is nothing serious, so don't worry. I will soon be on my feet again. I arrived here (No. 11 General Hospital, France), Tuesday night. So you can see they hustle a bit out here. We came some of the way by auto, and then by train. I guess you have seen in the papers all about our little affair. It was a little warm up there. They very nearly got through, but we managed to push them back, but not all the way. Still I guess they lost quite a few. They attacked us five times up to when I came away. You always know when they are going to do anything. They send up double red rockets all along the front, then hundreds of star shells, which make it as light as day. It looks like a fireworks display. They let you have the shells and machine guns. It's all right in a way, but very hard for the nerves."

Later Sergt Griffin writes:

"Well, dear, I was put in front of a board and they sent me to England. I arrived here at Folkstone Sunday night, and then went in front of two more medical boards on Monday. They were going to send me to Canada, but I didn't want to go over yet awhile. I asked them to give me a leave as my family were here. Then they asked me if I thought I could do light work after I had had a leave. I said "I guess I could." So they gave me three weeks' leave. I have to use a stick and my back isn't up to much and if I had been sent to Canada I wouldn't have been able to do any work for quite a while, so—I thought if I stopped over here I could do something at the base. The doctors were quite surprised at me being in the trenches fifteen month and escaping all that time."

LIGHTNING TORE A HOLE THROUGH A WOMAN'S BOOT

Mrs. Nora Switzer, of Smith, the Central Figure in a Queer Prank of the Electrical Fluid—Her Foot Was Burned, But Otherwise She Was Uninjured

HER SON-IN-LAW 'SHOCKED'

The curious pranks that lightning sometimes plays were illustrated in a spectacular manner during yesterday afternoon's storm, when a bolt struck the house of Mr. T. E. McMullen, on the second line of Smith, and seemed to explode in the midst of the dining room where five people were sitting. Mr. McMullen's mother-in-law, Mrs. Nora Switzer, had a miraculous escape. The bolt apparently struck the floor, between her and her son-in-law, and the current passed along the floor, ripping zig-zag holes in the linoleum, until it reached Mrs. Switzer's right boot. The current tore its way through the boot, leaving a ragged hole on each side and scorching the sole of Mrs. Switzer's foot. Then the fluid struck her other boot, tearing the outside slightly. Mr. McMullen also received his share of the current, his legs being temporarily numbed from the knees down. Otherwise the two were uninjured, as were the other three people in the room. Before entering the dining-room the bolt tore a number of bricks from the chimney, and broke a window and knocked some plaster off the walls, upstairs. The dining-room was filled with smoke from the blast, but fortunately, the house did not take fire.

Mrs. Switzer is feeling no ill effects to-day with the exception of her burned foot.

BUYING HORSES FOR THE FRENCH ARMY

From 100 to 200 horses a week are sought for the French Government by Mr. D. J. Ahern, who has been commissioned to secure them for war purposes. He is assisted by Mr. L. Green and Mr. T. Cruikshank, both of whom are widely known locally, and they hope to secure all the horses needed. The examination of them is not exacting and in fact a liberal inspection is promised. Mr. Ahern stated that these horses are wanted for artillery, cavalry and other purposes with the French army, and the purchasing commission remains in force for the entire period of the war. Peterborough, Montreal and Toronto are the purchasing centres and shipments will be made weekly from this city.

Nearly A Trip To Davy's Locker

What came near being a drowning accident occurred at Little Lake yesterday afternoon, when several local young men in order to convince themselves that a cool spot could be found in Peterborough, decided to spend the day swimming around the boom. Mr. Tim Collins, Perry street, who had been sitting on the boom a trifle too long under the rays of a strong sun, on plunging into the cool water of the lake, suddenly lost control of his limbs and had sunk below the surface of the water, when he was seized by a couple of his swimming mates and landed on the boom, where he soon revived.

The biggest lesson that the world ought to learn from the war is how not to let it happen again.

93rd BATTALION IS GRATEFUL TO CITIZENS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With the departure of our Battalion in view it seems to me that the citizens of Peterborough should know with what grateful appreciation all ranks look back to the many generous kindnesses experienced at the hands of the citizens of our well-loved home city.

Going through the regiment I constantly hear such remarks as "How well Peterborough did treat us!" or "We certainly did have an enjoyable winter in the old town."

Particular mention is often made of the social evenings given by the different church and patriotic societies.

The huge Recreation Tent gave great and all too short satisfaction, serving both as a dining and concert hall. The Victrola could not be unpacked, but will cheer many an hour in England.

The Regimental Fund has been a most necessary and valuable asset, enabling us to alleviate unexpected difficulties and to provide additional comforts for our men.

Altogether we feel ourselves to be a highly privileged regiment, permeated with the spirit of optimism and good cheer, and enjoying the warm interest and strong support of the city which we shall strive in some degree worthily to represent.

Yours truly,

J. C. DAVIDSON, Chaplain.

NEW BATTALION WILL BE AUTHORIZED FOR PETERBOROUGH

Deputation Received This Promise From Sir Sam Hughes on Saturday---Extent of Recruiting Area Has Not Yet Been Decided---Strong Petition Submitted for the Appointment of Lt.-Col. Walker as Commanding Officer---To-day's General Military News

Sir Sam Hughes snatched a few minutes from a busy afternoon in Lindsay on Saturday to reassure Mayor Duffus and City Clerk Armstrong that a new battalion had been authorized for Peterborough and that there remained only its official announcement. Not only will this city be headquarters for a new infantry unit, but the Minister of Militia intimated that Col. Walker was being considered for the position of commanding officer. He made no definite statement in regard to the appointment, but the Mayor presented him with the city's petition offering to recruit another battalion from this county and proposing Col. Walker as a unanimous choice for its commander.

General Hughes travelled on high speed during his Lindsay visit. He apparently had a bulky list of engagements, and considerable private business demanded his attention. As a result, the appointment at his home with the Peterborough deputation after the function at the arsenal was entirely upset by the unavoidable protraction of the public proceedings, and the plans of the men from Peterborough seemed hopelessly undone. However, Mayor Duffus and Mr. S. R. Armstrong hurried to the station and were fortunate in securing a ten-minute interview. The Mayor stated this morning that General Hughes cordialy greeted them, and gave the assurance that Peterborough's offer was being accepted. At the same time he made enquiry into various matters concerning a new battalion, and the recruiting possibilities. Mayor Duffus remarked to The Examiner that he was personally highly pleased with the results of the interview, but he regretted that the circumstances of the afternoon prevented the entire deputation from meetoing the Minister.

Friends of the Peterborough boys who went overseas lately with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, will be interested in learning that the draft is now with the Reserve Seige Battery, Roffey Camp, Horsham, Sussex, Eng.

Sergt. Wm. Stanley has been appointed recruiting sergeant for the 238th Forestry Battalion. A number of local men have already signed up with the battalion.

BELLEVILLE, July 16.—Captain E. D. O'Flynn of one of the infantry battalions of the First Canadian Contingent, who suffered from shell-shock at Ypres in June, and was the last remaining of the original officers of this unit, was given a grand reception on his arival here on furlough on Saturday afternoon. Thousands of citizens were at the G. T. R. station to welcome him, and many decorated cars joined in the procession along Front and Bridge streets to the home of the Captain's parents. As the Captain stepped from the car in front of his home he was cheered. He ascended to the balcony and addressed a few words of appreciation to the citizens. Mayor Kitcheson thanked the public for the reception to the returned officer, and declared that nothing that Belleville had was too good for Captain O'Flynn. Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, father of the soldier, expressed his gratitude to the citizens of Belleville for their kindness to his son. The gathering broke up with cheers for Captain O'Flynn's mother.

Captain O'Flynn has been on active service since the first week in August, 1914. At time of enlistment he was an Alderman of the city. He is a lawyer by profession. He has gone through every engagement of note with the Canadians from February, 1915, to June, 1916.

RECRUITING CONFERENCE.

Kingston, July 15.—At the recruiting conference held here yesterday afternoon conscription was strongly advocated by several of the speakers, but after considerable discussion a resolution in favour of local registration was passed. The resolution was moved by Capt. Campbell of the 146th, and seconded by Lt.-Col. Watt of the 240th, and was carried. It read as follows:

"Whereas the Government of Canada has asked this Military District No. 3 to contribute 48,000 of the 500,000 men needed, and we have now contributed about 36,000 of that number, leaving a balance of 12,000 men yet to be raised, and the government have not yet expressed a willingness to enact any form of conscriptive legislation; We, a conference of military and civilian citizens representing Military District No. 3, hereby desire to place on record our deep appreciation of the splendid services of the Honourable the Minister of Militia, Sir Sam Hughes and to assure him of our loyal support in this hour of the Empire's need, and further, we wish to express our deep conviction that the desired number of men from this District can be secured, by the inauguration of a strong and representative organization.

We therefore, recommend, and do hereby reserve that immediate steps be taken to place the work of recruiting on a thoroughly organized basis under a staff of competent military and business men and that the chief recruiting officer of the district be given every facility to accomplish this work.

That a canvas be made of all males of military age for the purpose of ascertaining: The non-eligible men who shall be provided with a button with registered number showing the cause of such exemption; the eligible men who can then be systematically canvassed with a view to enlistment.

"That for the purpose of recruiting and in the interests both of economy and efficiency the whole Military District be divided into a number of smaller districts, each under a competent staff, who shall be held responsible for recruiting for all branches of the service, and who shall be immediately responsible to the Chief Recruiting Officer and under his direct supervision.

"That for the strong moral and other effect the women be given every facility to organize "Women's Emergency Corps," and we recommend that a button be furnished them which will serve as a badge of membership. The general supervision of which shall be under the Chief Recruiting Officer of the district."

British Hold All Of The Ground Gained

General Haig's Forces, in Pushing Foe Back to Third Line, Advance Four Miles Beyond the Origi na Teuton Trenches

2000 PRISONERS TAKEN

LONDON, July 16.—Exhausted by the desperate fighting of the days the German and British troops on the Somme are resting on their arms tonight. In the lull which has followed what correspondents at the front describe as the fiercest fighting of the war, the British are consolidating their new positions north of the Bazentin-Longueval line and are bringing up their heavy artillery preparatory to resuming the great drive toward Peronne.

FOE ADMITS REVERSE.

The British offensive was resumed Saturday and the advance of their thrust reached the third line of the German defences north of the Somme.

Berlin officially admitted that General Sir Douglas Haig's forces had gained some ground, and that they had occupied Trones Wood. The German resistance has been stubborn but the British were able, thus far, to retain the positions won.

General Haig's men, in pushing the Germans back to their third line of defence, advanced four miles beyond the original German lines as they existed at the beginning of the offensive on July 1 in the Fricourt-Mametz sector.

2,000 Men Captured.

The force of the renewed British drive is shown not only in the ground gained but in the number of prisoners captured. London reports the taking on Saturday of more than 2,000 Germans, the total since the start of the offensive now being in excess of 10,000.

In the course of the operations, the correspondent adds, detachments of the Dragoon Guards and the Deccan Horse (a crack Indian cavalry command) went into action. They charged an enemy position, killing sixteen and capturing thirty-four. The operation was small, but it was the first time that cavalry was employed as such since the early stages of the war.

GOOD WEATHER CONDITIONS.

A despatch from British Headquarters in France says: Continuing their offensive, the British, who broke through the German second line of defence, now have taken all of Delville Wood, which was stormed by the South Africans, and the High Wood, establishing themselves beyond Bazentin-le-Petit, advanced parties having been to the outskirts of Martinpuich, Pozieres and some other points close to the third German line of defence. The weather remains dry and warm.

The operations were more in the nature of open fighting the Germans using strong points on favourable ground which were good machine positions to gain time in rallying reinforcements which arrive and dig new trenches, while the British dig in opposite them with each stage of their advance. Frequently they are so near each other that neither side dares use its guns.

WOODED POSITIONS IMPORTANT.

Possession of stretches of woodland becomes as important as that of villages. The German defenders of Trones Wood had orders to stand by the last man, and the orders virtually were obeyed. Cases have been numerous in the woods fighting where Briton and German have been pierced by each other's bayonet. It is amazing that in the thick of the struggle at all points stretcher bearers manage to bring out the wounded.

The Germans are keeping up a heavy volume of artillery fire in answer to the British, indicating the arrival of fresh artillery. British guns were able to-day to reach the main road of Martinpuich, which was

GOOD-BYE TO THE FAMOUS ROSS RIFLE OTTAWA ANNOUNCES

Will Be Gradually Discarded as a Service Rifle and Replaced By An Improved Form of the Lee-Enfield Arm

TO BE MADE IN CANADA

OTTAWA, July 16. — Canadian troops at the front are being re-armed with the new British Enfield rifle, and which is now being manufactured both in Great Britain and in the United States by the hundreds of thousands, has been adopted as the uniform service rifle of all the British troops. The Ross rifle, about which there has been so much criticism, will be gradually discarded for all Canadian troops as a service rifle, and the new rifle substituted as it becomes available. The new weapon has a shorter barrel than the Ross rifle, making it more serviceable for trench work. It is of smaller bore than either the Ross or the present Lee-Enfield, but the bore on the new rifle can be easily enlarged to take the present size ammunition until new stocks of ammunition are ready.

A "Hybrid" Rifle.

Sir Sam Hughes, in commenting on the change, said that the new rifle embodied some of the points of the Ross rifle, and had been adopted after long experiments. The Ross rifle factory at Quebec is being furnished with the new gauges, and the present machinery can be easily adapted to manufacturing the improved Enfield.

Just what will be done with the hundreds of thousands of Ross rifles now on hand is not stated. They can be used by the troops in training, but all troops at the front are now being served with the new rifle, and all troops going to the front will replace the Ross rifle with the Enfield.

No information is yet available as to the result of the test of the Ross rifle which the Canadian Government asked Sir Douglass Haig to make last spring.

Everybody Loves Mary Pickford

At the Empire To-day, To-morrow and Wednesday in "The Foundling"—A Drama of Smiles and Tears

Cast of Characters:

Molly O. ..... Mary Pickford
David King .. Edward Martindell
Mrs. Grimes .... Maggie Weston
Jennie ..... Mildred Morris
Julia Ember ..... Marcia Harris

Review.

As "The Foundling," one of the most sweetly pathetic characters she has ever impersonated on the screen, the incomparable Mary Pickford surpasses herself! The foundling is the daughter of a struggling artist, at whose birth her mother dies. Because of his wonderful love for his wife the artist hates the child that caused her death, and gives the baby girl to a mothering heart who cares for it. The Tragedy of his wife's death brings to the artist the master touch he has so long sought, and in the years that follow he wins fame and fortune; but in the sunset of life he realizes its emptiness and futility, and yearns for the return of the child he had driven from his heart. She in the meantime has drifted through a strange and varying life. How the threads of destiny unite these parted souls, bringing to each its first genuine happiness, is absorbingly unfolded in this unique photoplay.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Kaiser should dig up a few Iron Crosses for the spies who told him that the British colonies would fall away from the Empire when the war began. Yesterday the cables told the world that the South African forces had made a brilliant attack in the fighting on the western front.

ENGLAND'S CROWN OF VICTORY.

Washington Herald: Not a mistake was made; the greatest of all battles on the water was fought as it should have been fought by British sailors true to their country's traditions. Jellicoe pays the most generous tribute a brave man can pay to a brave foe, but nothing that may be written in history can rob England and her sailors of the crown of victory in the greatest naval battle the world has ever seen to the present day.

SIR SAM TO BLAME.

If discipline among the Canadian soldiers has suffered because of the outbreak in Camp Borden, no one has less right to complain than the Minister of Militia, who has not hesitated to rebuke and humiliate commanding officers in the presence of their men as if he had no respect for any authority but that exercised by himself. One of the things the Minister of Militia seems to forget is that he is also a responsible servant of the people of Canada; and that is just one of the things he must not be allowed to forget. It should not be the duty of the men who have put on the Kings uniform to remind him of his position; but if they did wrong, there were certainly extenuating circumstances. — Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

LORD HALDANE AND THE DUKE.

The rudeness of the rebuke to Lord Haldane when, after a long silence, he rose in the upper chamber of the British Parliament to speak on a subject, educational reform, upon which he is a recognized authority throughout the world, will arouse sympathy with him in other countries besides his own. Indeed, it is doubtful, even with the present high-wrought feeling in England, if Englishmen generally, with their love of fair play, which even the sense of great disasters cannot change, will aprove of the treatment accorded to a fellow-countryman has filled, with suitable dignity, the office of Lord High Chamberlain and lent new lustre to the fame of British scholarship. Lord Haldane is under suspicion of having led the Germans to believe that Great Britain would not be drawn into a war with them, but it is incredible that he should have been thought guilty of disloyalty. A very distinguished American statesman is charged with having deceived German Government officers as to the actual meaning of a certain official communication the meaning of which was exactly expressed in its text.

Lord Haldane's resemblance to Mr. Bryan, however, is remote. Both are temperamentally unfitted to serve their country in high diplomatic offices in a perilous crisis. That is all. Haldane is a scholar and a thinker, and though he is probably not a pacifist, in the sense in which we are compelled to use that word on this side of the Atlantic, the thought of war between England and Germany was repugnant to him. In this he was not alone in Great Britain two years ago. It is not to be assumed that because he was a student at Gottingen in his young manhood, has devoted much of his time to the study of German literature and philosophy, and is one of the translators of Schopenhauer, that he is so strong a sympathizer with Germany as to be disloyal to his own country in its hour of trial. His punishment for his lack of foresight and his error of statesmanship has been severe.

The rebuke to Lord Haldane was delivered in a rotund manner by another Scot. The existence of the Duke of Buccleuch is known to everybody who has visited London, as his palace on the Thames Embankment is one of the landmarks. He is not given to public speaking, though it must be said that he made himself understood. But it is gratifying to learn that Haldane's dignified reply to the "ducal insult," as The London Daily News calls it, was cordially cheered. Lord Haldane is not yet out of British public life, if he is temporarily out of politics. Moreover, it is no small honour to be insulted by a Duke.—New York Times.

OUR MENTAL ATTITUDE.

All the warring nations have appealed to Heaven as their judge that they were not the cause of this great war, and they have each in turn asked God's help in the struggle, and thanked Him when victory crowned their efforts. The Emperor of Germany has even struck up an alliance with the Almighty, and to all intents and purposes has made Him an ally of his own and consequently an enemy of Germany's enemies. It is but natural that men should turn to the Almighty in such times of stress and that even the aggressor should so delude himself as to believe that Providence was on his side. We can even pity the Kaiser's aberration of mind in this respect.

We are told that the people of France and Russia have become more serious minded, and that their thoughts, in view of the carnage around them, dwell more on spiritual things. We imagine that the same is true of the people of the old country. Admiral Beatty, after one of his naval victories, when the people were rejoicing, wrote an appeal, intended for them, declaring that God had surely some other purpose in this war than mere horrible carnage, and that real victory would not come until there was a revival of religion. We cannot honestly say that we observe much change in the mental attitude of the Canadian people on account of the war. That may be because of the distance of the scene of struggle from our shores.

Be that as it may, the Canadian Churchman has published a letter signed by the Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist ministers in Brockville, appealing to the people for a better observance of the Lord's Day. In their letter they say:

Nero's fiddling while Rome was burning has always been considered the very acme of heartless selfishness and riotous abandon; but if our people can shout, "On with the dance; let joy be unconfined," when the nation is in peril, we can only conclude that the spirit of Nero is not yet departed from the world. We should walk soberly and humbly these days, when hundreds of thousands of our fellows are sacrificing their lives for us, our nation, our rights and our privileges. They are bleeding to death on the plains of Europe, and still others are called to follow them, and we do not yet see the end. Surely, when our beloved are falling and we are surrounded by hearts bowed down in sorrow or in fear, it ill becomes us to rush after pleasure and amusement as if there were no lonely hearts to cherish.

The letter adds: "When the Imperial Parliament is seriously considering the necessity of prohibiting motoring for pleasure on any day, our people, who are fortunate enough to have cars or motor boats should at least refrain from making Sunday a day for touring or boating and the burning up of money that might be better spent." The appeal is worth listening to. Canada is passing through perilous times. The angel of death is knocking at the door of many a home these days, and in this war it is taking the young, the fit and the brave—those most needed, and passing by the weak, the helpless and the aged. If we are ever to be soberminded in the presence of death and of the great and serious problems that confront us now is the time.

CALLS RUSSIA PROSPEROUS.

NEW YORK, July 15. — Henry D. Baker, commercial attache of the American Embassy at Petrograd, was one of the passengers arriving yesterday by the Christiansfjord. Mr. Baker said that notwithstanding the war there was an underlying condition of great prosperity in Russia, as evidenced by advancing wages and by enormous gains in the savings of the people.

"The country is much hampered by lack of adequate transportation equipment, but large orders which have been placed for American cars and locomotives should soon relieve the strain and make possible a much larger outside trade," he said.

"At present the railway to Archangel is practically limited to Government freight, but as this railway, which has just been converted to broad gauge, has now a much greater carrying capacity than formerly, it is anticipated that it will soon be possible to transport private goods over the same.

"Two important facts may be pointed out, and American business firm interested in Russia may draw their own conclusions: First, stocks of goods were never so low as now, and second, accumulations of savings were never so high as now. The low stocks of goods are due chiefly to the difficulty of arranging transport, war orders having preferential treatment. The accumulation of savings is due chiefly to the abolition of vodka, which has had far-reaching economic effects, but only in preventing a waste of savings, but in improving the efficiency of industry. In many industrial and agricultural communities in Russia there has been a most amazing gain in savings since the war started— sometimes up to 1,000 per cent.

"When the war is over, or when the transportation difficulties are surmounted, the long pent-up accumulation of buying power should result in a flood of orders for goods of all kinds from the United States. Almost any American article will now sell in Russia at good prices, provided such goods are already in the country, but it is very difficult to get goods there except what the Russian Government itself requires and will take care of.

"I am firmly convinced that the Russian Empire will develop after the war into the greatest consuming market of the world. There are about 170,000,000 people in Russia, most of them with steadily improving standards of living and increasing savings. It only takes a slightly increased expenditure on imports per head of population to make the aggregate gain enormous; but it is evident that the increased expenditures per head will be very big. While American firms may find conditions in Russia difficult at present—yet if they will prepare themselves for the future they should reap a great reward when the war is over.

RUSSIAN PRAISE FOR CANADIANS IN THE TRENCHES

The London Morning Post publishes the following by Nemirovitch-Danchenko, the famous Russian novelist, who paid a visit to the Western front:

"Cold and snow. The train from London moves through a fog. The towns on the way clustering around the beautiful cathedrals look hazy and murky, as if penciled in gloom. At one place the sun flashes at one of them and it seems as if some stony arms had lifted up heavenward the stony tables of the medieval portal. In the distance there is the gray line of the sea. To-day it is motionless. One expects all sorts of nasty things from this quarter, but to-day the Channel looks homely and submissive.

"The train goes right into the harbour and our boat looks a real beehive; gray khaki everywhere. It looks as if it will be impossible for us to get through the thick lines of Canadian infantry. They have splendid faces, these Canadians, with a sincere and happy look. I saw them afterwards at the front, after an ordeal of forty-eight hours' stay in flooded trenches; they wore the same expression. One could see the stuff they were made of, the race that is used to relentless fighting with nature and can stand cold and hardships of which we, in the Old World, can form no idea.

"The Canadians are excellent shots and walkers; our Siberian fellows, who take aim and shoot a hare through the eye, resemble them. Our chaps, however, are sombre. The quiet of the Siberian forest has made them taciturn. The Canadians, on the contrary, have the joy of life in them. They are calm and steadfast in action. They wavered at first under the heavy German fire, but now they form an iron wall which no fire of the enemy can break. The best quality of the Canadian soldier is calmness in attacks. He is not hasty, and therefore wastes no energy.

"The relations between officers and men are touchingly simple and cordial. The officers behave like senior comrades. They share with the men the hardships of trench life. The Canadians feed well and are well dressed. Where the Canadians are stationed the Germans have no peace day or night. The enemy has to look sharp, because in spite of all wire entanglements the Canadians crawl right up to the enemy's trenches, pouring down a shower of bombs, and organize little expeditions reminding one of the times of Fenimore Cooper.

"Large piers, numerous boats and warships. A green waterline, and above, the white outline of a hospital ship. We could see from a distance through the windows of her cabins the luxurious and comfortable arrangements for the wounded. Only wealthy England can maintain such hospitals. The nurses were on deck assisting crippled soldiers.

"The French town which had grown bleak and damp in the sea fog received us into the cold and wet of its streets, frozen right through.

"We had a captain as our guide, who spoke excellent Russian, and Mr. Montague Balfour, who commands our language so well that one might easily take him for a Russian. Everywhere motor-cars were waiting for us. One may envy the English for the excellence of their cars. During all these days of continuous journeying along the whole front (we did at least eighty miles a day) there was not a single case of a breakage, not even one tire burst.

"The watch along the whole route is thorough. From a distance they signal to you to stop — in the daytime by means of flags and in the night with lamps. The watch comes up, inspects carefully your documents then salutes and let you pass.

"Our first excursion is to V. It is still cold and wet. Fields are covered with snow and where there is no snow there is a dull glimmer of water with which everything is soaked.

"All this stretch of line is occupied by British troops and it seems to me that I am in England. The fraternizing of the English with the local population is real. Many young men have either married French girls or will do so after the war. Some of the local "Captain Kopecks" (a type in one of Gogols novels) say: "You'll see, they have come here to stay! That is to say, they will go back to England, but not before they have carried off a good many of our beauties; that is sure enough."

"At the front nobody has the slightest doubt, but that ours will be the final victory. Wherever we went people acknowledged that the coming triumph of the Allies will be due in a considerable measure to Russia.

Afraid of Diplomacy.

"People over here are only afraid of one thing — that is diplomacy. When the war is over and the time will arrive for conversations, this 'old hag' (I am using the expression of a noted English general in London), bred under the old political conditions of the European balance of power, will do all it can to save Austria and Germany.

"When I recalled an anxious query by a Russian diplomatist as to who would be our Ambassador at the Kaiser's Court after the war, I had the same doubts that animated that spirited English general. The diplomatists have always despoiled nations of the fruit for which they have paid a heavy price in sacred blood and not less sacred labour.

"We were nearing the trenches. The snow and rain of the suddenly returned winter has covered everything with thick mud. From the trenches came out soldiers, who only yesterday looked smart, but now were covered from head to foot with dirt. There is a calm expression in their eyes, not the slightest sign of fatigue, as if their nerves were made of steel. A fresh company was going to relieve them; everything on the newcomers was spotlessly clean with the exception of their boots, a little dirty from the mud of the road, and the grave expression on the faces of those who were going in and those who had just left.

"In this sector the war is mainly subterranean. The English have burrowed the ground with passages branching them off in the direction of the German trenches. This mole work goes on for days. Very often the soldiers hear similar work by the enemy going on side by side; the ear discerns at first a vague noise, which little by little grows more distinct. Then the sappers stop, and after informing the superior command of the direction of the enemy's work, made a wide curve. It sometimes happens that one tunnel meets another from the opposite side, and then the enemies, in semi-darkness faintly illuminated by the flickering lights of little lamps, rush at one another in deadly combat.

"We were shown photographs and sketches of this kind of work. The German positions are linked up on all sides with a zigzag of communicating trenches, and at a few most important points there are black gaping craters. On one photograph five such explosions were shown. About 4,000 Germans were overtaken in the catastrophe and have found a grave. On the night after our visit to this sector three more subterranean mines were exploded, and about 1,200 Germans were killed."

ENGLAND EXTENDING DRINK EXPERIMENT

State Control at Carlisle May Offer a Solution of a Great Sociological Problem

BAD CONDITIONS TO MEET

LONDON, July 17.—Where England and Scotland meet on the west is the scene of a most interesting experiment in the State control of that "drink question," which, despite the enormous improvements witnessed since the war brought prohibitive measures, still remain one of the most important problems in British sociology. The Central Board of Liquor Control, of which Lord Abernon is chairman, is the moving spirit in this novel departure, which, should it prove successful, may furnish a complete solution of the drink problem.

It began as an experiment on a small scale—it is being continued as an experiment on a larger scale, the first results having justified the extension. The Scottish County of Annan saw the first effort toward the 'nationalization' of the drink trade. It is now being extended southward over the border into Cumberland, with Carlisle as the centre of a large area to be linked up with the Scottish district. (Excision by censor).

Between two and three months ago all the saloons and public houses and premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic liquors 'on and off' (excision by censor) were taken over by the Central Board of Control, and have since been managed by two representatives of the board with the assistance of a local advisory committee. The extension of the scheme to the Carlisle district will embrace a population which includes many thousands of casual labourers. (Excision by censor).

There can be no question as to the urgent need of reform. A local correspondent thus describes the prevailing conditions:

"Thousands of labourers, gathered from the big cities, from rural districts, from Ireland, and from the wandering life of the roads, are living in hutments or in lodgings in the towns and village of the area covered by the extended purchase scheme. Many live quietly, but others have been led by acquired habits to spend their wages—which are larger than they have ever received before — in drink. Several thousands of these workers live in Carlisle, and hundreds more flock into the city on Saturday nights. The public houses are so crowded that men literally struggle at the bars to get served, and as they mostly have the habit of mixing spirits and beer they quickly reach the condition of intoxication, with the result that in the words of a leading official in the city, 'a shocking and disgraceful state of affairs' is to be witnessed in the streets and in the station after the closing hour. As far back as February the Chief Constable reported strongly both on the excessive drunkenness and the disinclination of the publicans to provide facilities for the supply of food, and a similar complaint about the villages was made to the county magistrates about the same time.

Since then matters have grown steadily worse. The city police are handicapped because half of the force of eighty, including the youngest and and most vigorous constables, have joined the army. Nevertheless the number of convictions for drunkenness has rapidly increased.

In Carlisle alone there are 119 licensed houses and eight registered 'clubs.' Th cost of the liquor business which the Board of Control is taking over, apart from possible claims for compensation for damage to vested interests, exceeds $1,250,000.

It is computed by Leif Jones, M. P., that the direct national expenditure on drink is $2,500,000 a day, and that the indirect cost through sickness, lost time, and impaired efficiency cannot be much less. Such capital expenditure as the "nationalization" experiments of the Central Board of Control require is small by comparison with the possibilities of national economy envisaged.

SEEKS NAME FOR SEA FIGHT

British Object to Giving the Jutland Battle a Local Appellation.

The name by which the great naval battle fought recently in the North Sea will be known in history is discussed in The Military and Naval Record of Great Britain in its issue of June 24.

"What shall the battle be called?" asks The Record. It was fought off Jutland coast on May 31. The Germans have described the scene as lying between the Skaggerrak and Horn Reef. Apparently the Germans intend that it shall be known on that side of the North Sea as the Battle of the Skaggerrak. In this country it has bene variously described as the Battle of Jutland and the Battle of Horn Reef. Every one knows where Jutland is, but few atlases even indicate the position of Horn Reef. None but sailors in this country knew before this battle that such a reef existed. Another suggestion is that the action should be known as the battle of May 31. The title is hardly a happy one. We have an impression that the British fleet will settle the matter for itself, and that, whatever title it selects, will become the one which historians of the future will recognize. Naval officers have a happy knack of hitting off the situation in a phrase, and those who took part in such a memorable and historic event are in the best position to give it a title.

"To describe the action as the Battle of Horn Reef would suggest that it was, as the Admiralty's original communiques stated, merely a "naval engagement," and one of presumably no great importance. It was, however, the greatest sea battle of modern history. Not only was a larger number of ships engaged than ever before, but the action lasted from 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon of May 31 until late into the night. It consisted in effect of a series of engagements — first, the battle cruisers forced the action, and the Grand Fleet, owing to the tactics pursued by the swift ships, was able to come on the scene in time to hit out, and finally the victory was driven home by the British destroyers.

"A battle of this character deserves to be known by a fitting title. It not only robbed the enemy of many essential units—for that is beyond doubt—but unless the evidence now available proves misleading, it has robbed the Germans of any hope they may have entertained of breaking what the Kaiser has described as the 'sea tyranny' of the British fleet."

SEEDS NAME FOR SEA FIGHT

British Object to Giving the Jutland Battle a Local Appellation.

The name by which the great naval battle fought recently in the North Sea will be known in history is discussed in The Military and Naval Record of Great Britain in its issue of June 24.

"What shall the battle be called?" asks The Record. It was fought off Jutland coast on May 31. The Germans have described the scene as lying between the Skaggerrak and Horn Reef. Apparently the Germans intend that it shall be known on that side of the North Sea as the Battle of the Skaggerrak. In this country it has bene variously described as the Battle of Jutland and the Battle of Horn Reef. Every one knows where Jutland is, but few atlases even indicate the position of Horn Reef. None but sailors in this country knew before this battle that such a reef existed. Another suggestion is that the action should be known as the battle of May 31. The title is hardly a happy one. We have an impression that the British fleet will settle the matter for itself, and that, whatever title it selects, will become the one which historians of the future will recognize. Naval officers have a happy knack of hitting off the situation in a phrase, and those who took part in such a memorable and historic event are in the best position to give it a title.

"To describe the action as the Battle of Horn Reef would suggest that it was, as the Admiralty's original communiques stated, merely a "naval engagement," and one of presumably no great importance. It was, however, the greatest sea battle of modern history. Not only was a larger number of ships engaged than ever before, but the action lasted from 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon of May 31 until late into the night. It consisted in effect of a series of engagements — first, the battle cruisers forced the action, and the Grand Fleet, owing to the tactics pursued by the swift ships, was able to come on the scene in time to hit out, and finally the victory was driven home by the British destroyers.

"A battle of this character deserves to be known by a fitting title. It not only robbed the enemy of many essential units—for that is beyond doubt—but unless the evidence now available proves misleading, it has robbed the Germans of any hope they may have entertained of breaking what the Kaiser has described as the 'sea tyranny' of the British fleet."
